Appreciative letters are coming from all parts. The following is a sample:— "Kempsey.
"I gave her a trial on Saturday afternoon, and had such confidence that I took on a long trip on Sunday, which turned out to be one of the most severe tests that could be given her. On account of the gale that was blowing, the Macleay River down about Smithtown, and again at Frederickton, where the full force of the wind was encountered, the waves were like young mountains, and the rougher the wind and the water the more the little engine seemed to revel in it.
"She did everything that she was asked to, the trip altogether was about 45 miles. This I consider for a machine straight from the test bed was a very severe one, and I think that after that she will do anything I shall ever want her to do."

PEN PAINTING ON POTTERY.

Recent competitions in PEN PAINTING on POTTERY demonstrated that this fascinating art can be most successfully applied to Vases and other pieces of Earthenware, examples of which are shown in the Artists' Material Department.

THE RATHBONE POTTERY is prepared for Pen Painting. It is a clear Ivory Ground, without glaze, and with a surface suited to hold the decoration applied to it. No subsequent treatment is required; as soon as the colour is dry and hard, which takes four to seven days, the piece is finished. The Rathbone Pottery is also suitable for painting in ordinary Oil Colours with brushes, the surface retaining the colour firmly without risk of the oil spreading. This method has the advantage of drying much quicker than Pen Painting.

The oftener you see her, the better you like her. She is fresh and natural as the sunlight on green fields in some idyllic country when the heart is young. She is utterly unlike anybody else. She wins you in nice ways that she has made altogether her own. There is more wit and humour in her than in a hundred average comedians. She is true to type and true to herself—the real thing.

I'm awful fond of Sydney town,
Although I'm walking upside-down,
—That's sole to sole and toe to toe,
With friends who down old Broadway go.
The attitude is unrehearsed;
But still, as here I stand reversed,
I find these people warm and kind
As those good souls I left behind.
Oh, Sydney folks, you're sweet to be Good to a wandering girl like me.
I love to see you smile and wink.
The smiles are genuine, I think.
As for the winks—oh, people, quit,
Before you make me blush by it.

CROWNING OF THE QUEEN OF BEAUTY.
CROWNING OF THE QUEEN OF BEAUTY.
CROWNING OF THE QUEEN OF BEAUTY.

Full Ceremonial.

Considerable doubt seems to exist as to the method of procedure adopted in this contest, and as all White City events are, and always have been, run on the straightest of straight lines, a little explanation may assist my friends in properly understanding the full significance of to-night's ceremony. The competition was open to all without any restrictions. There were over 700 entries by photograph. A committee of artists was formed to choose the twenty most beautiful women from these photographs. This was done because it would have been impossible to marshall 700 ladies and ask the public to vote for them. Twenty ladies were duly selected. They appeared on Wednesday night, and the voting was fast and furious. In order that the public should realise that this competition is as far in every way as all other White City competitions have been, I threw the responsibility of this second judging on the public—a choice in which the judges [illegible] no voice. Yesterday the numbers of the seven leading beauties were published, but on a recount of votes it was found that a tie had occurred for the seventh position, and for that reason there will now be eight ladies in the final instead of seven. The final choice of the Queen devolves to-night upon the judges. In this way, dividing the responsibility of judging between the public and the judges, I feel we must arrive at a decision that cannot be criticised from the standpoint of justice.

The following ladies will take part in the final contest. Their names appear in alphabetical order, and their position in the list has no bearing on the number of votes each lady secured on Wednesday night.

MISS M. ALCIES, MISS IVY BURNHAM, MISS M. HEFFERNAN, MISS ONA LAWDERS, MISS VERA PEARCE, MISS ETHEL WARREN, MISS ALICE WEBB, MISS MAIE YORK.

All competitors must accept the judge's decision as final. Should the judges fail to agree they have power to call in an arbitrator to give the casting vote.

Excerpts from Sydney "Bulletin":—
"Evidently George Marlow made no mistake in introducing Allan Wilkie to Melbourne as a producer of poetic drama at popular prices. 'The Merchant of Venice' proves him to be an artistic manager and a scholarly actor, with a strong personality. The present performance is more interesting than some previous revivals that came more expensive to the audience. . . Wilkie's study of Shylock is the antithesis of the carroty Yiddisher whom Asche created. This is a dignified Hebrew, drawn on Irvingesque lines. . . he is convincing in most parts and picturesque always."

THREE NEW TRIANGLE PLAYS AT THE LYCEUM,

COMMENCING TO-NIGHT AT 7.30.
At 7.30
THOMAS H. INCE
GEORGE FAWCETT AND WILLARD MACK
in a Vivid 5-act Drama,
"THE CORNER."

Can you imagine such a character as David Waltham, evil genius of finance, cold and bloodless as the dollars he juggles, his greedy tentacles tightening, tightening, ever tightening over the workers' money and the workers' resources, fiendishly planning a corner in food, driving men into crime and women into shame for the sake of food and just a chance of life.

ROSCOE ARBUCKLE AND MABEL NORMAND
in a 2-act Triangle comedy,
"FATTY AND MABEL ADRIFT."

There is no waiting about it. The fun starts from the moment Fatty's rival sits on a pitch fork, until the newlyweds find their home floating out to sea and the bull-pup swims a record mile, with an urgent message for assistance.

AT 9.30,
DUSTIN FARNUM
appears in a 5-act Comedy Drama,
"THE IRON STRAIN."

As a society man, tired of most things in the city, he goes to work on the mines in Alaska, and adopts stone-age tactics to secure the mine owner's fastidious and unwilling daughter as his wife. And what does Pa do? Well, he's a man after the exile's own heart. He fears for the future if his daughter marries one of the shallow, puny society men who form her circle of acquaintances in the city. He knows the exile to be a real man, and just sits back to watch. And the result is certainly surprising.

HENDERSON AND MILITAIRE MOTOCYCLES.

4-CYLINDER. 8-12 H.P.

As the "Six" and the "Eight" are taking first place in the automobile field, so the four-cylinder is superseding the old style "twin" in the most advanced motocycle construction.

In many of the cities in America the mounted police squads, which are detailed to run down automobile speedsters, are mounted on the 4-cylinder HENDERSON. The heads of their departments are aware of the luxury of its smoothness—of its live responsiveness—of its breathless speed, and its indomitable power. They know of its steadfast dependability, and rugged strength—with a perfectly balanced motor, to avoid the harmful effects of vibrations. They have learned of those qualities which can only be gained with a perfected 4-CYLINDER power plant, and they are no longer willing to accept less.

We have sample machines on view, and will be landing regular shipments shortly. We will be pleased to forward specifications on request. We are now booking orders to arrive.

We can supply from stock New and Second-hand INDIANS, EXCELSIORS, and HARLEY-DAVIDSONS—these machines are both 1915 and 1916 models.

We carry stocks of Motor Cycle Chains, Tyres, etc., and are the recognised Experts on INDIANS.

THE GARFORD TRUCK IS BEING USED IN VARIOUS TRADES ALL OVER THE WORLD, AND WITH EXCELLENT RESULTS. IT CONTINUES TO GIVE THE GREATEST POSSIBLE SATISFACTION; IN FACT, IT HAS BEEN CONSIDERED THE MOST USEFUL MACHINE IN SERVICES THAT EMPLOY, AS PART OF THEIR PLANT, A NUMBER OF MOTOR LORRIES.

IT IS EXCEPTIONALLY EASY TO HANDLE, THE PETROL CONSUMPTION IS MODERATE, AND THE ENGINE-COOLING QUALITIES HIGHLY SATISFACTORY. ONE LARGE FIRM WHO PURCHASED A GARFORD TRUCK STATED THAT IT WAS MORE THAN WORTHY OF THE RECOMMENDATION THE SELLERS GAVE IT, AND HAD NOT COST THEM THE SLIGHTEST TROUBLE SINCE IT HAD BEEN PUT ON THE ROAD.

ANOTHER BUYER WROTE:—"YOU OUGHT TO FIND A READY MARKET FOR THESE TRUCKS, AND I SHALL BE VERY PLEASED TO RECOMMEND THEM AT ALL TIMES, SO THOROUGHLY SATISFIED AM I WITH MY PURCHASE." APPRECIATION OF USERS IS THE BEST RECOMMENDATION FOR INTENDING BUYERS.

DODGE BROTHERS MOTOR CAR.

THE CAR OF THE HOUR.

THE QUALITIES OF COMFORT, BEAUTY, INSTANTANEOUS RESPONSIVENESS, THE EASE WITH WHICH THE CAR GETS AWAY, ABUNDANCE OF POWER, STEADINESS AT HIGH SPEED, FREEDOM FROM GEAR SHIFTING, THE HIGH QUALITY OF ALL MATERIALS—ARE ALL REASONS WHY DODGE BROTHERS' MOTOR CAR HAS APPEALED SO STRONGLY TO THE PUBLIC, AND HAS BECOME THE CAR OF THE HOUR.

ALL VITAL PARTS WHICH ARE SUBJECTED TO STRAIN ARE MADE FROM CHROME VANADIUM STEEL. THE FINISH AND EQUIPMENT HAVE BEEN CARRIED TO A HIGH DEGREE OF REFINEMENT AT EVERY POINT, EVEN TO THE MINOR DETAILS. YOU CAN FEEL SURE THE CAR IS EXACTLY AS GOOD AS IT LOOKS IF YOU WILL ONLY REMEMBER THE WIDE EXPERIENCE WHICH DODGE BROTHERS HAVE HAD IN MOTOR CAR CONSTRUCTION.

THE CAR MIGHT HAVE BEAUTY WITHOUT COMFORT, OR COMFORT WITHOUT EITHER BEAUTY OR ECONOMY—BUT WHEN OWNERS FIND ALL THREE COMBINED IN A HIGH DEGREE, IT IS EASY TO UNDERSTAND THEIR EXTRAORDINARY ENTHUSIASM. COST OF MAINTENANCE, MOREOVER, IS A SOURCE OF REAL SATISFACTION TO OWNERS. CONSUMPTION OF PETROL IS LIGHT, AND THE TYRE EXPENSE REASONABLE.

MODEL 75 OVERLAND.

NEARLY 200 SOLD

SINCE THE 1st OF MARCH, 1916,

and every customer delighted with the new Model 75 "OVERLAND," and recommending it to friends.

What better proof than this can you ask of the wonderful value given in this car?

You should realise, first of all, that the new Model 75 Overland is a handsome, roomy, comfortable, and completely equipped motor car. We do not believe that any other car in Australia has all the advantages of this new Model 75 Overland at so low a price.

And when you give the matter consideration, the reason is very simple. The Overland Factory is the largest factory in the world, making standard motor cars to sell at a popular price.

While we do not make so much profit on each Overland as is made on most other cars, yet because of the very large number of Overlands we sell, averaging four per day, we can afford to sell them at the lowest possible margin of profit.

Motor-car engineering has now advanced to that point where nearly all cars are good cars; but, of course, some cars are better than others. We maintain that for value there is nothing quite so good as this new Model 75 Overland.

AN ISLAND GENTLEMAN.

THE LATE THOMAS TROOD.

(BY G. E. L., WESTBROOK.)

Mr. Thomas Trood, late acting British Vice-Consul of Samoa, and since the British military occupation Assistant Native Judge, passed away on March 23. As soon as it was known that the oldest and most respected resident of Samoa was no more, flags were immediately put at halfmast, and the whole community made ready to pay their last respects to the Grand Old Man of Samoa, and follow his remains to their last resting-place. The funeral procession left his late residence, the British Consulate, for the Apia Foreign Church, attended by the Administrator and staff, the garrison officers, civil service staff, all the white population, the High Chief Malietoa Tanumafili, and the leading chiefs, together with the Samoan pastors and many natives. The Rev. C. J. Kinnersley conducted the funeral service. It was Mr. Trood's express wish that his remains should be interred at his mausoleum at Fugalei, beside the remains of his first wife. Nearly every member of the community was present at the funeral. The German residents, a number of whom live out of town, came in many miles to attend the funeral, and those who were unable to attend sent letters of condolence to his family, together with wreaths and floral tributes.

Thomas Trood was born at Taunton, Somersetshire. He left the old country when he was five years of age, going with his parents to Sydney. His father, who died in 1850, was one of the first master printers in Sydney. After his father's death he returned to England with his mother. The vessel he went home in, the Thomas Arbuthnot, carried the first gold from Australia to England, which was subsequently shown at the first Great International Exhibition, held in Hyde Park, London, in 1851. Two years afterwards Mr. Trood returned to Sydney, and went into business in the island trade. He visited Samoa for the first time in 1857, in his own vessel, the Maid of Alicante, formerly a Mediterranean fruit ship. The remains of this vessel can still be seen at Loma Loma Harbour, Fiji, where she was wrecked some years after. This was in the days when copra was unknown, and cocoanut oil was the main export from Samoa. Going into the Penrhyn Island pearlshell trade, he engaged for a long time in a search for a "treasure island," which was said to be a veritable gold mine for pearlshell. But the search ended as many such searches have done, and Mr. Trood lost all his money.

The outcome of this voyage was that Mr. Trood returned to Samoa in 1860, a poorer, but a wiser man. He then joined the firm of Charles M'Farlane, the then leading British firm in Samoa, as head bookkeeper. There he remained for eight years, at the end of which period he went to Tongatabu to manage the business of John Caesar Godeffroy and Sohn, of Hamburg, forerunners of the D. H. and P. G., and remained in their employ for ten years. He was a resident of Tonga during the time that the Rev. Waldemar Shirley Baker worked himself up from Wesleyan missionary to be practically dictator of the Kingdom of Tonga. Although a personal friend of Shirley Baker, and his family, Mr. Trood eventually became one of his most bitter political opponents, for he, together with the other British residents, could plainly see that Shirley Baker was endeavouring to influence King George of Tonga against England, and promote in the group the influence of Germany, whose warships from time to time visited the Tongan islands. Presents were made to the King of Tonga by the German Government, and King George, under Shirley Baker's influence, made the same arrangement with Germany regarding Vavau harbour, as the United States made with Samoa regarding Pago Pago. But for the strong opposition of Mr. Trood and the British residents, Tonga stood a chance of being annexed by Germany years ago. It was quite natural that the big German firm, which Mr. Trood represented, although they fully appreciated his sterling honesty and business ability, would not approve of the political stand he was taking against Shirley Baker, which was adverse to German interests, the outcome being that Mr. Trood resigned his position, and severed his connection with the German firm.

He returned to Samoa and started in business for himself, and when the writer first arrived in Samoa in 1892 he had a business at Matafele and was doing fairly well, but, unfortunately, was burned out during the great fire at Matafele, when nearly the whole of that part of the town was destroyed by fire. He then turned his attention to other things, and shortly afterwards was appointed secretary to Herr Schmidt, president of the municipality, and held his position till the annexation of Samoa by Germany in 1900. Dr. Solf, the last president under the three Powers, was the first German Governor of Samoa. Shortly before the annexation, while Dr. Solf was still acting president, he was very much annoyed at his secretary refusing to copy some important despatches, because it happened to be Sunday, and it looked very much as if Mr. Trood would forfeit his position. Yet it was Dr. Solf who suggested to Great Britain, when it was decided that on account of the German annexation it would not be necessary to keep a full British Consular representative in Samoa, but that an acting Vice-Consul should suffice, that Mr. Thomas Trood was the best and most representative Briton in Samoa. The salary of a British Vice-Consul was very small, about a fifth of what a full Consul would be drawing. Yet Mr. Trood kept his Government well informed of what was going on, took great care in getting up his annual trade report, and religiously replied to all mercantile letters forwarded to him from British firms the world over. The old man felt it very keenly that an Acting Vice-Consul was not entitled to a salute when he visited a warship. He personally did not care about a salute, but he thought, as representatives of the other Powers received one and he received none, that it lowered British prestige in the eyes of the natives.

He was a most benevolent man, and was always willing to assist those in distress. A few weeks before he died I witnessed his signature to a document in which he leased one of his properties to a poor British family for the ridiculous sum of one shilling per year, for the term of, I believe, 99 years. If he was always poor and living from hand to mouth it was on account of his great generosity.

When the late R. L. Stevenson was found to be buried on Mr. Trood's land by mistake, he immediately presented the land to the Stevenson family for a perpetual burial ground, and at the British Consulate will be found a framed signed photo. of Robert Louis Stevenson, presented by Mrs. Stevenson, in which she acknowledges the kindness of Mr. Trood on that occasion. The old gentleman was a very methodical and great worker, and those who passed the Consulate late in the evening would see the light burning, while he himself would be sitting busily employed at his desk. He was one of the original members of the Overseas Club in Samoa, and he contributed in a very liberal manner towards the fund collected by the club for the purpose of helping the soldiers at the front. It was a remarkable sight to see in the year 1916, while the most bitter and cruel war in history is raging, 1500 people gather together irrespective of nationality or creed to follow the remains of a humble and unassuming British gentleman to their last resting place—one who during a long life had "played the game," and whose memory will always be dear to those who knew him.

Sergeant Colin F. Venn-Brown, of the Field Artillery, was given a send-off at the rooms of the Fresh Food and Ice Company, King-street, on Tuesday night by the staff and a number of the clients of Venn-Brown's Mercantile Agency. Sergeant Brown and his brother (Sergeant Bruce Venn-Brown), who is also about to proceed to the front, received presentations.

THE GERMAN.

AND HIS WAR.

(BY J. E.)

My work in Prussia happened to bring me into contact with statesmen and with military officers of varying ranks, from field marshal to lieutenant. I took care also to talk a great deal with peasants, with small shopkeepers, and with professional men. Before I lived in northern and southern Germany I thought of the Germans as a great united people, with one man as colossal figure-head and spokesman. This is quite a fanciful foreign conception, though the war has certainly done something towards making it more real. There are no "Germans." There are Prussians, who are cordially hated by the totally differing Bavarians, Saxons, and Wurtemburgians. There are Poles, whose hand is against every man's; there are Alsatians, who were becoming more contented in this generation, but whose hearts are now aflame with a passionate desire for reunion with their loved land of France; there are the Frisians and the Holsteiners, whose hearts are truly Danish; there are the Courlanders, who are real Russians; and there are innumerable Jews, who bitterly resent their treatment in the Fatherland. The German Empire has a wonderful network of railways. She needs them now. Her sons in Courland will not fight against the Russians, who are their own kin; they have to be transported to the western front. The Alsatians cannot be lined up against the French, they would be fighting their motherland; they have to be sent to the eastern frontier against the Russians. We read of great troop trains passing through a certain place in hundreds. Of course they are. What are they doing? Preventing great racial disruptions by transporting every man as far from his home as possible.

The Prussians have conquered the Bavarians, and Saxons, and Wurtemburgians, and have swallowed up the lesser folk, but the victims hate their victors. "The Prussians!" a Bavarian peasant will say. Then he will spit. "Faugh! We hate the Prussians." However, the more indolent southerners realise that Prussia can fight, and they have taken her protection. But once they realise that Prussia can be beaten, the dismemberment of the German Empire will not be a difficult matter. "We are warm-hearted, see you," a Saxon says proudly; "the Prussians are so cold, and hard, and cruel." The southern Germans certainly did not want this war. They were busy with their manufactures; the world was their market. They were happy and prosperous; now the factories stand idle. "The stupid Saxon" and "the beast of a Bavarian," as the Prussian politely calls them, are booted into action. But they are not warlike peoples, and they long to turn their swords into machines. At the beginning of the war there was much discontent and unrest. There is not so much now, as I shall presently show, but in peace time the quiet southern folk hated the military system. So, too, did the Prussian civilian. Treated always as an inferior by his military relatives, the civilian aristocrat hated his brother, "the major!" The civilian plebeian, unceremoniously thrust out of the way by Herr Major, hated him still more. "These cursed officers," a wealthy manufacturer will growl; "anyone would think they kept us, instead of our keeping them."

Now, however, they all feel that their military system has justified itself as the great weapon in what they now consider a fight for their national existence. Very many causes have contributed to this war, and one of them was the ever-growing restlessness of the different races under the Prussian dominion. Not only does Wilhelm II. reign over clashing races, but he reigns over irreconcilable castes. The lines of demarcation are very deep between the aristocrat, the professional, the merchant, and the artisan. Great gulfs are fixed between all these, but above all and through all is the military superiority. The German Emperor has used this particular caste prejudice, and fostered it for his own ends. But the great machine which he has set going is now beyond him. It is an integral part of the national life. Germans are intensely loyal to their fatherland—and to themselves. But the national feeling for the man who is King of Prussia, and, incidentally Emperor of the Federated German States, is quite another matter. Wilhelm knows this perfectly, and has tried to justify his position, and make it more secure by his rabid adherence to the policy of "Deutschland uber alles." But the men of the German Empire know their ruler very well indeed, and judge him unsparingly.

The Socialist menace is a very real one, and is another cause of the present war. The military leaders openly announced that the only cure for the growing Socialist unrest was "a little blood-letting." Socialists are recruited chiefly from the working classes, but the average University student usually dabbles in Socialism. The aristocrat does not attend a university. There is nothing approaching Oxford or Cambridge in Germany. I know a country village in Northern Germany. The owner of it owns the inhabitants, body, soul, and spirit. He has one vote for Parliament, his nominee has one vote, the manhood of the village (numbering about 50) can elect a representative who has one vote. This particular landlord is a wise and just man, and his people know it. He nominates his secretary, and the village men elect the secretary as their nominee also. If they did not the landlord would still have two votes to their one. The Conservatives organise a vigorous campaign to explain to the people how well they are governed, but Hans is apathetic in the country, and is openly rebellious in the town. German statesmen who were far-seeing have long regarded this crisis as the lesser of two evils—a foreign war or serious internal dissensions. The people were beginning to chafe at the utter absence of all political power and of their inability to influence in any way the taxation which presses so heavily upon them. The poorest maid servant, earning a pittance and helping to support her mother, pays municipal as well as Government taxes. The income tax begins on an income of £45 per annum. It is then 6s. It rises until on an income of £1575 it is £48. I am counting a mark as a shilling. It used to be a little more than 11½d. It is characteristic of the German that a mark is his highest money unit—not coin, but standard of reckoning. We say a man has an income of £1500 a year. The German remarks with bated breath that So and So has 30,525 marks yearly. It sounds much more, doesn't it?

Wages are very low. Shearers may be interested to know that the shearing rate is 2½d a sheep, and the shearer, a woman, finds her own food. Saxon women are considered the best shearers, and they travel about in groups of three or four in Northern Germany. The sheep are brought into an empty barn, where they are to be shorn, with their front legs tied together, and their back legs also. The women sit on the floor and clip quietly away, doing 3 or 4 a day. Extremes of poverty and wealth are seen everywhere. The rich German drives or motors down the street clad in furs. The poor woman who is sweeping the roadway, straightens her bent back as she waits for the carriage or motor to pass. The woman yoked with a dog, drawing the heavy milk waggon, moves aside too, but that night she sows seeds in her little boy's mind that will blossom into anarchy when he grows to manhood. The German Emperor knows the seething discontent as well as any man, and he has cultivated the military spirit as his chief weapon in opposing it, passively in peace time, by means of its discipline, and actively in war time. Military training long ago did away with the German loafer. Instead of slouching loungers, we see well set up, alert and erect men.

The Kaiser set the great military machine going, but he cannot stop the engine of destruction. It is beyond his control. Now the German is fighting for his national existence, his expansion, his preservation, his supremacy, and his trade. Some Germans shake their heads at the price to be paid, but they are not the majority. The brutality which the army has employed has not surprised any who know the German in peace. Look in the window of a postcard shop. See the little boys with their noses flattened against the panes, filling their baby minds with filth. Read the latest German novels, and see on what food the flapper regales herself. Go to the latest play, and be astonished that decent folk do not forbid the befouling which is carried on in the charmed name of Kultur. Visit the picture galleries of the modernists and you will see paintings which nauseate those who are accustomed to the most licentious works of the old masters. All this has had a sure effect and we are now seeing the harvest. The peasant is naturally more animal than most European peasants, and this Kultur, which has filtered down through the educated classes, has confirmed and helped him in his natural bestiality. It is not a pretty picture, and the results are as vile as the student of human nature might expect. The ruling classes know of the rottenness that exists in aristocracy and democracy alike, and they think the discipline of war a wholesome one. To some extent, every decent German concurs in this judgment, and while minimising the horrors that have occurred, he rejoices that the perpetrators are being killed off.

THE HOUSE OF COMMONS.

AND THE ASSEMBLY.

CRITICISMS AND COMPARISONS.

(BY VICTOR GRAYSON.)

When I visited Parliament House on an evening just prior to the prorogation I had in anticipation a sort of comparison between it and the British House of Commons. Many times during my residence in Sydney I have passed the unpretentious building in which this great State's laws are manufactured; but the almost forbidding structure has irresistibly reminded me of the lady who wrote to one of her friends: "Our Bill's been sent to Parliament; I don't know what he's done!" Of course, I had not been five minutes in the chamber itself before I realised how absurdly hopeless and unfair was any kind of comparison between the New South Wales Assembly and the Mother of Parliaments.

THE ETIQUETTE OF THE SCHOOLGROUND.

My visit was made at the wind-up of the session, when bills were being hurriedly rushed through or dropped, and I am prepared to think that I caught the Chamber at an unfavourable moment. Whether or not this be so, I confess that even as an unconventional ex-member of the House of Commons, I was astonished at what I might term the general slovenliness of the debates. Throughout the time I was present members chattered noisily with one another, at moments quite drowning the voice of the speaking member. Once or twice the din became so marked that Speaker Meagher was compelled to raise a gruff voice in an appeal for order, but he might just as well have cried in the wilderness. While this pandemonium was proceeding members from both sides of the House rambled around and across the floor—their hands plunged deeply in their trousers pockets—as irresponsibly as children in a playground. On several occasions members crossed in front of the speaking member without so much as an attempt to stoop. This utterly deplorable state of affairs was not improved by the apparently general custom of departing members waiting until they reached the exits before bowing (or forgetting to bow) to the Speaker.

I will recall one complete incident as it actually happened, as some justification for my pained surprise. A member of the Government had a private bill to present to the House—a bill in which he seemed to be tremendously interested. He rose from the little straight-backed chair (to me a quaintly amusing institution) and spoke in support of his bill. When he had finished a member of the Opposition proved the existence of contumacious disagreement, by moving the deletion of an adjective—and making a speech on the motion. Certain members of the Government followed up with somewhat lengthy and tedious speeches, in which they urged their honourable friend to withdraw his bill. Another Government member walked down the gangway, and taking up his position at the end of the Treasury table, began to deliver a "classical" oration. To my amazement and amusement, he fervently expressed the hope that if the matter were going to a division "the amendment would be taken first." During his rambling remarks quite half a dozen walked up to him and urged him audibly to cease, as the measure was to be dropped by consent. He was not content to accept the advice of his colleagues, nor to notice the loud interruptions of the Opposition. Then the Premier entered, and was informed of the circumstances. He walked straight up to the honourable member, placed one hand on his shoulder, and entered into what seemed to be a public argument. In the end the harried member concluded his speech and resumed his seat. A Liberal member then arose, was called by the Speaker, and the debate was continued. All of which made one sorry that Gilbert could not write it up and Sullivan put it to music. Also, the method of taking the division on slates may be more elementary and convenient than walking through lobbies, but it seems to me that the slate method is as much in danger of lacking accuracy as it certainly lacks dignity.

THE TONE OF THE HOUSE.

While in the Assembly the other evening I noticed that all sorts of "back-benchers" engaged in cordial conversation with the Premier, and that he once crossed the House and entered into conversation with members on the Opposition benches, on which was seated a Government Minister. This may seem a small thing, but to the English mind it is unthinkable. The leader of the House is surrounded with such authority and dignity that no private member attempts to address him unless addressed. This is an unwritten law, but on the only two occasions I ever saw it broken, the private members were snubbed. Moreover, if members saw the Prime Minister visiting the Opposition benches, they would expect the end of the world or the humanisation of Germany as its sequel.

Another of the inviolable rules of the House of Commons is that no one shall walk erect in front of the Speaker, or across the front of a speaking member. I have seen many members of great length or abnormal obesity cut ridiculous figures in endeavouring to stoop low enough to escape loud reproach, but they hold the rule in such awe that they will suffer almost any inconvenience to obey it.

In the matter of interrupting speakers, the House of Commons is as severe as the New South Wales Assembly is lax. In the Assembly I heard one member interrupt so often and at such length that I wondered at his endurance and the Speaker's indulgence. Members did not even trouble to rise from their seats while delivering interruptions which constituted argument. In the English Commons I have heard Ministers of the Crown very sharply rebuked for interposing interruptions that were not legitimate explanations. And however unpopular, troublesome, or boring a member may be, his right to uninterrupted speech is jealously guarded without consulting the exigencies of any Government or party. I have many times seen Mr. Asquith squirming in his seat and casting angry glances towards loquacious members behind him, but the very suggestion of personal interference would revolt the sentiment of the House.

CONFIRMED ETIQUETTE.

The things mentioned are not so much matters of fixed rule as of confirmed etiquette. They were established primarily by a leisured and largely cultured class, but the irruption of a busy, hustling, bourgeois throng left them reverently untouched. And history has proved that the observance of certain courtly courtesies is a lubricant to the political machine. Alongside the ancient tradition of ritual and good form there have grown up the clever dodges and meaner devices of party warfare, and the old British House of Commons has no equal in stealthy cunning when the "game" is to be played. But when legislation is to be put through or prevented, the established savoir faire, form, tone, or what you care to call it, of the House, makes the wheels to run smoothly and with a minimum of noise.

When over thirty Labour members burst upon the House of Commons the majority of English people expected to see the elaborate structure of form and etiquette kicked rudely over by hob-nailed boots. These people were astounded at what actually happened. The rude representatives of the workers, instead of kicking against the prevailing etiquette, found themselves fascinated by it. It took them but a few months to "catch the parliamentary tone" perfectly, and though they surely disappointed many of their more violent friends, they exchanged the revolutionary howl of the hustings for the modulated tone and moderate speech of the chamber. Whether or not this easy assimilation reduced their vital power as industrial advocates is not a matter to discuss here. I merely state that these men from the mine, mill, and forge drank in with thirsty avidity an atmosphere created by haughty aristocrat and gilded plutocrat. It might be as Will Crooks, M.P., once said to me: "Our class learned the bobbing and bowing tricks before the middle-classes were born."

Any comparison between the Labour party in England and the Labour party here would, of course, be futile. The circumstances of their growth and development, the conditions of their environment, and to a large extent the subject matter of their politics have been and are so essentially different. The personalities of England's Labour members are thrown into a false prominence because they have a millennium to promise with no responsibility for achieving it. The leading Labour members of Australia have suffered the grim experience of having suddenly thrown upon them the responsibility, without the power, of materialising their political and economic ideals. Faced with the sheer responsibility of intricate administration, and called upon relentlessly to fulfil the social reconstruction that their programme promised, they find themselves in a none too enviable position. But great responsibility has developed character, resource, and ability. The average Australian Labour member has grappled with the realities of life. The politics he has to deal with are the municipal politics of wheat, meat, and the land. And if the eye of the English observer detects some neglect of form he must confess that the Australian worker has gathered to himself more of the substance than falls to the lot of his English comrade.

IN THE GARDEN.

THE BRILLIANT BOUGAINVILLEAS.

No climbing plants produced a more brilliant and gorgeous effect in colour last summer—an exceptionally dry one—than the different species and varieties of bougainvillea. Where these climbing shrubs were trained to walls fully exposed to the sun, they were seen in perfection, and presented a magnificent sight, which evoked much admiration even from those who take but a passing interest in plants. It is the variously coloured bracts (modified leaves) which surround the insignificant flowers that make these plants so attractive. Bougainvilleas are easily cultivated plants, but being natives of the tropics will only thrive in good positions in the warmer districts. They produce the best results when planted in deep, fairly rich, sandy loam, but do well in efficiently drained, friable, good soil. No flowering climbers are better suited for covering the north wall of a residence, for their growths are easily kept in order, and can be trained in any direction to avoid obscuring the light through the windows, or interfering with spouting, etc. It is a good time of the year to plant vigorous, well-rooted cuttings and layers, for with ordinary attention they soon become established in their new positions. It is not advisable to plant two or more distinct kinds so near each other that their branches become intermixed on the walls or other supports, for they produce a much more beautiful effect in bloom when grown separately. To form floral hedges, however, several kinds may be used, and if the colours are arranged to harmonise the results will be highly satisfactory. Bougainvilleas for this purpose should be planted about 10ft apart, and the supports may consist either of an ordinary paling or post and rail fence. B. glabra is a suitable plant to train up a verandah post, for in such a position it is easily kept in order by judicious pruning, and it produces a profusion of rosy lilac bracts. This species can also be trained into a shrub, and in that form is admirably adapted for planting as an isolated specimen on a lawn, or for growing in any prominent position. Its variety sanderiana, has deep rosy purple bracts, and is the most perpetual flowering member of this family. There is a variegated form of this variety with very beautifully marked leaves. The above mentioned and the following include most of the best bougainvilleas for present planting:—B. braziliensis, with bright mauve-coloured bracts; B. magnifica traili, bright purple; B. speciosa, purple (there is a variegated form of this species); B. spectabilis, rose lilac; and B. splendens, brick red.

SWEET AND YELLOW SULTANS.

In some suburban gardens the plant popularly known as "sweet sultan" has been flowering very freely for some time past, but the newer creations of this hardy drought-enduring annual are not so well known to the general cultivator as their great merits entitle them. They grow 2ft high or more, and produce large, sweetly perfumed flowers of various colours—blue, purple, and white, and shades of the same predominating. Those having double flower heads are particularly attractive. In the more favoured districts the seeds of the sweet sultan may now be sown, but in the colder parts August will be early enough to sow them in the open. The seeds may either be sown in a prepared seed bed, or in an ordinary seed pan or box. If a large number of seedlings are required, the former is the better plan, but where there is only room for a few plants the latter is more convenient. When the seedlings have developed four or five leaves they should be transplanted to the positions where they are to flower, and if favourable weather and soil conditions are chosen for the operation, the young plants will not suffer by the removal. The sweet sultan thrives in ordinary fertile, friable soils, and makes an attractive display in bloom when judiciously planted singly at intervals in the borders amongst plants of a similar height. The flower heads of the newer creations are mostly produced on long, stout stalks, and are admirably adapted for floral decoration, keeping quite fresh for a considerable time in water. The "yellow sultan," or, as it is sometimes called, "yellow cornflower," is a closely allied plant with sweetly scented flowers, and thrives under the same conditions, but does not grow quite as tall as the former.

NOTES.

Perpetual flowering carnations should receive occasional attention. The developing flowering stems should be kept tied to neat stakes, so that when the blooms are open they will not be damaged by strong winds or heavy rains. Should any varieties be affected by parasitic fungi, remedies should be promptly applied to keep them in subjection, or much injury may be done to the plants. Cut off and burn all the affected stems and leaves; then gently syringe the plants with a weak solution of permanganate of potash or a 2 per cent solution of crude oil of eucalyptus, and repeat the operation in about a fortnight or so, should it be necessary. A little air-slaked lime distributed on the ground between the plants will have a deterrent effect on snails and other animal plant pests.

If it is desired to increase any shrubs and roses, cuttings may now be inserted. Select well-ripened wood, and each cutting should be 12in long. Remove all the leaves, make a clean horizontal cut immediately below the lowest bud, and a slightly sloping one to the terminal bud. In a bed composed of sandy soil, in an open situation, insert the cuttings in rows 1ft apart and 3in apart in the rows, at an angle of 45 degrees, leaving only two or three buds above the surface of the soil, which should be made firm about them. In an ordinary season the cuttings will require no attention beyond keeping them clean of weeds and occasionally shortening any long growths that may develop. By next autumn the cuttings will be sufficiently well rooted to be transplanted to their permanent positions.

The bulbs (corms) of those gladioluses whose flowering stems and leaves have withered may now be lifted and cleaned. Any young bulbs that have formed at the bases of the old ones should be carefully removed, and those that it is desired to save should be stored in a cool, dry place till spring, and then planted in nursery rows. The cleaned, matured bulbs should also be stored in a similar way until the planting season comes round again.

Azaleas and rhododendrons may now be top-dressed, and the most suitable material for this is leaf mould resulting from the foliage of deciduous trees, or similar decayed vegetable matter. For plants that have been established many years in their positions, the top-dressing may be 3in thick, but for more recently planted specimens 2in will be ample. Their extremely fine surface roots will soon ramify in this material, and nourish the plants and result in the production of fine flowers in early spring, and subsequent new healthy growth.

Should the flowering buds be too numerous on any varieties of camellia thin them liberally out, leaving at most two or three to each shoot on established plants. The thinning-out process should be on a more liberal scale with more recently-planted and less robust-growing varieties. The superfluous buds are easily and expeditiously removed by giving each one a gentle twist between the finger and thumb. Should dry weather prevail at the time when the flower buds are expanding long established plants will be greatly benefited if they receive an occasional good watering of weak liquid manure at the roots.

Any daffodils, jonquils, and other hardy early spring flowering bulbs that are still in the store room should be planted without further delay, but only, of course, when the ground is in a good condition to receive them.

GLASS-HOUSE.

Now that the cool season has set in, plants in the glass-house will require less shade from the sun's rays. But the shading must be reduced with discretion or the more delicate plants, such as lycopodiums, may suffer. Ventilation must be regulated by the state of the weather, but on bright days it will be advisable to close the sashes early in the afternoon in order to impound as much sun heat as possible without, however, unduly raising the temperature in the structure.

Vigorous plants will still require plenty of water at the roots, and the less robust ones must never be allowed to suffer from the want of moisture, more especially if their pots are well filled with roots. The watering should be done early in the forenoon, and the necessary syringing early in the afternoon in fine weather only.

The fibrous rooted winter and spring flowering begonias such as Dregiana, Glorie de Lorraine, Manicata, and Weltonensis, and the winter flowering gesnerias, should now be placed in the lightest and airiest position in the house.

The ornamental leaved begonias (Rex varieties) should now be kept rather on the dry side until new growth begins next spring. Cinerarias, cyclamens, and primulas raised from the earliest sown seeds this season, should now be sufficiently well grown to be transferred to the pots in which they are to bloom. Prepare some well-drained pots, and use an open, rich compost, and keep the bases of the plants slightly above the new soil.

Seedlings of any of these plants that are being grown for succession should, when large enough to handle, be potted singly in small pots using a light, sandy soil. Keep all these plants as near the glass as possible to ensure a sturdy, vigorous growth.

CURRENT LITERATURE.

AT THE FRONT.

For a number of months Mr. J. H. Morgan was Home Office Commissioner, with the British Expeditionary Force. The nature of his duties is not made clear, although from occasional hints let drop here and there one gathers that they included an inquiry into German atrocities and a sort of general supervision over the physical and moral welfare of Thomas Atkins. Whatever they were they gave him facilities for seeing things enjoyed by no one outside the sacred circle of officialdom. Mr. Morgan has made excellent use of his opportunities; his "Leaves from a Field Notebook" proves once again that the amateur can give just as vivid and effective impressions of life at the front as the professional. Mr. Morgan makes no attempt at fine writing, and he disdains the artifices of sensationalism. But his sympathy, his humour, and his penetrating observation make his book one of the most interesting of the kind which it has been our fortune to read.

For one thing it is the genuine article. The author vouches for the truth of every incident he describes. For obvious reasons names and localities have been changed, and in order to suppress his own personality, the obtrusion of which in the circumstances, would, he feels, be impertinent, he has thrown some of these sketches into the form of fiction. But they are none the less authentic. "Stokes's Act," for instance is historical. Stokes was the best "non-com" of his company when the extraordinary thing happened: he took to his heels and left his officer alone in a dangerous outpost. Stokes could not understand it, and his officers could not understand it either. A psychologist could have told them that a fortnight under fire, with nerves astrain, scanty food, and an infinitesimal amount of sleep may induce a demoralisation for which the victim is scarcely responsible, but courts-martial could not at that time take psychological phenomena into account; for cowardice in the face of the enemy there was but one verdict possible—the one which in the casualty lists is charitably reported as "killed in action"—and it was pronounced upon Stokes. Before it could be executed came the great thrust at Ypres. The King's regulations provide that "an offender when in arrest is not to bear arms except by order of his C.O. or in an emergency." This was an emergency. Stokes was puzzled to find himself armed and in charge of a platoon, composed, like Falstaff's army, of cooks, camp followers, and odds and ends of every description. In the battle that followed he covered himself with glory, and the sequel to his exploits was v. and vi., George V., cap. 23—"An Act to suspend the operation of sentences of courts-martial." This gives those who have been convicted an opportunity to redeem themselves, and not a few unfortunate soldiers have had reason to bless "Stokes's Act," as it is called.

The book is full of good if grim stories, which one has not heard before. Many of them concern the conduct of French provincial mayors during the invasion of August and September, 1914. As the chief citizens of their villages, these were made responsible for everything by the Germans, and they seem to have displayed a degree of self-sacrifice and of heroism which one does not usually associate with high municipal office. In one town the gas was rather feeble, because, as the German Commandant knew well enough, there was little coal, and most of the workers had been called to the colours. This consideration did not curb his natural instinct to bully and bluster. The Mayor was summoned into the presence, and informed that unless the light improved he would be shot. The retort was instantaneous: "You won't light the gas by blowing me out." The Commandant fulminated in the approved style, but the force of the argument was obvious, and the incident closed. This Mayor had a worthy colleague in another town occupied by the Germans. The invaders' first action was to levy enormous quantities of supplies, which were "paid for" in paper. The Mayor protested, and was bluntly told that these receipts were every bit as "good as gold," for they bore, forsooth, the Imperial stamp. The Governor next proceeded to impose a fine of 300,000 francs as a "fine." If the sum were not forthcoming in twenty-four hours the town was to be burned. The Mayor was at his wits' end, for there were not 3000 francs in the place. Then he remembered the answer to his protests, and at the appointed hour produced 725,000 francs' worth of German receipts, acidly reminding the Governor that they were "as good as gold." For this piece of flippant impertinence he was sentenced to be shot, but before the sentence was carried out the Germans had to evacuate the town in a hurry. So hasty was the Governor's departure that he left on his mantelpiece a box of excellent cigars and the death-warrant. These are now the Mayor's most cherished possessions. When he wishes to give himself a treat he lights one of the Governor's cigars and reflectively reads the warrant.

Mr. Morgan's activities took him alike to the trenches and to the base, and of each he had something fresh to say. He corrects our idea of "the Front." We think of it as a line, but a more proper conception would be that of a fan. When we hear that in any given quarter we have extended our line, or taken over a portion of it hitherto held by our allies, it means that the fan has opened wider. There has been a time when the fan was badly torn, and what was left of it was closed up, but that happened in the "black" days, which those who were "in the know" cannot even now recall without a shudder. The simile of the fan is an exact one. The motive force comes from the knob at the end, the mysterious entity known as G.H.Q. When it moves the edges expand or contract with very little appreciation of what it all means, while down all the ribs runs a constant stream of traffic, converging upon the same point. At the fringes of the fan the dominant emotions, according to an officer who has experience of fighting all over the world, are nine-tenths boredom and one-tenth funk. The funk, it may be added, seems to confine itself to the possessor's heart until after the thing is over, when everyone vies with his neighbour in describing the extremity of panic that assailed him. But the boredom is open and admitted, and Mr. Morgan explains it. Take a winter in the trenches. "For three months the horizon is bounded by rows of sand bags, and the interest in those sand bags is only equalled by the interest in the field in front. Occasionally one of our men finds them more than usually interesting. There is a loud report, the click of a bolt, and a pungent smell of burnt cordite. Then all is still. The sight on the standard of their machine gun is always at 200, and they have not altered the range for three months. Occasionally at night the N.C.O. seizes the traversing handles, and with his thumb on the button, slowly sweeps that range of sand bags. The Huns reply by taking a flashlight photograph of us with a calcium flare, and then all is still again. In such excursions and alarms do they pass the long night." One can understand that in the circumstances the interest rapidly assumes a negative character.

At the base it is rather different. There is always something doing at the base. There are wounded who have a story to tell (if they could only be prevailed upon to tell it), and there are men with titles so long and intricate that they are invariably referred to by a series of initials. This is the nerve-centre of the army, and in this quiet little town, which has long since seen its best days, may be observed the brain of the army at work. Here one may listen to the wisdom of A.Q.M.G.'s and A.D.M.S.'s and D.A.A.G.'s, A.P.M.'s, and the rest of them, whose conversation is so highly allusive that it needs a glossary. The man who has most to tell is the man who has least to say—the man of the I.S.G.S. Concerning him Mr. Morgan remarks, "Of our Intelligence work the less said the better—by which I intend no aspersion, but quite the contrary. The work is extraordinarily effective, but half its effectiveness lies in its secrecy. It is all done by an elaborate process of induction. I should hesitate to say that the 'I.' officers discover the location of the H.Q. of captured Germans by a geological analysis of the mud on the soles of their boots in the classical manner of Sherlock Holmes; but I should be equally indisposed to deny it. There is nothing too trivial and insignificant to engage the detective faculties of an "I" man. He has to allow a wide margin for the probability of error in his calculations; shoulder-straps, for example, are no longer conclusive data as to the composition of the enemy's units, for the intelligent Hun has taken of late to forging shoulder-straps with the same facility as he forges diplomatic documents. Oral examination has to be used with caution. But there are other resources of which I shall say nothing. It is not too much to say, however, that we have now a pretty complete comprehension of the strength, composition, and locality of most German brigades on the western front. Possibly the Germans have of ours. One thing is certain. Anyone who has seen the way in which an intelligence staff builds up its data will not be inclined to criticise our military authorities for what may seem to an untutored mind a mere affectation of mystery about small things. In war it is never safe to say "de minimis non curatur." (Macmillan and Co.)

THE IRISH REGIMENTS.

The exploits of the English, the Scots, the Canadians, and the Australasians in the war have already been commemorated, and it occurred to Mr. S. Parnell Kerr that herein lay the seeds of another injustice to Ireland. The Irish regiments have borne to the full their share of the heat and burden of the day, but no one has told their story. In "What the Irish Regiments Have Done," Mr. Kerr has rectified the omission, and has done it extremely well. His book is a fine record of splendid heroism, perseverance in the face of overwhelming odds, and fortitude in the face of defeat, as well as of that elan in the victorious charge with which the Irish are traditionally associated. As the enemy has found to his cost, he can kill the individual Irishman, but the Irish Regiment is harder to kill than the proverbial Kilkenny cat. Again and again we read that a battalion was practically wiped out, that it lost all its officers and three-fourths of the rank and file. But to "wipe out" an Irish regiment is as profitable as cutting off the head of a Cerberus. Two spring where one grew up before, and after a brief interval the defunct regiment appears some thousands of miles away, fresh and debonair as ever, and trailing its coat in the same challenging fashion.

The warriors whose prowess Mr. Kerr describes have fought in Flanders, France, Gallipoli, and the Balkans; the Ulsterman and the Nationalist have forgotten their ancient feud fighting shoulder to shoulder, and by a singular incongruity which will hardly be appreciated in Germany, some of these regiments, when they feel in a particularly happy mood, as, for instance, when they go into battle, sing highly seditious songs. They belong to the "Regulars," the "Territorials," and the "New Army." The Regulars distinguished themselves beyond all praise in the famous retreat from Mons. A series of forlorn hopes left them merely skeleton regiments. The Royal Irish and the Munsters were so badly cut up that for the time being they practically ceased to exist. It is curious to read that on several occasions the losses were due to their being surprised. The Munsters, for example, were having dinner one day when the German artillery got the range and changed a peaceful glade to a shambles. The frequency of these surprises shows the swiftness of the German advance, and also indicates that in those days of confusion the Intelligence Service was somewhat defective. The Munsters appear again at the Dardanelles, where with the Dublins and the Lancashire regiment, and some other details they forced the landing at V and W beaches. That was a bloody day in their history, but an undying one. Three companies of each were wiped out. Further up the peninsula the Anzacs were winning immortality through death. The Irish territorials won their spurs at Loos, and part of the "new army" from Ireland, brigaded with the Australasians at Suvla Bay, had victory in their hands, though it was subsequently lost by indecisive generalship. And to crown the story, and to mention one of the least advertised pages of the war's history, the Inniskillings covered the retreat from the Vardar, fought rearguard actions against the Bulgarians and two companies died almost to a man holding the enemy at bay until their comrades could reach a place of safety. It is a fine record, and in Mr. Kerr the Irish have found a worthy chronicler of their deeds. (Fisher Unwin.)

WAR BOOKS.

"Ribbons and Medals," by Lieutenant-Commander Dorling, is a useful little book describing the decorations with which Great Britain honours those who have fought for her by land and sea. The ribbons are reproduced in colour, the medals in remarkably clear engravings, and in each case there is a short account of the campaign or the service for which it was awarded. It appears that while war medals are quite an ancient institution, they were not issued as a matter of course to all ranks until well on in the nineteenth century. The exception was the battle of Waterloo; all who had taken part in it received a medal, but the deeds of others who fought through the Napoleonic wars went unrecognised till 1849, when a general service medal, 1793—1814, was issued to such of the veterans as survived. Similar provision was made for the navy. Meanwhile, as a result of the many "little wars" in India, it had become customary to grant a medal to all who had been engaged in a campaign, the Afghanistan war, of 1842, being the first occasion on which this was done. The practice of awarding besides silver bars with the names of the battles in which the soldier had participated grew up later. One imagines that some new system will have to be evolved for this war. Nowadays a man is in action practically the whole time, and if he is to receive a bar for each battle he will be literally panoplied in metal. However, that is a difficulty which, unfortunately, does not require immediate solution. Lieutenant-Commander Dorling does not confine himself to British service medals; he describes, in addition, the various distinctions that gallant conduct wins for civilians, as well as the principal military and naval decorations awarded by other nations. The Military Cross of France has a particular interest for us, as its simple yet effective design and its ribbon of red and dark green are to be seen on the breasts of several Australians. (Philip and Son.)

THE EUCALYPTUS.

"A Critical Revision of the Genus Eucalyptus," by Mr. J. H. Maiden, has now reached a further stage in parts xxv. and xxvi. of the complete series. The layman, even though his interest in the precise classification of the eucalyptus is slight, cannot fail to appreciate the importance of Mr. Maiden's work, which may indeed be termed his life-work. The visitor who expatiates on the monotony of the bush is talking sheer nonsense from the scientific point of view, and the Australian who habitually refers in his casual way to the "gum tree" is almost as bad. Apparently there are few trees in the world that show such infinite variety as the eucalptus. Until Mr. Maiden took the task in hand, botanists had been content with the more obvious systems of classification. Mr. Maiden has conducted his research to a degree of detail which no other inquirer has had the means of doing, or, one may add, the patience to attempt. To take one illustration of the thoroughness of his methods. The eucalyptus is extraordinarily adaptable to its environment. It seems that small differences in climate, altitude, and soil produce distinct variations in type. Mr. Maiden has collected evidence of this from the length and breadth of the country, and his "Critical Revision" contains a wealth of invaluable material which would otherwise be inaccessible to students of botany. The Government Printer produces each of these parts, drawing and letterpress, in his usual excellent manner. —(N.S.W. Government Printer.)

NEW NOVELS.

In the midst of his labours to promote agricultural settlement Sir Rider Haggard still finds time to write those romances which have delighted a generation of readers. "The Ivory Child" is the latest of them, and as on previous occasions the mysterious vastnesses of Equatorial Africa have provided the author with material which he exploits to excellent purpose. The story opens in England, but Sir Rider Haggard lingers in civilisation only long enough to set the plot in motion. The preliminaries are soon disposed of, and then we all take ship for the African jungle, where Arab wizards and ladies marked out by destiny as the guardians of native deities are naturally more at home than in the quiet English countryside. Our old friend, Allan Quartermain, is well to the fore; indeed, it is difficult to imagine an African landscape in which he does not figure with credit to himself and profit to his friends. On this occasion he is faced with a problem after his own heart. He has to recover Lady Ragnall, who has been abducted by the aforesaid magicians, and in this task his knowledge of native demonology stands him in good stead. Yet even for the experienced Quartermain the search produces unexpected difficulties and surprises. When the lady is found the business is by no means over, for the expedition is involved in local politics. In Central Africa these are conducted with a heat and acrimony beside which even our domestic controversies seem mild, and the rival parties, like the Homeric heroes, are not above the unfair expedient of invoking supernatural assistance. In such circumstances a tribe which possesses as its tutelary genius a huge elephant of superelephantine endowments might appear to have an advantage over a tribe which has merely an "ivory child" to protect it. But the Black Kendahs reckoned without their host, and, thanks to the resourcefulness of their opponents, their Behemoth availed them little in the end. Sir Rider Haggard's fertility of invention is inexhaustible. It is more years than we care to count since we first began to read his African tales, and by now these must have come to represent a substantial total. All of them are much the same in character, yet the author contrives never to repeat himself. The incidents are always fresh, the situations thrilling, and the action never flags for a moment. (Cassell and Co.)

"The Pearl Fishers" is a rattling yarn of love and adventure in Mr. H. de Vere Stacpoole's most vigorous style. There is a certain coral island in mid-Pacific which seems to be a veritable magnet for castaways. First of all Schumer's ship runs ashore there, and he and a beautiful native are the only ones saved. Then Floyd, the hero and the sole survivor of a fire at sea, appears on the scene, and lastly, after they have discovered the lagoon to be full of pearls, the labour problem is solved by a crew of kanakas, who, after mutinying and murdering their officers, drift helplessly about the ocean, till they bring up at the island. Schumer shoots the ringleader to encourage the others, and sets them to work. However, Schumer, though highly efficient, is untrustworthy; he covets his partner's share of the spoil, and there is a rascally Sydney shipowner who joins in the conspiracy. Floyd finds himself encompassed with unsuspected dangers; the natives rise against him, and, with the zealous aid of Isabel, he escapes from them, only to learn by a lucky chance that there is a plot against his life. Of course he emerges triumphant from the perils that beset him, and the villains are all hoist with their own petard, the reader can discover how. Part of the action takes place in Sydney, which, according to the author, is a dreary city for the lone sailor man who cares neither for horseracing nor bar-lounging. Fishing was Floyd's sole diversion when he was in our midst. The story is chiefly one of incident, and the characters are slightly sketched, with the exception of Schumer, who is quite the most interesting of them. He is a hard-bitten rogue, who has fought his way over all the seven seas, and will betray his mate without the slightest compunction if it serves his turn. But he has a queer strain of poetry in him, as witness his rhapsody on the south: "It's only in the tropics you find colour and stuff that's rich and worth having. The north—pah! what does it give us? Iron and tin and wood and copper. It's the south where the gold is, where the pearls are. Why the very earth in the south hides colour and riches. Where are the diamond mines?—the ruby and emerald mines—the gold?—the silver? Look at the birds; there's not a coloured bird in the north that hasn't come from the south. Look at the shells and the corals, and the flowers, and the people. Look at the sun! No; the south holds everything worth having or seeing!" His philosophy is often better than himself. Take this sample:—"A great personality does not irritate; it lulls. Your little strong man gets his will—if he gets it at all—by setting everybody by the ears. Your big strong man works without friction, his men become part of him, his motives part of them. When they are free to think they may wonder vaguely at their own subservience and even resent it in a way, yet they come again to the will that bends them as surely as wheat stalks come under the wind when it blows." (Hutchinson's, Dymock's.)

The setting of "The Death Rider," by Miss Nina Toye, a tale of the time of Pope Julius II., gives the author plenty of scope for picturesque colour, and spirited adventure. She certainly does not fail to make use of it. At every turn we hear the clash of swords and gaze upon the gorgeous luxury of medieval Italian courts. The characters are those which one instinctively looks for in historical romances, the brilliant calculating and ambitious courtesan, the dashing hero, who is as magnificent a lover as he is a fighter, and all the rest of the glittering crew. Miss Toye mixes all her ingredients with skill, and she contrives to give a vivid impression of the period of which she writes. The story is founded on fact, that it to say, real and fictitious events are woven together in proportions to determine which one would need to be a student of the history of the Holy Roman Empire. Many people find it hard to read so-called "historical novels," and to some extent one sympathises with them, for too often the writers of such take their characters from the 20th Century, dress them in garments in which they are obviously ill at ease, and put into their mouths language in which they commit appalling chronological solecisms. On the other hand, a writer who "gets up" his period at all conscientiously, can enlarge the horizon of persons who would never dream of opening a history book. Miss Toye appears to be one of the conscientious school; as far as one can judge, she has dealt faithfully with her facts, and her imaginative additions are so conceived as to be quite "in the picture." (Cassell and Co.)

"THE TOAST IS ANZAC."

Messrs. W. J. Deane and Sons have published Dr. Chas. W. MacCarthy's new patriotic song, "The Toast is Anzac, Gentlemen," lyrics by C. H. Souter, in the interests of the Returned Soldiers' Association, to which body composer and author have generously transferred the entire rights. The new song was successfully introduced at the Town Hall Anzac Day concert by Mr. R. A. Bartleman, when singer and composer were recalled with enthusiasm. The music possesses an indisputable melodic charm, combined with a striking harmonisation, and its rhythmic progress is most animated. "The Toast is Anzac" should become widely known, and thus prove a valuable asset to the R.S.A.

SOME SIX O'CLOCK FACTS.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE HERALD.

Sir,—In answer to the question, would the 6 o'clock closing of bars promote sobriety, I submit the following facts:—

Referring to the first week of 6 o'clock in South Australia, beginning on 27th ultimo, a man from Adelaide wrote to me:—"Already we are realising the benefits of the reform. Streets are much quieter, and reports from the country indicate that drunkenness is practically nil. On the evidence, our city Court returns show to date 35 convictions last week and 12 for this."

Senator Pearce gave us 6 o'clock closing in Sydney for nine days in February. The convictions for drunkenness at the Central Police Court were 77. In the corresponding time of last year they were 147. They were thus almost double as many when the late hours were law. The figures are those of a police court missionary.

These facts plainly show that 6 o'clock closing would promote sobriety in a very marked degree. I am, etc.,

F. B. BOYCE, President,
April 27. N.S.W. Alliance.

Eighty returned soldiers testified to the nerve-strengthening powers of Clements Tonic. All over Australia the public also testify and extol its many health merits. Get it to-day.—Advt.

MUSIC AND DRAMA.

Next Wednesday, May 3, is the 300th anniversary of the death of William Shakespeare, for that greatest of all poets died on April 23 (Old Style), 1616. On that afternoon scenes will be acted by the Allan Wilkie Company at the Adelphi Theatre, where also orations, and separate speeches from the plays, will be delivered by leading artists. The Shakespeare Society, which generously resigned its tenure of the Town Hall to the Returned Soldiers' Association for Anzac Day, will support this function, which will thus become significantly commemorative. It is of interest to note that, whilst seemingly a casual clash of circumstances caused the Shakespeare Society to change its celebration from the date of the Old Style to that by which Pope Gregory XIII. corrected the current calendar of 1582 (not adopted in England until 1751), the Tercentenary is being observed on May 3 by deliberate choice in all the schools of Great Britain. This opportunity for directing the youthful mind towards Shakespeare may influence permanently the lives of thousands, and it is a pity that the expressed hope of the executive committee that schools throughout the British Empire should join in the movement was not communicated early in the year. The British schools' programme has been suggested by an executive committee, with the Earl of Plymouth as chairman, and Professor Israel Gollancz as hon. secretary. It is proposed that the commemoration be introduced by the reading from Ecclesiasticus, "Let us now praise famous men," with a brief discourse upon Shakespeare, his ideals of patriotism and love of his native country, and the wisdom and worth of his works. Some of his songs should be sung, and scenes from his plays should be recited by the pupils. The education department of the Y.M.C.A. will arrange for the reading of Shakespeare on Wednesday in the huts of training camps, in munition areas, and to our other well-beloved soldiers in Flanders, France, and Egypt.

March opened in London with the production of two new pieces, of which the more important was "My Lady Frayle," a musical play by Arthur Wimperis and Max Pemberton, music by Howard Talbot and Herman Finck, produced at the Shaftesbury. "The Love Thief," by J. G. Cambridge, at the Queen's Theatre, seems to have been commonplace melodrama from Canada, and need not be described. Lady Frayle is an amorous middle-aged countess in love with her young ward, Dick Lassett. The supernatural element is introduced. To prevent the lad from marrying his sweetheart, she "sells him" to a modern magician who, in exchange, restores her vanished youth. Thereupon, under a new name as Vivien Ingoldsby, she ensnares poor Dick with her new-won beauty. The problem is solved by her repentance. She breaks her compact with Lucifer, resigns her mask of youth, and sees the lovers re-united. There was a vivacious under-plot, and plenty of pretty music, whilst Mr. Robert Courtneidge had staged the piece picturesquely. Except Courtice Pounds, the cast consisted of artists of purely local reputation, a frequent feature in the London theatre of to-day. Margot Joyce played the name-part, and others with her were Misses Croft, Debenham, Armstrong, Yates, Messrs. Bryant, Sheppard, Humphreys, and Richardson. When the mail left, Louis N. Parker's comedy, "Disraeli," was in rehearsal at the Royalty, where "The Man Who Stayed at Home" was moving on to the Apollo to continue an amazing run. The new play, which has been roaming over the United States some four years, shows Disraeli in the height of his power during the 'Seventies, and deals with his brilliant acquisition of the Suez Canal shares. Mr. Dennis Eadie will figure as the great Prime Minister.

From Paris news comes of the death of Giovanni Sbriglia, the great Italian tenor and teacher of singing, at the age of 76. He was a Neapolitan, studied at the Naples Conservatoire, made his debut at the San Carlo, and became the leading operatic tenor of the 'Sixties. He toured the United States with Adelina Patti, and later with other artists right down to San Francisco, and won further triumphs in Havana and Mexico. In later years Sbriglia became very skilful in diagnosing the true quality of a voice, and in this way he changed Jean de Reszke from a second-rate baritone to the greatest tenor of his generation. He also taught Edouard de Reszke, the basso, and transformed their sister Josephine from a light soprano to a dramatic. His long list of famous pupils included Mmes. Nordica and Sibyl Sanderson, and the French basso Pol Plancon. The funeral service took place on February 23 at the Church of the Trinity.

Quite a number of Australian artists have begun their stage career on the other side, seeing subsequently but little of their native country, in which respect Beatrice Yaldwyn, now making her Australian debut as the haughty and ungracious Ethel Chichester in "Peg o' My Heart," is the latest member of a fairly numerous group. This actress was born near Mitchell (Queensland), and spent her schooldays at Toowoomba and Manly. Visiting England some seven years ago, Miss Yaldwyn entered the Tree Dramatic Academy, and secured her first engagement with Marie Tempest, in Anthony P. Wharton's comedy "At the Barn" (1912), in which Mr. Cecil Brooking, her "brother" at the Palace Theatre, also had a part. The young Australian then joined Edward Compton's Comedy Company (known in English theatrical circles as the "C.C.C.") as Beauty in "Everywoman," the actor-manager playing Nobody, and Miss May Congdon, recently here in "Mr. Wu," the name-part. After that Miss Yaldwyn rejoined Marie Tempest and Graham Browne in "The Dumb and Blind" at the Playhouse, and, remaining with the star for 18 months, also supported her in "The Handful," "Mary Goes First," and the serious fable "Dropping the Baby." The newcomer had a further stay with Miss Tempest for "Thank Your Ladyship" and "The Marriage of Columbine." Her last engagements before sailing with the J. and N. Tait Company were as lead in "Officer 666" with Percy Hutchison's Company, and in "A Pair of Silk Stockings" with Allan Aynesworth.

The Victorian Vocalists' Society, to which reference was made in this column some months ago in connection with a meeting held in Melbourne at Mme. Agnes Janson's studio, has since considerably strengthened the position of concert singers. One cause of the prevailing poverty in Melbourne musical circles has been probed by the committee. It arises from the amazing extent to which vocalists have appeared for charitable purposes without fee of any kind, not only since the war, but before it. Cases of real destitution have resulted. It has now been decided that no member of the new society, which embraces vocalists, accompanists, solo instrumentalists, and concert entertainers of repute, shall appear at any function whatever without payment of the minimum fee of one guinea. At a public meeting held at the Melbourne Town Hall on April 17, Sir John Madden, G.C.M.G., president of the new society, publicly appealed to all members of the profession to observe this wise provision. All the leading clubs and municipal councils have been asked freely to accord this minimum fee. The Melbourne City Council, roused to action, has decided to give two municipal concerts monthly, in order to provide extra work for artists. In addition to this, a big concert will shortly be given to establish an endowment for necessitous artists, at which Mlle. Antonia Dolores will sing.

Easter attractions of various kinds are recorded in Melbourne, where "So Long, Letty" has been staged at Her Majesty's with the Sydney cast, and a new play, "The Boomerang," has been put up at the Theatre Royal. "The Boomerang" is pronounced a comedy without the taint of farce, possessing a good deal of common sense, some correct psychology, and charm. The title of the play refers to the result of a doctor's manoeuvres to reconcile a pair of lovers, which he does by playing off a pretty nurse against the estranged girl, who is then brought back to her lover's side by jealousy. In the meantime the nurse, who is fond of the doctor, unwittingly makes him also jealous, and this "return of the boomerang" leads to further matrimony. Hale Hamilton and Miss Tannehill were the principals in the new cast.

SOCIAL.

All contributions and accounts of weddings or other social entertainments intended for the "Social" Column in Saturday's issue should reach this office not later than Friday morning, and be fully endorsed.

The Governor and Lady Edeline Strickland gave a "literary tea" at Government House yesterday afternoon, to meet Sir Rider Haggard. Guests were received in the drawing-room, where they were announced by Captain Firth and Captain d'Apice. The reception was informal, and those present had an opportunity of chatting with the guest of the afternoon. Sir Rider seemed most optimistic about his scheme for settling soldiers, and expressed himself delighted with the reception it has met with in Australia. The Misses Strickland assisted Lady Edeline in her duties as hostess, and all the guests were charmed with the afternoon, which was one of the pleasantest parties ever held at Government House. In connection with the Y.W.C.A. a very successful members' camp was held at Cronulla during the Easter week-end, under the leadership of Miss Debenham. Eighteen altogether attended the camp, and thoroughly enjoyed the holiday and the varied programme provided, which gave scope for recreation as well as thought and discussion.

THE CRIMSON FIELD.

She was young and twenty on the instant. The relief from doubt was so sharp that she feared to meet it, and turned her back on him.

"Are you always so—so honest with all women?" she asked by-and-bye, with a little tender laugh. "It will be your undoing one day, if you take no heed. Oh, my dear, all women are so old in wisdom, and all men so young—so young. And, if that is all you have to say—if that is all—I'd best be bidding you farewell, Sylvester."

So he took the man's way; and she was well content to let jealousy and fear, and twenty daft, inconstant whimsies go their way. They watched the sun eat up the mists about the moor, watched Simon's seat grow from a savage fortress to a quiet pile of rocks, cushioned below and above by the purple acres of the heather.

"It it were too good to be true," said Joyce.

"If it were so good it could not any way be false. I'm the wisest man in Craven, Joyce. Betrothal taught it me."

Betrothal, and a heady fight near Wooler, and contempt of wounds, taught Demaine another lesson during the next days. Joy of the wooing carried him safely home; and, after that, he lay in pain and torment. If prayers had not stolen in—eager, fervent prayers that needed no carrier-pigeons for their flight—he would have given up the combat, content to die and have done with it. As it was, he conquered. And a great sleep came on him that lasted for three nights and a day. They could not wake him to take nourishment. He lay like a forest tree that the woodman's axe had stricken, and Nan, watching him as a dog watches his master, was sure the end was come. His one hope was that the master would have a moment's wakefulness, to shrive his soul before he died.

At Thorpe-in-the-Hollow, when news came that Demaine was near his end, the women ceased their gossip, and the men turned from their cobbler's benches, and there was mourning in the village, as if each of them had lost a son or brother. They began to speak in hushed voices. Demaine would not have known himself, if he had been there to listen to their praise. Feats of strength and horsemanship—little deeds of kindness done without a thought—his way with children, and their love of him—all the cupboards of memory were unlocked, and the frankincense and myrrh of kindly thoughts sent out their perfume.

Will the Arrowsmith alone stuck to his work; and the men crowded round him, asking him what use it was to make arrows for the few bows if Demaine were gone.

"The Scots come, whether he goes or no," growled Will, and went on with his task.

The news reached Percival Hall late on the fourth morning; and Sir John made no demur when Joyce asked him to ride with her to the house of Bentilands.

"My lass, I had just begun to care for him—and now 'tis farewell, it seems. We could have spared twenty smaller men in place of good Demaine. Nay, no sobbing. By your leave, no sobbing. It makes a fool of me, girl—a fool."

Four hours before their coming, Demaine had roused himself from a long draught of the finest wine that any country vintages—sleep, that lets a quieter world hold away before life's unrest and din must once again be faced. His wounds were healing fast, and he was out in the roadway near his gate when Percival and his daughter came riding up. He answered their greeting merrily, with easy carriage of the body so lately mauled in fight.

Joyce laughed. There was nothing else to be done. It was not easy to return from graveside tears to the knowledge that this big fellow was alive and hale, and master of her heart.

"So you're not near your end, Sylvester?" stammered Sir John lamely.

"Oh, I trust not, sir! I was thinking of saddling a horse."

"You would be, lad, when other men were sunning themselves awhile and bracing up their wounds."

Demaine seemed to grow taller by an inch or two. His eyes were bright with some vision of things before and after—things hidden from the day's routine. "I ride to Thorpe. Do you ride, too?"

"If it please you, why, yes. Your errand there?"

"To bid Will Arrowsmith go plying his trade. To rouse the thick-set cobbler-folk. I tell you, there is need—I'm ashamed to have lain abed so long, with all there is to do."

"Go saddle your horse," Percival broke in. "Saddle him quickly, for I, too, am ashamed."

August was warm and spacious round the land as they rode out. Barden Moor, ahead of them, was one great field of crimson heather, flanked by green oases of bracken. Missel-thrushes, merles, and chattering starlings were busy with the hedgerow fruits. The sun was gold in a heaven of blue, and butterflies were all aboard—big, red-winged fellows and the little blues that seemed like daylight fairies or bits of gossamer fallen from another world.

As they came by Barden Tower, where the track turned into the heather, they met a jolly monk astride a horse as plump as himself, and he drew rein to tell them that the morning was altogether beyond man's praise.

"I saw many lands, Sir John—and my share of life—before I took the vows. But there's naught in the world like Barden, the brown Wharfe, and the Priory down yonder. Peace sheltered by the everlasting hills—and trout for supper, since 'tis Friday—and the turmoil of one's sins forgotten. I'm content, who never thought to know peace again."

It was not Sir John who answered. It was Demaine, the Crusade fiery at his heart.

"You love peace, Brother Constantine? Then fight for the good maid. There is war coming."

Brother Constantine broke in with his jolly laugh. "We knew it long since at the Priory. The news is stale. In Holy Church so tranquil—all of it fishing in Wharfe River—or that no riders come from Scotland to give us news of what is doing?"—

Demaine, though he did not relish the discipline, felt like a boy at school again. "You talked of peace, as if all were going well," he said.

"When all's going ill"—again the jolly laugh—"that is the hour when one remembers peace, and sunny days, and what might be for ever if men were content to have it so."

"We go to rouse the Thorpe-folk, brother Constantine," said Sir John.

"Good," the monk assented tranquilly. "The time is ripe, I judge. Is there room for Holy Church among your band?"

With the ease of one who had known muster long, who had waited and said little, he reined about; and they rode through the crimson garden of the heather, and down the rutty lane, and so to Thorpe.

There was little stir of life about the village. The women were at their churning or the oven; the men sat at their cobblers' benches, making boots for other's feet, while their own were gaping at the soles. Three children playing near the well looked up. Their eyes grew wide with fright when they saw Demaine, and they fled to their home with dismal cries.

"Why, Sylvester," laughed the monk, "one would fancy you carried the Evil Eye to-day. The bairns are wont to run to your stirrup as if you were god-father to the whole unruly tribe."

The reason was not far to seek. The children found their mother busy with making an apple pasty against the hour when her good man should come in, roaring like a lion for his food. They told her that Yeoman Demaine, lying dead at Barden, was come ghosty-wise to Thorpe. And she, good woman, bade them not be feared at that, for the yeoman had aye loved Thorpe as a man loves his chosen maid, and his haunting would bring naught but blessing to the village. Yet even she, when she ran out and saw Demaine, crossed herself at sight of a dead man smiling as he sat astride the old grey mare, whose fiddle-head was known to Thorpe.

"But 'tis this way, maister," she stammered. "We knew ye for a corpse; and what do you riding down through Thorpe in open midday?"

"I go riding for the King," said the yeoman. "Here, Rachel, your hand. Is that a ghost's grip, or a man's?"

"But, my dear, you're not dead at all? That will be news. Shall I laugh or cry, my dear?"

She did neither, but ran up and down the road, opening all doors, and knocking at none, and, before Demaine knew what was toward, he was besieged by a motley crowd of cobblers in their leathern aprons. They asked whose head they had to break—the liar's who had brought them news that he was dead—they were passionate and foolish in their welcome. The dalesman is a hard nut to crack, because he knows that the kernel underneath is not hard at all.

Demaine took his moment. He had not guessed their liking for him; but it was here at his service, and he made the most of it.

"Men of Thorpe, you'd have followed me to the grave? Eh, but I've another road for you. Who gets readying for the Border and the cursed Scots? They're all but on us."

"Talk o' moonshine," broke in an unlicked boorish hind.

"Talk o' daylight, lad. I've been to the Border, and I know. Here, you Thorpe men, would you liefer be following me to Bolton Kirkyard, or up into the summer hills? Would you liefer sit at home, cobbling shoes, and biding till the Scots raid wives and cattle —"

THE CHURCHES.

EMPTY PEWS.

In the course of an address at a meeting of the South Australian Congregational Union last week, the Rev. Paul Joseph dealt with "new methods of church work." He said that there were some people, fortunately in the minority, who viewed with horror any proposed new departure from the old way of working. There was a hymn of which certain evangelists were very fond, and some of the lines were as follow:—"It's the old-time religion, and it's good enough for me." He knew that some people still clung to that principle, but he thought the church, instead of being the most hidebound, should be the most elastic institution in the world. It might be truly said of the early churches that they were true to what they knew, they kept pace with their vision. Two services on Sunday, with a mid-week service, generally attended by those too infirm to stand the excitements of moving pictures, or other places of amusement, seemed to make up the existence of some churches. Spasmodic efforts were made to capture the affections of those who had become separated from them. Little as they might like to admit it, the general programme of the churches was not commanding the admiration and the enthusiasm of the young and ardent hearts. The churches were rich, and had beautiful buildings and splendid machinery—yet on Sunday evenings how many of them were there [illegible] shops? To say that the fault of the empty churches was entirely due to the methods by which the church sought to do its work would be unjust. Many of them were not without hope that the new seriousness forced upon the nation by the great conflict in which it was now engaged would be the means of bringing many people to enlist under the banner of the Prince of Peace. However, they must not lose sight of the fact that it was not the work done amid excitement that was the real work of the church, but it was that accomplished in times of peace that proved her power. How to make men understand the real mission of the church, and their need of its ministry, was at once their challenge and problem. If some man would arise, make it not his mission to gather in the outsiders, but cleanse and purify the church, and convert the pillars of the church from selfishness to unselfishness, and from sin to God, he would be a greater benefactor than the travelling evangelists with their sideshows and circuses.

BIBLES FOR THE TROOPS.

An account of the distribution of Bibles supplied by the New South Wales auxiliary of the British and Foreign Bible Society, to Australian troops in Egypt, is given in a letter to Mr. Bowen, the local secretary, from the society's agent in Cairo. "At the church parade on Sunday a big distribution of Testaments took place," he writes. "The Testaments were nicely bound, small India paper editions, real treasures. The old hymns so well known and loved by the soldiers were lustily sung. The chaplain, the Rev. D. H. Blackwood, late of Tasmania, gave an appropriate address. Every man on parade was told that there was a New Testament for him if he had not already had one. They filed up by companies. Mrs. Spens, Mrs. A. B. W. Taylor, and the Misses Spens, acted as distributers. At the conclusion of the service three hearty cheers were given for the ladies, on the motion of Major Clifton, who was in charge of the battalion. The brigadier, Colonel Spencer Browne, was also present. It was very touching to see the eagerness with which the Testaments were sought by officers and men alike. It is perhaps significant that the majority of those present were under orders to proceed towards the front during the week."

Mr. A. R. Main, M.A., is the newly-elected president of the Churches of Christ in Victoria. A native of Scotland, Mr. Main came to Victoria when a very young man, and entered the ministry. He is a graduate of the Melbourne University, where he obtained first-class final honours in philosophy. Nine years ago he was appointed a member of the faculty of the College of the Bible, and later became the principal.

Miss Parr, of the China Inland Mission, who recently returned on furlough from Yanghsien, is resting at Rockdale, preparatory to a visit to Melbourne, where she is to take part in the annual meeting at the end of May.

The Rev. F. W. Boreham, of Hobart, has accepted the invitation to the pastorate of the Armadale (Vic.) Baptist Church. He is well known in Melbourne, having several times filled the pulpit at Collins-street. Mr. Boreham is president of the Baptist Union of Tasmania, and is also a writer of distinction, whose writings are widely read in Australia and Great Britain.

The 54th annual meeting of the City Mission is fixed for Tuesday, May 23. The preceding Sunday, which is also Empire Sunday, will be City Mission Sunday, too, and the churches have been asked to allow the City Missionaries to speak of their work in them. Thirty-three churches have signified their willingness to do this. On the following Tuesday the annual luncheon will be held at the mission headquarters, 276 Elizabeth-street. Mr. James B. Nicholson, the newly-elected president, will preside, and addresses will be given by the heads of the Churches and other representative men. In the evening a demonstration will be held in the Town Hall, at which Mr. William Arnott will preside.

On Tuesday week the Bexley Christ Church choir rendered Stainer's beautiful Passion music "The Crucifixion" before a crowded congregation. A short service conducted by the precentor, who preached, assisted by the rector, preceded the music. A full choir was augmented by two soloists, the Messrs. Robinson from the Cathedral. The organist, Mrs. Doyle, who was responsible for the production, had the assistance of Miss Eldridge (violin).

In March, 1917, the New South Wales auxiliary of the British and Foreign Bible Society will have completed 100 years of existence. The committee has taken into consideration how the event shall be fittingly celebrated. In view of the serious national position the original programme has been curtailed, [illegible] preparation of a concise history of the military and a literary competition will form important features of the celebration. For the rest, consideration is postponed. The first contribution to the centenary fund has been received from Lieutenant E. R. Holme.

At St. John's (Bishopthorpe) Church, Glebe, on Wednesday week, Stainer's sacred cantata, "Crucifixion," was rendered by the combined choirs of St. John's, Balmain, and St. John's, Bishopthorpe, assisted by members of other choirs from Hurstville, North Sydney, Pymble, and Turramurra. The choir numbered over 100 voices, and gave a finished rendering of the choruses and chorales in the work under the baton of Mr. C. E. Dever, the organist and choirmaster of the church. Mrs. G. E. King, the organist from St. John's (Balmain), presided at the organ. The tenor solos were taken by Mr. H. A. N. Puddicombe, Messrs. J. Wilkins and S. Sedden shared the work allotted to the bass. The semi-chorus "God so Loved the World," was sung as a quartette by Misses [illegible] Long and N. [illegible], and Messrs. S. A. Mills and S. Sedden. The performance was the occasion of the members of the choir appearing in surplices and college caps for the first time, and with the ladies of St. John's (Balmain), who were also robed, they made an impressive appearance.

The national board of the Young Women's Christian Association at its last meeting passed a resolution of sympathy with the 6 o'clock closing movement, and expressed its readiness to support the movement in every way possible.

The midday organ recitals given by Miss Lilian Frost at Pitt-street Congregational Church on Wednesdays are increasing in popularity. On Wednesday next an unusual programme will be presented, including Dubois' "March of the Magi Kings." Throughout the piece one note is held, representing the star which guided the wise men of the East to the birthplace of [illegible]. It cleverly accorded with all the harmonies of the composition. Mr. [illegible] will sing "The Man of Sorrows" (Adams), and Mr. Farnsworth Hall played a violin solo.

On Saturday next, May 6, at 3.15 p.m., the foundation-stone of a new church is to be laid in the parish of St. Paul's, Chatswood. The site chosen is at the corner of William and Macquarie streets, in the eastern part of the suburb. The edifice will be built of brick, and its name is to be St. Barnabas. This part of Chatswood has been developing rapidly of late, and the new church will supply a long-felt need. While, for the present, St. Barnabas's will take the place of a supplementary church to that of St. Paul's, and will be served by the clergy of the latter, it is quite expected that before many years it will become the centre of a new parish. The Rev. W. L. Langley, rector of All Saints', Woollahra, who 15 years ago was the preacher at the first official service of the Church of England in the parish of St. Paul's, has been asked to perform the ceremony.

The national secretary of the Young Women's Christian Associations, Miss Helen F. Barnes, M.A., concludes her New Zealand tour of the associations this week, and returns to Sydney by R.M.S. Makura about May [illegible]. On May [illegible] it is planned to open in Sydney the seventh training school for association secretaries and volunteer workers, of which the national secretary will be the leader.

Watson will also be present, and the New South Wales representatives include Senator Millen, Messrs. J. J. Garvan, E. Grayndler, Samuel Hordern, Denison Miller, and Dugald Thomson. At this meeting there will be a general discussion of plans and arrangements, and immediately afterwards an active campaign will be launched. In the meantime subscriptions may be sent to the secretary of the State War Council, Sydney, or be paid in to any branch of the associated banks for transmission, cheques to be made payable to the Australian Soldiers' Repatriation Fund. The Governor, Sir Gerald Strickland, has headed the subscription list with a donation of £100, and the employees of Messrs. G. H. [illegible] and Co. have forwarded £100. Promises for substantial amounts have been received from various other quarters.

A GRAZIER'S ESTATE.

Probate has been granted of the will dated February 4, 1912, of William Hill, of Carnarvon, then, Upper Manilla, grazier, who died on February 8 last. Testator appointed Harry Burrell, of Ryde, and Arthur Gooch and John Duncan Kennedy, of Manilla, his executors and trustees. He directs them to sell and convert his property into money, and out of the proceeds to pay Arthur Gooch £5000, and out of the remainder to pay annuities of £500 each to his wife, [illegible] Rebecca Hill, and his daughter, Susan Emily Burrell, during their lifetime, and to his niece, E. M. Webber, £2000 for her sole use and benefit. Testator also devises £1000 to the Manilla District Hospital for the purpose of erecting, fitting, and furnishing an operating theatre, to be known as the Hill Operating Theatre. The value of the estate was sworn for probate purposes at [illegible].

ROCKDALE'S RATES.

The School of Arts at Rockdale was crowded with ratepayers on Thursday night. The object was to protest against the local council's recent assessment of 6d in the £. The chairman, Mr. Young, stated that this rate was the highest in the metropolitan area. In the five adjoining boroughs the rates ranged from 2½d to 4½d in the £. The council's decision was only arrived at on the casting vote of the Mayor, the voting being six for and six against.

The Rev. C. T. Forscutt moved, "That the aldermen who thus heavily taxed the residents should resign, and test the matter amongst the ratepayers who have to pay the piper."

The motion was carried by a very large majority, only three or four voting against it.

REAL ESTATE.

NOTES OF THE WEEK.

The real estate market has been quiet this week. However, that is but the natural order of things, for Easter week led many to take a rest in the country, and country buyers to holiday making in the city. Real estate matters were consequently laid aside for the time being, but there are several city sales pending, as well as a good inquiry for suburban holdings.

The feature of the week's business was the sale yesterday in the rooms of Messrs. Richardson and Wrench of properties owned by the City Council. In the carrying out of this sale Messrs. Raine and Horne, and Richardson and Wrench were associated. Mr. Nesbitt, town clerk, and Mr. Wiley, valuer to the City Council, were present, and represented the council. Mr. James Gregg, and Mr. Raine conducted the auction. A residence on Bayswater-road, Darlinghurst, with 25ft frontage, was sold for £1720, and four allotments adjoining realised from £16 to £21 per foot. A double corner block of land, Pyrmont Bridge-road, Barr-street, and Lyons-road, was sold for £12 per foot. A house, 212 Harris-street, Pyrmont, realised £575, and the old council chambers at Camperdown, which cost over £6000 to build, was disposed of for £3250, while for land near the council chambers £15 and £17 per foot was refused. In addition to the city council's properties, three shops and dwellings in Bathurst-street were offered, but the bidding did not reach the reserve. However, there has been private inquiry since, and it is possible a sale will be effected. The balance of McLean's Point Estate, St. George's Basin, was withdrawn from the auction, but will come up later.

During the week the firm sold by private contract five lots in the Terry House Estate, Eastwood, for £367, and two blocks in Darvall's Estate, Ryde, for £162.

At the bi-weekly sale of Messrs. Raine and Horne, on Thursday, there was a very large attendance of buyers, the rooms being crowded. The list of properties offered comprised a fairly good selection, and this led to a fair amount of competition, but in most cases there was a margin between the values placed upon the properties by seller and buyer, and they had to be passed in, but two blocks of land at Bondi owned by the Railway Commissioner were sold, one for £900, and the other for £400. There was also good bidding for a number of Newtown properties, but the reserves were not quite reached.

During the week the firm sold Holbrook House, which was recently offered at auction as part of a water-frontage subdivision at Kirribilli. The price realised is a satisfactory one, but at present is not divulged. This firm also sold two lots at Northbridge at 30s per foot, and a block in the Walker Estate at Concord at £2 per foot.

Messrs. Hugh Duff and Co. held their usual indoor sale on Thursday. The attendance was good. Mr. Carpenter, who occupied the rostrum, had an offer of £1425 for a water-frontage property at Abbotsford. This offer, although only a few pounds below at reserve, was refused. But a block of land at Katoomba was sold, and there was good bidding for land at Miranda. By private contract after the sale the firm disposed of a block of land in Chandos-street, North Sydney, for £400. Five allotments in the Killarney Extension Estate, St. George's Basin, went for £200, and a cottage in Blakesley-street, Chatswood, for £985.

Messrs. Stanton and Son had a fairly busy week. The firm disposed of a brick residence at Eastwood for £1425, a cottage at Chatswood for £900, an allotment of land at Nicholls-avenue, Haberfield, for £606, also 46 feet to Herbert-street, Summer Hill, for £138; a cottage, Wentworth-road, Burwood, for £650; and a cottage in Milton-street, Ashfield, for £730.

Messrs. Hardie and Gorman this week sold a block of land at Narrabeen at £6 per foot, a block at Waverley, in the Chesterfield Estate, at £3 per foot; also three blocks in the Mobbs Estate, at Epping, from 12s 6d to 22s 6d per foot; and two blocks at Cabramatta at £30 per acre.

The demand for land on the mountains still continues, and despite the fact that the winter months are approaching, when it is generally quiet in these parts, the number of visitors to the various mountain centres still keeps up well. Wentworth Falls and Leura properties are just now attracting a good deal of attention, in view of the fact that they will be the first centres to be lighted with electricity outside of Katoomba, and that already poles are being placed in position for the street lighting. There is therefore a good inquiry for land at Wentworth Falls, and the sale there this afternoon is likely to be well attended. This week Mr. J. T. Wall sold seven blocks in the heart of the village at the falls for £800. This is at an average of 25s per foot for second-class land, but as high as £3 per foot is now being paid for choice positions at Wentworth Falls. Several city merchants were amongst the purchasers of the seven blocks sold this week.

Messrs. Arthur Rickard and Co., Ltd., report a week's business above the average, although only four days' work was done. The sales at holiday resorts made up nearly one-third of the whole—a result probably of the Easter holidays. Woy Woy and Cronulla districts almost filled the list. Business in farms was also up to the average. Home sites, too, showed excellent results for an off week. Prospects for steady business were much better than in 1915, and they continue bright.

The southern highlands around Moss Vale and Bowral are becoming more and more popular tourist and residential centres. As an instance of this, Messrs. Morris and Co., of Bowral, report holding a very successful auction of properties in that township last Saturday. A pair of semi-detached W.B. cottages brought £500, and a second pair sold for £505, a third pair of cottages realised £665; Mabel Villa, a corner property, changed hands at £500, and Blandford, another corner property, was sold for £475. The shop property offered was passed in for private treaty.

Messrs. Horning and Co. report that the inquiry for water frontages and for week-end lots still continues. During the week 14 allotments were sold at Taren Point, at prices from 12s 6d to £2 per foot; also two lots in the Silver Beach Estate, several lots in the Como Estate, and also allotments in the Linton Park Estate. The firm this week sold a cottage in Park-parade, Waverley, for £1000, in the room of the association next Thursday. Messrs. Horning and Co. will submit a varied list of properties, including houses and villas at Darlinghurst and Dulwich Hill; allotments at Clifton Gardens, and an orchard at Pymble.

SUBDIVISION WORK.

EASTER HOLIDAY SALES.

The Easter holiday sales were fairly successful, especially those held at the seaside. At Cronulla Mr. Monro held two auctions. On Easter Saturday the Yowie Heights Estate at Port Hacking came under the hammer, and 37 lots were disposed of at prices from 10s to 25s per foot. The sale realised £1123. On Easter Monday Mr. Monro offered the Castlewood Extension Estate at Cronulla. On this occasion he sold 54 lots at prices from 12s to 44s per foot. This sale was very largely attended, and realised £3420.

On Easter Saturday Messrs. Hardie and Gorman held another sale on the Collaroy Park Estate at Narrabeen, which is the property of the Salvation Army. Eleven lots were disposed of at prices ranging from 25s to £2 15s per foot. This gave a total of £1170. Another allotment was sold this week in the same estate at £6 per foot.

On Easter Monday Messrs. Richardson and Wrench were at Austinmer, a South Coast seaside resort, which of late years has become very popular. It was a small subdivision the firm was handling, but four allotments were sold at prices from £2 to £2 10s per foot, and £694 was the total.

Messrs. Horning and Co. held a successful sale at Taren Point, where 14 allotments were disposed of for £667. The prices ranged from 12s 6d to £2 per foot.

TO-DAY'S AUCTIONS.

A sale which is sure to prove popular will be held at Wentworth Falls this afternoon, when Messrs. Hardie and Gorman will offer Mr. G. A. Wilson's property known as the Wentworth Heights Estate. The land fronts the main Bathurst-road, and is only a few minutes from the railway station. This is without doubt some of the best land at Wentworth Falls, a district in the Blue Mountains which, despite the war, is making splendid progress, and will, before the end of this year, be lighted with electricity, and at no distant date will be provided with a capital water supply.

To-day there is to be a sale of valuable business sites at Blacktown, also a residence, large sheds, and shops. City water passes the property. This estate is known as Railway Station Estate, and the auctioneers are Messrs. H. Heavener and Co.

At Fairfield this afternoon the Township Estate will be brought under the hammer of Messrs. Watkin and Watkin. The subdivision consists of 85 choice building sites. The terms of purchase have been made very easy.

Mr. R. T. Forsyth will, this afternoon, offer at his rooms, Willoughby, a number of cottages and allotments at Chatswood, Willoughby, and Roseville. These are good properties, and should attract attention.

GOVERNMENT ACTION.

The meeting of the shareholders of the Colonial Sugar Refining Company was held yesterday, Mr. H. E. Kater, chairman of directors, presiding. The report showed a profit for the year of £261,250, and a dividend at the rate of 6¼ per cent. was recommended.

The chairman, in moving the adoption of the report, said:—

Six months ago we could not submit a statement of our earnings, and it has not been an easy matter to complete in the time available that which is now in your hands. The fact is that refining sugar for other people is a very complicated proceeding; and when I tell you that we have paid four and a half millions for the sugar bought on the Government account, you will see that great exactness in figures is necessary. Fortunately, there has been no friction or difficulty, and the officials with whom we have had business relations have met us in a fair and reasonable way.

As to the accounts, I should first mention that, as the companies have been officially advised to transfer to some account any balance standing to the credit of the profit and loss account so as to avoid claims for income tax, we have thought it well to place to a reserve fund £200,000 of the balance carried forward 12 months since. Then, we have revived the system of making provision for depreciation, and, after charging the cost of certain renewals, £78,973 has been added to the £500,000 which has stood unchanged for so many years. There is something to be said against, as well as for, this charge on the gross profits, but it has seemed to the board expedient to allow thus to what an extent the replacement of the plant should be provided for. In other respects the various items in the statement do not call for explanation, except that there is no entry for the dividend on the shares in the new company. About this I would say that none was earned in the preceding half-year, as the shares were only paid for at the end of September. The second dividend will be declared to-day, and was not therefore available by March 31. No works of importance are in progress, or, indeed, contemplated during the continuance of the war. The high cost of material and labour and the difficulty in procuring any machinery in England for the present forbid any extension of our factories.

And in Queensland there is another reason for not incurring capital expenditure, namely, that the provisions of the Cane Prices Act now in force are such that no sugar manufacturer could think of enlarging or improving his mill until it is clear from the proceedings of the boards that he can count on getting a reasonable return on such investment. With the price of cane fixed year by year, and a continuing uncertainty, not only about the profit obtainable, but also as to the supply of the factory, we have causes of instability in the industry far more serious than fluctuations in the price of sugar and adverse weather conditions which we have always been prepared to meet. We have now arranged for the building of a steamer to take the place of the one commandeered by the Admiralty, but there is uncertainty as to her cost and the probable date of delivery. However, we believe the former will not be low, and, as to the latter, it is hoped that we may get delivery in time for her to be used for the season of 1917. I regret to state that since our last meeting there have been two more deaths among our employees serving in the war. But they continue to enlist, and it has not been an easy matter to keep all the work going with so large a proportion of the young men away. One circumstance I may mention as showing the spirit of the boys: a year ago we took eight into the laboratory staff as they left school; of these, five are now with the army—all about 18 years old.

As to the election of a director, it should be said that Colonel Onslow has left Sydney on service since his notice of candidature was received. I shall have to declare him elected, but arrangements have been made for his retirement if his absence causes inconvenience in the management of our affairs. It is very desirable that your directors should always be on the spot; still we feel sure that you do not wish Colonel Onslow to forfeit his seat on the board because of his temporary absence on military duty.

The report was adopted.

UNATTENDED MOTOR CARS.

The Metropolitan Superintendent of Police, Mr. Tait, desires the public to be warned against the practice of leaving motor cars unattended, as at the present time motor thieves are about. Their procedure of late is as follows:—The motor car is driven off during the owner's or the chauffeur's absence, to some secluded spot in the suburbs, and the tyres and tools are then taken. Yesterday a car belonging to Captain Woodburn, of the Engineers' Depot, was taken away from Castlereagh-street, and nothing further has been seen of it. It was valued at £600.

PRINCE ALFRED'S SON.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE HERALD.

Sir,—In your issue of to-day I read that Mr. Haynes, M.L.A., suggests changing the name of the Royal Prince Alfred Hospital, in view of the late Prince Alfred having become a German, and that his sons are now fighting with the Germans. Considering that the only son of Prince Alfred, Duke of Edinburgh and Duke of Saxe-Coburg Gotha, died years before Prince Alfred, his father, Mr. Haynes evidently knows very little about our English Royal family.

A.M.P. SOCIETY:

REVIEW OF YEAR'S WORK.

EFFECTS OF THE WAR.

CAUTIOUS POLICY APPROVED.

The sixty-seventh annual meeting of the Australian Mutual Provident Society was held at the head office, in Pitt-street, yesterday. There was a fairly large gathering of members, and Mr. A. W. Meeks, M.L.C., chairman of directors, presided. The annual report was published in the "Herald" on April 20.

The need for caution in the administration of the affairs of the society, while the unique conditions created by the war existed, and the manner in which the directors were observing that duty, were referred to by the chairman in moving the adoption of the annual report.

"When the war broke out," he said, "we encouraged the members of our staff to enlist by agreeing to pay them their full salaries, in addition to their military pay, and to keep their positions open for them. I am pleased to be able to state that 136 members of our staff have gone to the front or are in training. (Applause.) Of these I regret to say that three are dead and one is missing. Their colleagues remaining behind have generously undertaken some part of their duties, but we have been compelled to engage much additional assistance, with the result that the payments for salaries show an increase over those of last year.

"Furthermore, we agreed to impose an extra war risk of only 5 per cent. on new policy-holders, the same rate as on those already assured whose policies are subject to war risks. Of course, ordinary policy-holders assured prior to the outbreak of war were free to undertake military duty without any extra premium. The corresponding rates charged by British offices ranged up to £21 per cent., and many offices declined to undertake the risks on any terms. The total sum received by us on account of these extra risks during 1915 was £24,870, while the war claims amounted to £343,053, including claims under policies issued to civilians prior to the war. You will see, therefore, that the society carried a heavy burden, the weight of which has fallen largely on the shoulders of the general body of the policy-holders. But we do not anticipate that there will be any expression of dissatisfaction with the course we have pursued. (Applause.)

"When the Federal Government appealed for funds to provide for the equipment and despatch of Australian soldiers and sailors, we met the applications for loans by a contribution of £1,250,000, in addition to £150,000 which we had already subscribed to the British loan.

ANALYSIS OF YEAR'S WORK.

"In the ordinary department the new business consisted of 22,019 policies, assuring £6,784,635, an increase on the figures of the previous year of £184,766, and surpassed only in the society's history by the figures for 1912 and 1913. But for the war and the drought, which seriously affected Queensland, there seems little reason to doubt that we should have had a record year. It is interesting to note that of the new business no less than 6929 policies, assuring £2,165,533, or 31.9 per cent., were on the lives of existing members. The business, too, has proved to be of a very stable character, for, notwithstanding the extra death claims, to which I have referred, the net increase in the business in force was £3,368,236, a decrease of only £12,509 on the corresponding figures for 1914. In this connection it is interesting to note that the average sum assured under new policies has increased from £294 in 1914 to £308 in 1915. This increase is largely due to the imposition of the Federal Probate Tax, to provide for which persons of large means have effected policies the proceeds of which are to be devoted to payment of the tax.

"The death claims amounted to £1,390,751, an increase of £339,202 on the figures of the previous year. This increase is less than the sum paid for war claims. Even if these war claims be included, the total is only 73 per cent. of the amount expected according to the mortality table on which our calculations are based. A pleasing feature is that the surrenders are less by £42,629 than they were last year. The expenses over which we have any control show an increase of only £3,980, notwithstanding the increase in salaries, but the taxes have increased by £10,163. Over these, of course, we have no control. Nevertheless, the expense rate is only 13.21 per cent. of the premium receipts, a reduction of about 3s 2d per cent. on the rate for 1914.

WAR AND LIFE INSURANCE.

"The question of the effect of the war on the position of life offices is being made the subject of very serious discussion among British life offices. These offices are very large investors in what are known as Stock Exchange securities, which have fallen very much in market value during the last year and a half, and the question of the treatment of these in the cases of offices making their periodical valuations during 1915 has given rise to great controversy in the assurance and financial press in Great Britain. Several palliatives have been suggested, viz.:—That the valuations should be postponed; that there should be no distribution of surplus; that the certificate required by the Board of Trade to the effect that the assets in the balance-sheet are of the value stated should not be required. Fortunately we are concerned in the matter only to a very remote degree. The few securities of the kind mentioned held by us are some colonial Government interminable stocks, and we are writing these down so as to place them on a permanent 4 per cent. basis. This will explain the sum of £26,533 written off securities. Terminable stocks have always been treated by us on the amortisation principle.

"From the balance-sheet you will see that the assets have increased by £1,749,504, and now amount to £35,486,413. Bank deposits and balances have decreased by £207,194, but still stand at £471,587. In the present disturbed condition of affairs we still think it prudent to hold considerable funds in a liquid state.

POLICY OF CAUTION.

"You may remember that last year I told you that owing to the then existing condition of drought we had agreed to suspend payment of interest in cases where the mortgagors were financially embarrassed. The total so suspended amounted to £29,508, and to provide against loss we made a special reserve of £10,000. Owing to the favourable season, the greater portion of this amount has now been paid, no loss has been incurred, and the reserve of £10,000 is no longer required; but in pursuance of a policy of caution we have reserved another £10,000, which is included in the amount of £54,260 shown in the investment fluctuation fund. We propose to continue adding to this fund each year."

The chairman referred appreciatively to the services of Sir Alexander MacCormick, who had resigned his position in order to go on active service; and of the late Mr. George Randell, who was chairman of the West Australia board.

REPORTS FROM BRANCHES.

The report of the New Zealand branch was given by the chairman, of Victorian branch by Mr. M. H. Strathan, who seconded the motion for the adoption of the report, Queensland by Sir Robert Philp, South Australia by Sir J. L. Stirling, Western Australia by Mr. James Morrison, and Tasmania by Sir Elliott Lewis.

The motion for the adoption of the report was carried unanimously.

Colonel James Burns, M.L.C., and Messrs. Adrian Knox, K.C., and S. Hordern were re-elected directors, and Mr. T. F. H. Mackenzie was re-elected auditor.

AUBURN SHOOTING.

Go Chay Mew, one of the Chinese wounded by the desperado who broke into the hut at Lidcombe on Friday night week, died at St. Joseph's Hospital, Auburn, on Friday morning. Deceased had been shot in the back, and from the first his condition was critical.

The other two wounded Chinese are progressing favourably.

CHARLOTTE-PLACE.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE HERALD.

Sir,—Will you allow me a little space in your columns to report to the public the attitude of the Australian Historical Society on the question of the renaming of Grosvenor-street. It has been suggested that the street should be renamed Shearston-street in honour of the gentleman who did so much for the comfort and welfare of the sailors at the Royal Naval House. Our council consists of gentlemen who have a very high opinion of Mr. Shearston's services, and who believe it would be difficult to overvalue his efforts towards the amelioration of the sailor's lot. But at the same time our council is strongly of the opinion that the craze for altering the names of streets is becoming intolerable, and it has passed the following resolution:—"Whilst recognising the excellent services rendered to the community by the late Mr. Shearston, this council is of the opinion that if any change is to be made in the name of Grosvenor-street its original name, Charlotte-place, should be restored."

The most appropriate and least inconvenient method of commemorating Mr. Shearston's services would be to attach his name to the institution in which he found his life's work, and to call henceforth that institution "The Royal Shearston Naval House."

I am, etc.,
K. R. CRAMP, Hon. Secretary

FALL OF A SCAFFOLDING.

Goodman v Audsley.

Mr. Chubb, instructed by Messrs. Kershaw, Matthews, and Lane, appeared for Garner Goodman, carpenter, in support of an application for leave to proceed with an action for injuries, notwithstanding that he had not given the statutory notice of the accident within six weeks of its occurrence. Mr. Boyce, instructed by Messrs. Gould and Shaw, appeared for respondent, Frederick Audsley, builder and contractor, to oppose the application. It appeared from applicant's affidavit that while working in the service of respondent at a building in Hale-road, Mosman, a scaffolding collapsed, and a falling brick struck and injured one of his feet. For some weeks he was not aware that the injury would prove serious, and for that reason he thought that the £1 a week, which he was paid by the Federal Mutual Insurance Company, of Australia, for some time, under the Workmen's Compensation Act, was sufficient, but subsequently he found that he would probably be incapacitated from following his occupation for a considerable period. He also said that before the injury threatened to result in permanent disability, he joined the Australian Expeditionary Forces, but in camp, whenever he attempted to march with his division he had to fall out, as his injured foot would not stand the strain. He then consulted Messrs. Kershaw, Matthews, and Lane with a view to taking legal proceedings against respondent, and learned for the first time that six weeks' notice of the accident should have been served upon respondent. The grounds of his application were that there was reasonable excuse for the notice not having been given, as he did not know until four weeks after the statutory period had expired that the notice was necessary, and that respondent would not be prejudiced by the absence of the notice, inasmuch as he was present when the accident occurred. Mr. Boyce, after reading affidavits by respondent and others for the purpose of showing that applicant had been fully compensated for his injuries, which had since been cured, contended that ignorance of the necessity for six weeks' notice was not a reasonable excuse, and that owing to the absence of the notice required by the Act the evidence of several witnesses material to respondent's case could not be obtainable, and therefore his defence would be prejudiced. It was evident that up to a certain date applicant did not propose to make any additional claim upon respondent, as he thought the result of the injury would be of short duration, and respondent was thus thrown off his guard.

The Prothonotary said he would look at the affidavits and the various cases cited on the point, and would probably give his decision on Monday.

COMMONWEALTH ARBITRATION COURT.

(Before Mr. Justice Powers.)

POST AND TELEGRAPH EMPLOYEES' CLAIMS.

The hearing was continued of the claims for increased wages and better working conditions, filed by the Australian Post and Telegraph Officers' Association, against the Commonwealth Public Service Commissioner and the Postmaster-General.

W. Lynch, a monitor in the Wahroonga Telephone Exchange, stated that he worked from 8 a.m. to 3 p.m. on Monday to Friday, and from 8 a.m. to 1 p.m. on Saturday one week, and from 2 p.m. to 10 p.m. for five days, and from 6 p.m. to 9 p.m. on Saturday the next, an average of 39 hours weekly per fortnight. It was possible for the department to ask the men to work 11½ hours before overtime was paid. Half an hour was allowed in which to get meals, which he did not consider long enough in which to masticate his food and safeguard his health.

W. R. Bradney, of the city exchange, said the monitors in the telephone exchanges prior to 1904 received £114 per annum. He could not say if £126 per year was then paid. The maximum salary was now £162. He did not consider that the increase given since then had been a satisfactory one, owing to the great increase in the cost of living. He was in favour of the claims submitted, but was not anxious to see the hours in the Sydney exchange increased from 37 to 39. His ordinary working hours were from 10.45 a.m. to 6.15 p.m., and from 1 p.m. to 5 p.m. on Saturday, with time off for meals.

Joseph W. Kitts, mail officer in the despatch room at the Sydney G.P.O., said that his present salary was £240 per annum. The minimum rate was £216, and the maximum £252. Mail officers were previously in receipt of £210, but when the positions were regraded as the result of increases granted to the sorters, their wages were increased by £6 a year. He considered that the minimum wage of a mail officer should be £228. He considered that 6½ hours per ordinary day, and 3½ hours on Saturday were sufficiently long to work as he had to do. He thought that overtime at the rate of time and a half for all time worked over a scheduled number of hours daily was but fair. Double time for the whole of Sunday night was, in his opinion, reasonable.

The taking of evidence had not concluded when the Court rose.

QUARTER SESSIONS.

(Before Judge Backhouse and Jury.)

Mr. Herbert Harris, Crown Prosecutor.

STOLEN OATS.

John Edward Hinch, 24, and John O'Connor, 33, who had been convicted on a charge of stealing four bags of oats belonging to the Melbourne Steamship Company, at Sydney, on February 8, were called up for sentence. Hinch was ordered to be imprisoned for nine months, and O'Connor was sentenced to six months' gaol. Mr. W. Moseley appeared for the prisoners.

AN ALTERED PLEA.

When Donald Fraser M'Pherson, 37, who had pleaded guilty to two charges of stealing, a charge of escaping from the Central Police Station, another charge of breaking and entering a pawnbroker's shop, and stealing therein, and a fifth charge of maliciously shooting at James M'Donald with intent to do grievous bodily harm, at Sydney, on February 11, was called up for sentence, his Honor said that in a statement which was handed up to him by the prisoner he (M'Pherson) said that he never intended to shoot M'Donald, but only wanted to frighten him. "If that is so," continued the Judge, "you should have pleaded not guilty to the charge, for which you are liable to be sentenced to penal servitude for life."

M'Pherson: I have no one to support my statement.

His Honor: It is my duty to point this out to you. Of course, it will be for the jury to decide whether your story is true.

M'Pherson withdrew his plea of guilty, and was remanded to come up for trial on the charge. Sentence on the other charges was deferred until the shooting case had been disposed of.

ATTEMPTED SHOPBREAKING.

Joseph Geoghegan, 32, who had been convicted on a charge of attempting to break and enter a jeweller's shop, with intent to steal, in Park-street, Sydney, on February 11, was sentenced to two years' imprisonment with hard labour. His Honor said that if after Geoghegan had served a portion of the sentence he was satisfied that he (prisoner) had been really working since he served his last sentence he would recommend his release on license.

JUDGE DIRECTS ACQUITTAL.

Owen O'Donnell, a middle-aged cabman, was acquitted on a charge of burglariously breaking and entering the dwelling of Horace Schonhardt, a butcher, in Elizabeth-street, Redfern, on March 11, with intent to steal.

The evidence for the Crown rested on the evidence of one of Schonhardt's employees, who saw the accused in the shop, and threw a boot at him. O'Donnell was arrested by a constable as he was leaving the shop, which contained nothing but a butcher's block.

O'Donnell's defence was that he was drunk at the time, and had no burglarious intent.

His Honor said that the evidence did not disclose any intent to steal, and directed the jury to return a verdict of not guilty. This was done, and O'Donnell was discharged.

APPEAL.

At the Central Police Court on February 7 Mr. Macfarlane, C.S.M., fined Samuel Paltie, a second-hand dealer, carrying on business in Campbell-street, Sydney, £25, in default three months' imprisonment, with hard labour, on being convicted on a charge of attempting to sell, without the consent of the Minister for Defence, on Saturday, January 1, a pair of military boots, in contravention of the War Precautions Regulations. Against the conviction Paltie appealed, being represented by Mr. J. W. Abigail, and after fresh evidence had been given his Honor confirmed the conviction, with £3 3s costs. The appellant, however, was allowed to pay the fine in three monthly instalments, the first payment to be made on May 28.

ADMIRALTY COURT.

(Before the Registrar, Mr. C. R. Walsh.)

INQUIRY AS TO DAMAGES.

Hazelwood S.S. Company v the Saros.

Mr. Broomfield, instructed by Messrs. Lambton and Milford, appeared for the Hazelwood S.S. Company, and Mr. Pickburn, instructed by Messrs. Sly and Russell, for the owners of the Saros. This was a reference to the Registrar to settle the amount of damage done to plaintiff company's vessel, Southborough, arising out of a collision between the Saros, Herga, and Southborough. When the case was again called Mr. Broomfield announced that it had been agreed that the amount of damages to be found in favour of plaintiff company was £1309 13s 7d. This included £592 16s for loss of hire and carrying interest at 6 per cent., running from July 1, 1915, until payment, and the balance bearing the same interest between certain dates. The costs of the reference to be paid by defendants.

LAND APPEAL COURT.

(Before Mr. H. A. G. Curry, President, and Messrs. W. Houston and C. E. Rennie, Commissioners.)

The Hay Land Board referred for decision an application by George William Barnett for appraisement of the capital value of certain lands comprised in conditional purchases and conditional leases in Hay. Mr. Pike (instructed by Mr. C. W. Alexander, of Hay), appeared for the appellants; and Mr. Hanbury Davies for the respondent. The Court reserved its decision.

L. W. Guest appealed against the decision of the Narrabri Land Board in respect of his two applications for permission to perform the condition of residence attaching to his conditional purchases in the town of Boggabri. Mr. Pike appeared for the appellant in each case; and Mr. Hanbury Davies for the Crown. The Court remitted the two cases back to the board for rehearing and further evidence, the evidence already given to be taken as evidence at the re-hearing. The deposits lodged with notice of appeal were directed to be refunded.

The Minister for Lands referred for return to the Coonabarabran Land Board, for rehearing, the question of compensation for certain improvements on land withdrawn from Edward James and Eric Edward Lowe's improvement lease No. 838, Coonabarabran. Mr. Hanbury Davies appeared for the Crown; there was no appearance for the respondent. The President said that, having regard to the Court's decision in re Scott, 26 L.C.C., the Court would remit the case back to the board for rehearing and futher evidence, and sustain the Minister's appeal.

R. McCoy appealed against two decisions of the Inverell Land Board in respect of his claims against George Arthur Vivers for a contribution towards the cost of rabbit-proof fencing on their common boundaries in the parish of Buckley, county of Arawatta, Inverell. Mr. Coffey (instructed by Messrs. Avern and McIntyre, Inverell) appeared for the appellant in each case, and Mr. Pike (instructed by Messrs. Borthwick and Butler, Inverell) for the respondent. The Court sustained the appeal, and remitted the cases back to the board for necessary action, and to continue the hearing of the cases on their merits, the deposits on appeal to be refunded.

THE DIFFERENCE BETWEEN

STEAM PIPE AND BOILER COVERINGS

and ordinary lagging is so pronounced—showing 30 per cent. greater efficiency—that it can be likened to the difference between ordinary lagging and unlagged pipes.

The superiority of NEWALL'S MAGNESIA COVERINGS has been proved. They have been widely adopted as the standard in Steam Pipe and Boiler Insulation, and are used exclusively by N.S.W. and Victorian Governments, and N.S.W. Railways, being used throughout the Ultimo and White Bay Power Houses. They possess this advantage, that, should you at any time decide to change your steam pipeline, they can be taken down and re-erected without loss of efficiency. A further feature is their neatness. May we send you Samples?

BETTER RESULTS AT LESS COST means a decided increase on the profit side of your ledger. If you want maximum results from your power plant—you should try
"PIONEER" LEATHER BELTING.
It grips and never slips—thus you get better results at less cost.
"Pioneer" is strong, durable, and efficient. It will keep your pulleys on the turn as long as you keep up the motive power.
Made in Australia, from selected Ox Hide—specially tanned and prepared in our own factory. Let us send you a trial length to test its merits—proof is better than platitude.

HOUSES AND LAND FOR SALE.

COUNTRY VISITORS

are invited to inspect the two following Estates, which are the best gilt-edged Propositions in the Real Estate Market:—

(1) KURNELL . . . the Historic place where Captain Cook landed . . . the very Birthplace of our entity . . . the Cradle of our National Life. Kurnell is only an hour from the city, and we are offering there for private sale the SILVER BEACH ESTATE, containing lovely, well-grassed Allotments, shaded by Banksias, only ten minutes' walk from Kurnell's famous fishing grounds, and facing the great white Silver Beach. Prices from 10/ per foot. There are also a few Beach frontages left.

(2) COMO. On the line connecting Sydney and the Federal Port, where the big bridge carrying four lines of rail is to be constructed after the duplication works now nearing completion on that line. Como will then be on the line connecting both the Federal Port and the Federal Capital with Sydney (as a glance at the map at the back of the Railway Timetable will show). Como is on Beautiful George's River, and a little over half-an-hour's run in the train from the city . . . and must become the Mosman of the Illawarra Line. The Como Estate contains fine Allotments, with glorious panoramic views, and, for the period of the War only, the prices range from 10/ to £2 per foot, which represents only a fraction of what this land will be worth later on.

TERMS for BOTH ESTATES.—£1 Deposit, Balance 10/ a month. Interest 5 per cent.

INSPECT these two Properties before returning home. A REPRESENTATIVE will be on the Estate at the week-end.

WHILST YOU ARE IN TOWN
WHY NOT LOOK UP
HABERFIELD GARDEN SUBURB, and make it an objective of your future home?

HABERFIELD TO-DAY IS UNDOUBTEDLY VERY ATTRACTIVE TO THOSE WHO HAVE BEEN USED TO LIVING IN OPEN SPACES.

WE WANT YOU TO LISTEN TO OUR PROPOSITION:

We have beautiful Cottage Homes to offer you amidst picturesque surroundings, with all modern up-to-date equipments. WHY NOT SECURE ONE OF THESE CHARMING HOMES, and pay us, say, £50 to £100, and then let us secure a first-class tenant for you, who will keep the property as you would yourself, and at the same time help you to pay off and secure yourself in a few years a home that you will be proud of?

Nearly everyone whose business takes them to the Country has in mind some time or other to settle in the City. DOES NOT OUR PROPOSITION APPEAL TO YOU?

Our Buildings are so substantial that they will be as good in ten years as they are to-day. All the time improvements in the locality are helping to harden values, and make these properties of special worth to you later on when you go into occupation.

DO NOT MISS AN OPPORTUNITY SUCH AS WE CAN PLACE BEFORE YOU.
THE INTEREST IS AT THE RATE OF 5 PER CENT.

As an example:—You can purchase a Cottage from us for, say, £850 or £950, up to £1200 or £1400, simply paying us a deposit of £50 to £100, and then say, 25/ to 30/ per week, which will be practically the amount of rent received if you let it, and if you occupy the cottage you will live under very favourable conditions.

FELLOWSHIP OF THE WILD.

(BY W. M. SHERRIE.)

In many of their traits and habits birds manifest something of the characteristics of the human species. A nation which may be torn by internecine strife will suspend its domestic feuds and fights to resist an outside intruder; a quarrelling family will commonly unite to attack anyone who presumes to interfere in its private affairs. In a large measure the same tendency will be found to prevail in wild life. The writer had his memory in regard to this matter pointedly refreshed during the past nesting season. While strolling through a belt of she-oak and river gums he was fiercely attacked by a pair of black and white flycatchers (wagtails), whose active resentment of the intruder's presence in that particular locality made it appear that they had a nest, or young ones, close at hand. There were at the time no other birds about. A close search was made in the trees (these birds always build low down in dwarf timber, preferably a branch that is hanging over water)) and on the ground, but no trace could be seen of either nest or young ones.

The search was about to be given up when there was noticed an inanimate brown patch beside a tuft of grass which at first appeared to be merely a slight variation in the prevailing colour of the landscape. A nearer inspection disclosed a dark grey, fully-fledged young bird, instinctively intent upon mimicking the form and the colour of its surroundings to escape detection. The bird, however, was not a member of the flycatcher family. It was apparently a young woodswallow which had left the nest somewhat prematurely, and was still unable to fly. As soon as it was handled the bird left no room for doubt as to its identity, as it opened its yellow bill and gave vent to the familiar, sweet note of the species. Its call, too, seemed to be the signal for a renewed and more vicious attack upon the intruder by the flycatchers, indicating clearly enough that this was the young bird which they were intent upon guarding to the full extent of their powers. While this was going on the parent woodswallows were a considerable distance away engaged in hunting insects. When they some time later returned and sought out the young one, which had been placed on the branch of a she-oak, the wagtails retired from the scene as if they realised that they had done all that could be reasonably expected of them.

It is quite a common thing to see wagtails attacking woodswallows, which venture into their locality when they have nests or young. Yet when the young of the woodswallow are in danger the wagtails will become quite pugnacious in concern for their interests. But this fellowship does not appear to be confined to one particular species. It is a common thing for the black and white flycatchers to nest in the same locality as butcher-birds. As a general rule birds, as if by tacit agreement, seem to select and keep exclusively to their own area in the breeding season, and they are apt to become extremely resentful if other nesting pairs venture to take up their quarters in the same locality. The butcher-bird, however, although very aggressive and destructive among small birds, does not seem to object to the flycatchers nesting close at hand. It is at least certain that Cracticus destructor never interferes with them, and often renders them very great protective service by driving off feathered enemies, such as hawks and crows, from the locality. This, indeed, appears to be one of the reasons why the flycatchers nest near the fearless butcher-bird.

In raiding a magpie's nest to secure young birds a couple of bush boys waited until the adults were off at a considerable distance, as these birds are extremely vicious, and in protecting their young will give intruders a very lively time. In this case the boys, thinking the coast clear, set about the task of capturing the young magpies, when they were surprised and disconcerted by a violent attack from a pair of butcher-birds. The attack was so vicious and so persistent that the raid was temporarily held up, and presently the adult magpies returned to give battle also to the intruders. In the course of the busy few minutes which ensued, one of the boys received a stunning blow which penetrated his soft hat, and inflicted an ugly wound on the scalp. The ultimate outcome of the encounter was that those boys unanimously agreed that the young magpies were not worth having, anyway, and in a somewhat dishevelled and crestfallen state they retired from the scene, leaving the birds in triumphant possession of the field. Any laughing jackass will feed and endeavour to protect the young of any other birds of the same species, but the writer has never known them to act in that way towards the young of different species.

One of the most interesting examples of fellowship as it is manifested within the circle of one particular species is afforded by the bottle-swallows, or fairy martins. These dainty little birds are as co-operative in their habits as a hive of bees. In the building of their spouted mud nests a whole community of from 20 to 50 birds will take part. The nests are built in clusters, or rows, under the overhanging banks of creeks or rocks, and the whole of the members of one colony will engage simultaneously in the work of carrying the mud and forming the nests. "Many hands make light work"; and the rapidity with which one group of fairy martins will construct two or three dozen nests, carrying a mere speck of mud at a time, is surprising indeed. If the nests are broken down by boys—as they frequently are—the birds seem to redouble their energy in the work of reconstructing them.

THE WOOL TRADE.

VERY STRONG POSITION.

An active inquiry continues for the small available supplies at very firm values; and all the factors in evidence point to a maintenance of the very strong position now occupied by all classes of wool. Any passed-in lots suitable for requirements command an advance on the auction bids, and scoured skin wools, from the local fellmongery establishments, realise late full rates. Very fair quantities of autumn-shorn wool are arriving in store, and being held for the concluding two series of the current statistical year, opening on June 5 and 26 respectively.

The strength of the wool position is reflected by the recent sharp rise in merinos at Bradford. Within one week merino tops have soared up 3d per lb, on a cheerful market. Fine crossbreds have shown some improvement, but only ½d to 1d, while medium crossbreds have remained stationary throughout the month. When once the Allies settled down to the creation of fresh armies, and equipment was needed for the forces, crossbred wool soared to record heights; but as the war progressed, and crossbred supplies for British needs became somewhat restricted, embargoes on the export of crossbred wool steadied or weakened crossbred values. Fortunately the more recent embargo on the export of crossbred was not imposed till the bulk of last season's growth had been disposed of; since then, however, the balance had to meet a weaker demand, and lower values ruled. Merinos not coming within the export embargo have pretty well held their own. A "bear" movement at Bradford sought to bring values back for all classes; but it speedily spent itself; and now that the merino position is so unmistakably strong up go the prices for merino tops to a shave within record rates. There is to-day a difference of 14d per lb. between the price of sixty-fours tops, as compared to April 30 of last year; whereas there is only a difference of 3d in that of forty-sixes. On February 18 last forty-sixes were 1½d higher than to-day, whereas sixty-fours were only ½d dearer than to-day's quotations. Tops are required as fast as the combing mills can run the different qualities off the machines; not only in the United Kingdom, but also in the United States. During the middle of February, when merino tops at Bradford were ½d above yesterday's quotations, it was realised at Boston, and other wool centres in the United States, that the exceptional prices were due to the world's shortage of wool, accentuated by embargos from British colonies and the difficulty of shipping wool from Buenos Ayres and other River Plate ports. That was unquestionably the position of both raw wool and tops at that time; yet Bradford set out to secure cheaper wool and lower the quotations for tops. By the first week in March there was a drop of 2d in merino tops, which weakened a further 2d by the first week in April. Evidently despairing of making any further headway on the downward course, a rise started a fortnight ago, and two high jumps have been made since, with evident gusto, for the market is "cheerful," with more inquiry than previously for all descriptions. At the time Bradford started on the down grade Boston said:—"The market in tops is stronger. There is just as much call from the mills for stocks of all kinds. Everything is getting dearer, because the stocks of wool are becoming depleted every day. As far as tops are concerned, the mills are taking them just as fast as they are made. The amount on hand for sale amounts to practically nothing at all."

Naturally the movement in Bradford and at the London sales early last month had some effect in the United States, but the disturbance was only slight. The "Wool and Cotton Reporter" of March 9 remarking:—For the most part the wool market in Boston for the week under review has been quiet. The trade has been waiting to see the result of the international situation. In London attempts are being made to lower the cost of wool, and this has caused a hesitancy in the market. When this matter is settled there will probably be much more activity. Manufacturers, moreover, seem to be pretty well supplied with wool for the present, but the mills are operating to full capacity, so they will have to come into the market more and more later on to get fresh supplies.

How large a part the United States has played in the maintenance of wool values in the Sydney market may be seen in the wool exports for the nine months ended March 31 last. During that period 222,746 bales, weighing 73,532,6?1lb, were shipped from this State to the United Kingdom, valued at £3,?55,821. In the same period there was shipped to the United States 194,797 bales, weighing 63,566,816lb, valued at £3,254,182. There were 27,949 fewer bales shipped to the United States; but, through the higher priced purchases of the bulk of the wool, the difference in value was only £1649. This is unique, and is an instance of the changes that have come over the wool situation during the war. Manufacturers in the United Kingdom, like those in the United States and Japan, have been working to profit. There has been no stacking up of wool; and as preparations are being made by the allies in case of another winter campaign, for further army equipment, the prospects are for a continuance of present very high wool values for merinos, and an improving tendency for crossbreds.

Rates current for the principal descriptions of the staple in the Sydney market may be given as follows:—

MERINO TOPS AGAIN HIGHER.

According to our cable of yesterday's date, the Bradford tops market was cheerful, and there was more inquiry for all qualities. Quotations show a rise of 1d per lb in merino counts, on top of a rise of 2d last week; fine crossbreds a rise of ½d on top of 1d last week; medium crossbred qualities, however, show no change, prices remaining unchanged throughout the month on forty-sixes and forties, and only ½d rise on fifties. Prices for merino tops are now again very nearly at record heights, yesterday's quotations being within ½d of the prices on February 18. How considerably merino tops have advanced compared to crossbreds in April of last year may be seen by the tables as follows:—

INTERSTATE MARKETS.

There has been a holiday tone in the Melbourne market, and very little, if any, business transacted. In Brisbane, the wool coming forward for the sales set down for May 30, 31, and June 1 is not as heavy as usual at this time of the year owing to a dispute between the shearers and shed hands on the one hand and the growers on the other. In many parts of the west of the northern State shearing has been at a standstill through strikes; consequently wool is arriving slowly at the seaboard. Sales, however, will probably take place at the end of May; but the series set down for three weeks later may be postponed. The wools catalogued and sold in the principal centres compare with the corresponding period last season as follows:—

WOOL RECEIPTS.

There has been a decrease in receipts of wool during the week by both rail and boat compared to the corresponding period last year. The figures for the season show a marked decrease by rail, but a fair increase by boat. The quantity compares as follows:—

Two steamers cleared for London, including the steamer Carpentaria with only two bales. The principal shipments, with vessels and quantities for the week, also total for the season to date, compared to the corresponding period last year, are as follow:—

LAND FOR SOLDIERS.

Mr. Francis Bacon writes:—I read a very sensible practical letter in your columns lately from Mr. John Hain, on the subject of settling returned soldiers on the land, and I cordially endorse all he says, viz., that it is much better to settle men on a small area of land near railways, and with a good rainfall. There is an immense area of good land on the North Coast that will grow almost anything, from apples and bananas to sugar cane, where good money can be made out of pigs and butter farming. Then there is all the splendid country from Manilla north, by Inverell to the Queensland border, where heavy crops of wheat, corn, and potatoes can be grown, and where the rainfall averaged 25 to 32 inches for the last 30 years. The landholders are willing to sell all or part of their holdings at prices that men can do well at. It is absolutely absurd and cruel to put men on 2500 acres out towards Hillston. Such land wants a lot of capital to improve it, and could only be worked with sheep. I believe it is also proposed to resume some of the western land leases in the Walgett-Brewarrina districts. This is no place for a poor man. Nothing less than 10,000 acres is any good, as you must rely on sheep, and it takes three to five acres to carry a sheep in good times, and in bad seasons it won't carry anything. Cultivation is no good. I used to get three to four fair crops of hay at Dumble in ten years to feed the station horses, but you could not rely on wheat to make a living. In conclusion, I strongly advise to put the men on a small area of rich land, in a district with a good rainfall. If necessary, buy well situated land, and give the settlers long terms. We have all the organisation that is required. I think Sir Rider Haggard has had a hurried look at some of our best country, and he will agree that to put men who are used to climatic conditions in England out on the drought country is madness and cruelty. I would like the matter to be in the hands of practical men of experience, and as few politicians as possible.

NEW ZEALAND PRODUCE.

BIG EXPORT FIGURES.

The importance of the freezing industry to New Zealand has never been brought so clearly before the people of the country as during the last year or so. It is now about 13 months since the Imperial Government commandeered the whole of our output of meat, and latterly the cheese has gone in the same direction. Under that scheme we have exported to England 624,392 quarters of beef, 2,866,172 carcases of mutton, 4,096,113 carcases of lamb, of a total value of £8,448,317. The value of our meat exports for the twelve months ended March 31 last was £7,423,399, an increase of nearly a million and a half on the figures for the previous year. During the same period the quantity of cheese exported increased from 755,392cwt to 764,401cwt, valued at £2,832,000 and £3,197,000 respectively. In fact, the total exports from the Dominion for the year were valued at no less than £33,781,711. Re-exports amounted to £673,642, leaving the amount for which New Zealand was responsible at £33,108,069. The Prime Minister (Mr. Massey) is justly proud of those figures, and he claims that no country in the world can approach what New Zealand is doing in the way of exports. Meanwhile, New Zealand has not been able to escape the shipping difficulty, which has been largely accentuated by the loss of two of our largest meat carriers—the Maiatua and the Rangatira. However, things might have been a very great deal worse. Under the Imperial meat scheme, we have sent 87 steamers to the United Kingdom. Of these 75 have reached their destination, one (the Clan McTavish) has been sunk, and 11 are still on the way. The total capacity of the insulated vessels now on the coast or to arrive by June is 2,290,000 carcases; and although there will be a shortage of shipping in May, there is every prospect of the supply being equal to the demand before the year is half over.

IRRIGATION COMMISSIONERS.

Mr. Jas. Cowan writes:—The personnel of the Irrigation Commission recently appointed will assuredly not commend itself to the settlers on the Murrumbidgee irrigation area. For some considerable time past these men have been labouring under disabilities which have largely accrued as the result of the high valuation and wrong classification of their holdings. These official errors, which were either due to incompetence or inexperience, have been acknowledged by the Royal Commission which recently investigated some of the outstanding complaints on the area, as well as by members of the Government, before whom they have been officially placed. Notwithstanding this, we find the Government actually flouting the settlers by appointing an official as resident commissioner who it is admitted was mainly responsible for the errors in question. Could absurdity go further? Poor Murrumbidgee settlers!

HARD WHEATS.

Mr. J. Clatworthy, Coradgery, writes:—In your report of the State bakery exhibit at the Royal Show, in referring to the blending of flours, you state that Comeback and Hard Federation make the best loaf, and that Hard Federation is practically a hard wheat in itself. Also that Soft Federation (which represents 80 p.c. of the wheat grown in the State) is known as the farmers' friend, it being a most prolific yielder. It is, however, the poorest from a miller's and baker's standpoint. The aim and object of the exhibit, it was explained, are to try and induce the farmers to grow quality of wheat to give the best results from the baker's standpoint. What wheatgrowers would like to know is the amount of the inducement that the State Bakery and millers are prepared to offer, in view of our experience in the past of producing these high-grade wheats. Comeback wheat is a very poor yielder, and rapidly going out of cultivation on that account, as the extra allowance of threepence per bushel so generously allowed, would need to be at least one shilling per bushel to equalise the return per acre of this wheat as compared to soft Federation. As regards hard Federation, my experience last season is typical of other wheat-growers in the Parkes district. I had a beautiful sample, two hundred and fifty bags altogether. I made application through the local agents to the Wheat Board for the extra allowance of threepence per bushel. The powers that be, however, would not recognise Hard Federation as a hard wheat, or worth any more in value, so into the pool it went with the good, the medium, and the indifferent. This levelling down process, under the socialistic system of the last two seasons, is what hurts. And if the Government fix the price of meat the same levelling down process will apply to stock.

AGRICULTURAL ASSOCIATIONS.

WOLLONGONG.—At the annual meeting of the Wollongong Agricultural Association, the following office-bearers were elected:—President, Mr. E. H. Figtree; treasurer, Mr. G. C. Tuckey; secretary, Mr. W. J. Cochrane; committee, Messrs. Alex Fraser, R. L. Burcher, H. S. Budden, W. A. Lang, M. A. O'Donnell, R. C. Johnstone, D. Moore, J. Parsons, F. Spinks, L. Carr, T. Cook, G. C. Tuckey, H. N. Stumbles, F. O. Wiseman, H. R. Lee, J. Taylor, W. Cochrane, James Porter, John Porter, P. T. Doyle, J. W. Gorrell, E. Figtree, Jas. Dean, B. J. Bonham, and E. Cram. It was decided to hold a three days' show during February next, and arrangements were made for the removal of the old showgrounds buildings to the new site on the Wollongong Green.

DISTRICT ITEMS.

GUNNEDAH.—At a largely attended meeting of members of the Gunnedah Show Association it was decided that a show be held in the spring. The local storekeepers offered to give £50 towards preliminary expenses, in view of the funds of the association being depleted, and promises of help were also received from hotelkeepers and others.

COUNTRY NEWS.

FATAL QUARREL.

BATHURST, Friday.

At the Coroner's Court at Rockley yesterday, George Peate was committed for trial on a charge of the manslaughter of John Ryan, a middle-aged man. The evidence showed that the deceased was struck during a quarrel outside a hotel, and fell to the ground, splitting his head open. Peate was allowed bail in £200.

CHRYSANTHEMUM SHOW.

PARKES, Friday.

The annual chrysanthemum show in connection with St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church was opened by Mrs. Arthur Grimm, wife of the member for Ashburnham. The exhibit of chrysanthemums, owing to the absence of early autumn rain, was not as numerous as that of other years. Mr. F. Street, Forbes, was the principal prizetaker in these sections. Other cut flowers, especially roses, dahlias, verbenas, geraniums, cosmos, and dianthus were exceptionally good, Miss Pink, Mrs. E. Best, and L. H. Dawson secured the majority of the awards. OSCILLATING PORTAL WALL BEDS.

Awarded the Gold Medal at the Panama-Pacific International Exposition, 1915. This is their latest triumph, and an additional proof of their superiority. They are a proven utility.

The malleable iron adjustable floor-plate enables the bed to be raised or lowered with ease, should it become necessary in case of extra thickness of carpets or shrinkage of the floor joists.

Daily revolutions of the bed sweep fresh air into the recess, and ventilators can be built in when required.

The weight of the bed and furniture is carried by a cold rolled steel shaft with malleable arms. The supporting frame is tested to carry 2000 pounds weight (a ton).

The Wall Bed furniture can be made at a nominal cost with the rest of your millwork when building a new home. You can save money on built-in furniture, and there is no harbour for vermin.

No longer are mantels used to ornament a room. The same amount of money if put into a Wall Bed, which more attractively adorns the room, adds an additional bedroom, and provides a useful piece of furniture.

Many homes require more bedrooms. These can be provided for by putting Wall Beds in any of your rooms. How else could you get extra sleeping room without an unwarranted expense?

Wall Beds in hotels allow salesmen or other guests to turn a bedroom into a sample-room or living-room at a moment's notice.

For residences, apartments, flats, hotels, convents, private schools, dormitories, court-houses, all-night jury-rooms, sleeping porches, or anywhere that space is valuable; and a good, comfortable bed is desired.

GERMAN PROPAGANDA.

In their attempts to conciliate the Irish prisoners the Germans have already given the most striking proofs of their failure to enter into the mental processes of another people. Their offers to restore imprisoned soldiers to liberty have been rewarded in some instances by kicks, in others by seditious songs, in others again by a dignified refusal to accept any treatment more favourable than that endured by their British fellow-sufferers. The Germans in each case showed their incapacity to appreciate either the loyalty which a soldier feels to men of his own calling, or the detestation which their methods of warfare have inspired throughout the world. The very thoroughness which has made their preparations so complete has combined with the peculiarly German sense of honour to lead them into a whole series of mistaken estimates. Minute pieces of evidence collected with the industry of a race of pedants and interpreted without any vestige of humour have led them to regard every man who spoke lightly of dignitaries as a possible leader of revolt. They saw the seeds of revolution in Canada and Australia with the same eyes which detected sedition in a British regiment chanting the "Hymn of Hate," or an Irish regiment marching to the "Wearing of the Green." Time has shown them long ago the value of the reports sent them by their consuls and their agents of sedition. Instead of a slow dissolution of the Empire they have witnessed the co-operation of all the dominions in the one army. Instead of another Indian mutiny they have had to be content with the annual excursions on the North-west frontier, which have served to give many Territorials their first experience of actual fighting. But nowhere has their disappointment been as keen as in Ireland, where their hopes seemed to rest on the soundest foundation. Ireland was to be the chief instrument for preventing Great Britain from entering the war. If that transcendent purpose were not attained Irishmen were to be a constant check on the activities of the British fleet and army. An emancipated Ireland would assure the freedom of the seas to the enemies of England. Irishmen in the United States would be as useful as expatriated Germans, if not for actual treason at least for political influence. In the dominions if they could not hasten a revolt they would be a drag on recruiting. The immediate answer given by Ireland we know from the official figures. In the first year of the war 80,000 men were accepted as recruits for the infantry alone, and if religious belief is the best test of politics the majority were Nationalists. In Great Britain Irishmen flocked to the colours from Liverpool, from Glasgow, from the Tyneside, and from every centre of industry. In Canada, Australia, and New Zealand they were equally ardent and equally loyal. Even in the United States young Irishmen clubbed together to come home for the war, and the American medical mission to France included many girls of Irish parentage. The wild-geese of the French wars had at last found their common enemy, who was at the same time the enemy of the Saxons. In the war they fully justified the imprecation uttered by George II. when he heard of the conduct of the Irish brigades at Fontenoy, "Cursed be the laws that have deprived me of such subjects." They showed how freedom, or even the promise of freedom, would for such a cause weld the Irish race into the loyal population of the Empire, and how the work of freedom would be doubly sure when the enemy had violated every instinct of an ardent and generous nature.

Great as was the disappointment of the enemy at the conduct of Irishmen at the outbreak of war it must have been equally bitter at the failure of this last attempt to stir up a revolt. German hopes had been fanned by more convincing evidence than the boastful representations of Sir Roger Casement. Their agents had been able to collect a huge supply of data of the type which has always appealed to the German mind—seditious newspapers sold in the back streets of Dublin, inflammatory speeches, boasts of the downfall of England in language that might have been translated from the works of some pre-war Bengali agitator. In addition they had the cumulative evidence which proved that a certain section of Irishmen were determined still to treat Ireland as a separate unit, and which they interpreted as a demonstration of the goodwill of the country towards them. They knew that many of of the southern volunteers had repudiated Mr. Redmond's leadership because of his advice to them to enlist, that Lord Wimbourne's recruiting campaign had not been a success, and that Ireland would not be included in any scheme of compulsory service. We can imagine with what eagerness the German Government would anticipate a national rising when the Irish people were supplied with a leader of their own race, and an organisation prepared with German thoroughness. The actual result may be gathered from our cables this morning, even though many of the facts are concealed. The Germans have not succeeded where other enemies of England failed. There has been serious disorder which has caused loss of life and damage to property, and has necessitated the despatch of soldiers to Ireland. While the pick of the nation has been earning undying glory for the Irish regiments, certain irreconcilable elements have been able to prepare for revolt without stirring the authorities to action. But the result of the rising which will remain when all the forces of sedition have been extirpated is the substantial unity of the Irish race as a people deeply in sympathy with the Allies. Nothing but this piece of German propaganda could have provoked the volume of testimony which has poured in upon Mr. Redmond, who has consistently championed the cause of the Allies and exhorted his countrymen not to be content with the defence of their own shores. Nothing but a stain on the honour of their country could have induced Mr. Redmond and Sir Edward Carson to make the same declaration in the House of Commons, both of them in support of Mr. Asquith. Germans may be pardoned perhaps for failing to notice a side of the Irish character which has escaped most Englishmen, their eagerness to band together whenever Ireland is attacked though they may quarrel persistently for the rest of their lives. There was a time in the year 1914 when volunteers from the north and south were said to have joined in a gun-running expedition for the purpose of tricking the Saxon, the guns to be used afterwards in shooting each other. The Germans with their national obtuseness have provoked another ebullition of the same feeling. Once Irishmen perceived that their country had been dishonoured and their countrymen attacked while absent on the field of battle, they were united for the sake of Ireland and against the common enemy. The thought that Ireland had once been on the brink of civil war was banished for ever when Mr. Asquith declared the coercion of Ulster to be unthinkable.

SHAKESPEARE TERCENTENARY.

No doubt if war had not fallen upon us the tercentenary of the death of Shakespeare would have been universally commemorated; not even the clash of war, though it be the greatest war the world has seen, will prevent the nations from rendering homage in some sort to the memory of this man. Even in Germany special celebrations have been arranged to mark the event. But this, indeed, is not surprising. The man of genius, whether he be poet or novelist, philosopher or scientist, belongs not to any particular nation, but to mankind; and this is particularly true of Shakespeare, whose imagination was as wide as the world, and whose thoughts extended "beyond the reaches of our souls." A Shakespeare, a Moliere, a Dante, a Goethe, a Cervantes are the possession of all men, no matter where their birthplace; and thus, at the very moment when we are honouring the memory of "the greatest Englishman," we find our King sending a message to Spain in honour of the great Spanish poet and novelist whose death took place on the same day as that of Shakespeare—April 23, 1616. Those were spacious days, and the genius which flourished then, flooding mankind with its brightness, has never been approached since. "The wind bloweth where it listeth, and we cannot tell whence it cometh nor whither it goeth." There is a street in Florence, as Lord Bryce tells us in his work on "The American Commonwealth," on each side of which stand statues of the famous Florentines of the 14th and 15th centuries—Dante, Giotto, Petrarch, Boccaccio, Ghiberti, Machiavelli, Michael Angelo, and others scarcely less illustrious, all natives of the little city which in their days never had a population of more than 60,000 souls. "No one can walk between these rows of world-famous figures, matched by no other city of the modern world, without asking himself what cause determined so much of the highest genius to this one spot; why in Italy itself populous Milan and Naples and Venice have no such list to show; why the succession of greatness stopped with the beginning of the 16th century, and has never been resumed." Questions substantially the same constantly rise to the mind in reading the history of other countries. We cannot tell why it was that England produced no first-rate poet in the two centuries between Chaucer and Shakespeare, nor again in the century and a half between Milton's birth and Wordsworth. It is inscrutable mystery—inscrutable as the great Shakespeare himself. He came we know not how, with his matchless intellect, and for three hundred years now he has maintained his place not only as the greatest poet England has produced, but as one of the greatest of all countries. As time has passed his influence, instead of waning, has increased; and after three hundred years the estimate of "rare Ben Jonson" still stands true—"He was not of an age, but for all time." The saying of the man who saw "Hamlet" for the first time and said he seemed to have read it all before, it was "so full of quotations," is easily to be understood, for Shakespearian maxims and quotations have become so interwoven in our language that we are constantly quoting him in our everyday life without knowing it; so that it has been said with truth, there is scarcely a corner which he does not illuminate, or a cottage which he does not enrich.

To the English-speaking peoples who speak the tongue which Shakespeare spoke the tercentenary has a very special interest. He may be "all men's Shakespeare," as Coleridge says, but he is ours first; and nowhere, not even in England itself, is greater homage being paid to his memory than in America. In that great English-speaking country peace still reigns, and the conditions allow of celebrations on a scale that cannot be thought of in England. Newspapers like the "New York Times" have issued noteworthy supplements in connection with the event, and there has been a great revival of the plays on the American stage. It has been said that Shakespeare's plays spell ruin, but we still find them produced, and Shakespeare is still the supreme test of the great actor. Here in Sydney we are fortunate in having, during the tercentenary celebrations, a company whose Shakespearian productions are giving genuine pleasure to a public who have become over-tired of the spiritual and intellectual destitution of the theatre of our day. Here, as in England, the event will be celebrated in a special manner on Wednesday next, May 3, corresponding in New Style to April 23 Old Style. At the request of the Shakespeare Society and of the Tercentenary Memorial Fund committee, Mr. Marlow and Mr. Allan Wilkie have generously undertaken to organise a commemoration matinee at the Adelphi Theatre, and the programme will include the presentation of famous scenes from a number of the plays. We think that something more might be done. The tercentenary of Shakespeare's death is an occasion with which our University might well identify itself, particularly as we have within our university walls one who has devoted a great deal of his life to Shakespearian research work and takes high rank among modern commentators. If the University Senate were to invite Professor MacCallum to deliver a special tercentenary address in the Great Hall, it would be a fitting thing and the address, we have no doubt, would be a contribution worthy of the great occasion. Circumstances have inevitably modified the original intentions of the tercentenary committee; for with the coming of the war the collecting of subscriptions for the establishment of an Elizabethan Library ceased. But there is a sum of £1000 in hand, and the question for the committee to consider now is what is to be done with it. Students engaged in literary research are few and far between in this country, and it is only to these few that a library such as has been suggested would appeal. If, after the war, the amount already raised could be augmented to furnish a fund sufficient to subsidise the production of a certain number of Shakespeare's plays every year, including some of the plays which we rarely see upon the stage, we believe that more good would result. After all, the plays were written to be acted. But whether they be acted or not—whether or not the immortal writer of them continues to be, as he was three hundred years ago, "the applause, delight, the wonder of our stage"—they will be read as great literature to the end of time.

EMPIRE'S NEED.

LAND SETTLEMENT.

SPEECH BY SIR RIDER HAGGARD.

A striking speech on the need of filling the Empire's empty spaces was made by Sir Rider Haggard at a luncheon tendered to him by the New South Wales branch of the Royal Colonial Institute at Farmer's yesterday.

Sir Samuel Griffith, Chief Justice of the High Court, and vice-president of the institute, occupied the chair, and those present included the Premier, the Lord Mayor, the Archbishop of Sydney, Sir Thos. Hughes, M.L.C., Sir James Fairfax, Sir William McMillan, General Finn, and Messrs. G. F. Earp, M.L.C., Kelso King, Dennison Miller, T. Reed, and R. Teece.

In proposing the health of Sir Rider Haggard, Sir Samuel Griffith mentioned that when the British flag was first hoisted in Pretoria in 1877 it was the hand of their distinguished guest that raised it. (Applause.) There would be great changes after the war, and probably a great migration. Australia had millions of acres only awaiting occupation, and would welcome these immigrants from the old country. (Applause.)

Mr. Holman added a few words in welcome to Sir Rider Haggard. "Although," he said, "I now find myself in a position where the possibilities of further political development may cease to interest me in the near future—(Laughter)—I should feel my last hours were well spent if I was doing something to further prepare the ground for some such scheme as that connected with Sir Rider Haggard's presence in Australia." (Applause.)

NEED OF POPULATION.

Sir Rider Haggard said he had set out from England on this somewhat forlorn hope, because he felt it to be his duty. As Lord Curzon had kindly said at a Royal Colonial Institute luncheon in London, he set out not wearing any official uniform, but going "as a great State representative engaged upon a great Empire duty."

"I consider this mighty Empire of ours," he proceeded, "the mightiest the world has ever seen, compared with which that of Rome fades in to insignificance. I look at it, with its vast expanse stretched over every portion of the earth, and I ask myself what will be its future? We hold it—how? With sixty millions of people, of whom some forty-five millions dwell in those little islands in the North Sea. Can we continue to do that? Perhaps—if the sixty millions remain never less than sixty millions. But can you say they are going to remain sixty millions. I wish you could—I cannot. To me the signs are all the other way. Take your 'Times' and read the quarterly birth rate. Quarter by quarter it is marked 'lowest on record.' What does that mean to a nation? I will tell you," said Sir Rider, dramatically, "it means death." He believed he was right in saying that in only one or two parts of the Empire was there what is called a natural increase of population. He had studied the matter and found that it was only on the land, which, after all, was the mother of the human race, that there was the desired increase. It was to the land, which was also the support of the race, that they must look for the real solution of the terrible problem that confronted not only the Empire but the whole of the western peoples. Unless there was some change another 200 years might see the western races "out." That was what it came to. That was why he was doing his very best to persuade the Empire to save its sons and daughters for itself, and with them to people its vacant lands at whatever cost. Some of these countries boasted about their wealth, but what was the good of wealth without men and women to spend it?

"I am afraid that the future holds in her womb many more wars, and for us, perhaps, a war far more terrible even than this," said Sir Rider Haggard. "Do you imagine for a moment that these Germans, when they are defeated, and when they patch up some peace, will abandon their ambitions? And even if they abandon their ambitions, will they abandon their hate? With the others they may make peace, but with Great Britain, who has spoiled the game, whose intervention spoiled the utter success of the plan they had been preparing for 50 years, they will form no peace in their hearts.

DANGER OF FUTURE WARS.

"Is it likely that such a thing will happen twice as for Britain to find herself in the position of having half a dozen allies against her enemy? May it not be possible that the other nations will be allies and that the British Empire will have to fight them alone? Gentlemen, you know it is possible. When the hour does strike, as assuredly it will, Great Britain and her Empire must be in a position to argue with the enemy in her gates. Never can you hold this great Empire unless you have population to hold it. Therefore, it behoves you at whatever cost to get the population, while there is yet time. The people, too, must lose themselves no more in soft pleasures and easy living. They must be keen-eyed and open-eared, waiting for the call that assuredly will come." (Applause.)

Sir Rider Haggard had emphasised how wide was the cause for which the Empire was now fighting. On Anzac Day in Brisbane he had been at a meeting where they had spoken of the noble sons of Australia who had died upon the ill-fated shores of Gallipoli. Yet all over the earth victims like these were being claimed. His own case was typical of a thousand English gentle families. "I have hardly a male relation of suitable age but what is engaged in this war," he told his hearers. "I think there are ten—my nephews and my own son-in-law. One nephew who was killed, died calling: 'Stick to it, Welsh,' after he had with his own hand killed the entire crew of a maxim-gun, fighting like one of his own Norse forefathers. I heard it from his servant whom, with his last breath, he recommended for the V.C. Another nephew was second-in-command on one of your Australian submarines, and now he lies in some Turkish gaol.

THE EMPIRE'S SPIRIT.

"And yet in England—I trust it is not so in Australia—some men hang back, because, perhaps, they have bought a field or married a wife—some forsooth because they have not been consulted about the war.

"It is needful that that spirit should die out. What are we up against? No ordinary war. We are up against a veritable kingdom of Satan. Were these Germans to prevail over us, better that we should be dead. If you doubt it, study their literature, read their aims in their present acts; study the record of their atrocities. See what a hell lives in the breast of each of them.

"We shall conquer," he asserted. "I am certain we shall conquer. We know that our King will live to set his foot on the neck of the Kaiser, and all the accursed system he represents. (Applause.) So much for the present; but what about the future?"

Sir Rider Haggard said he fancied that from some Valhalla of our race, those who had fallen might still watch what passed below. And then, if the Empire would awake and make ready for the bitter hour of its trial, they might say, 'My brothers, see the Empire's squadrons gathering; hear her armies marching; look on her flag breaking to the breeze upon a hundred shores; look upon the searchlights of her navies guarding every fathom of the seven seas.' And they might add, 'It is well with England, my brothers; and it is well with us who have not died in vain.'" (Applause.)

"After this war," he added, "we believe there will be a great migration. I say to you, get your share for God's sake, and keep them under the flag. Don't let the United States mop them up again as it has done before. Are we under such debt of gratitude to other countries that we should wish to feed them with our best blood?" (No.)

Sir Rider Haggard announced that in Brisbane, whence he had arrived that morning, the Queensland Government had promised a million acres of land for the purpose of settling ex-soldiers, provided that they could raise the money to build railways thereto and prepare it. (Applause.) He had not the slightest doubt that they would raise the money, and therefore looked upon the promise as as good as a bank-note—or, he should say, a sovereign. (Hear, hear.)

Mr. H. C. Macfie, secretary of the institute in New South Wales, said he hoped Sir Rider Haggard would also be successful in regard to the establishment of some financial scheme to carry out the settlement of areas granted.

Sir Rider Haggard said he had not come to Australia with any financial scheme, but to ask that all the dominions would treat the soldiers of other parts of the Empire as they would treat their own.

The health of the chairman was proposed by Mr. G. F. Earp, M.L.C.

IRELAND.

MARTIAL LAW.

COMPULSION.

BILL WITHDRAWN.

ACTIVITY ON BRITISH FRONT.

Martial law has been proclaimed throughout Ireland.

On Thursday night Mr. Asquith reported that the situation was still serious. The movement appeared to be spreading, especially in the west. The Prime Minister added that adequate troops had been sent to cope with the situation.

Major-General Sir John Maxwell has been given plenary powers to deal with the rebels.

An unofficial French message reports intense artillery activity west of the Meuse. Some lively fighting has occurred on the British front. The Germans used gas south of Hulluch (southward of La Bassee).

Owing to the hostility of the advocates of compulsion and voluntaryism, the Compulsory Service Bill has been withdrawn from the House of Commons. According to unofficial advices the married men in the Derby groups up to 35 years of age have been called up.

WESTERN FRONT.

THE BRITISH LINE.

MUCH ACTIVITY.

THE GERMANS USE GAS.

PARIS, April 28.

There was intense artillery activity on the Avocourt-Esnes-Cumieres front (west of the Meuse). The enemy made two feint attacks east of the Meuse, one at Haudremont Farm, and the other between Douaumont and Vaux. They were checked by our curtain of fire.

Three of our airships heavily bombed different stations in the Valley of the Aire Valley of the Oise, and other points.

GENERAL HAIG'S REPORT.

LONDON, April 28.

General Sir Douglas Haig reports: The Bedfordshires on Wednesday night made a successful raid near Carency (southward of Arras). They rushed the enemy trenches, and after fierce hand-to-hand fighting drove the Germans into dugouts, where they bombed them. There was considerable enemy loss. The enemy heavily bombarded our trenches east of Armentieres (north-west of Lille). The Germans south of Frelinghein (2½ miles north-east of Armentieres), entered our trenches in the evening under cover of a bombardment. Our counter-attack drove them out. We repulsed an enemy attack on Hill 60 (south-east of Ypres). The enemy gained a footing on our sapheads, but bombers drove them out.

On Thursday morning the enemy discharged gas south of Hulluch (southward of La Bassee), and at the same time put an artillery barrage on our lines north of Loos. After a second gas attack the enemy gained a footing on our front and support lines east and north-east of Loos. Irish troops made a counter-attack and drove the enemy out in half an hour. Many dead Germans were left in our trenches. The enemy also advanced south of Hulluch, but our machine guns enfiladed them. Many enemy corpses were left.

There were nineteen aerial combats. Two of our machines were damaged, but all returned safely.

AUSTRIANS.

REPULSED BY ITALIANS.

ROME, April 28.

A communique states: East of the Selz Valley (Carso region) the Austrians made four violent attacks in massed formation. They were thrown back in great disorder, and sustained heavy losses.

PLOTS IN AMERICA.

GERMAN AGENTS' WORK.

WASHINGTON, April 27.

A German propagandist plot for the despatch of thousands of telegrams purporting to be signed by each Senator's constituents, protesting against the United States going to war in any circumstances, has been exposed in the Senate.

Organised German efforts were also made to buy up American newspapers.

DUTCH STEAMER BEACHED.

LONDON, April 28.

The Dutch steamer Maashaven ([illegible],900 tons) has been beached at Harwich.

COMPULSION.

CABINET'S COMPROMISE.

GOVERNMENT WITHDRAWS BILL.

SENSATIONAL DEVELOPMENT.

LONDON, April 26.

A sensation was created in the House of Commons to-night. Mr. Walter Long (President of the Local Government Board) introduced the Military Service Bill, embodying the Cabinet's compromise, but owing to the hostility of the compulsionists and voluntaryists, the Prime Minister (Mr. Asquith) later in the sitting announced that the bill would be withdrawn.

Mr. Long, when introducing the Military Service Bill, embodying the Cabinet's compromise, said it was a measure of military necessity, urged upon the Government by its military advisers. The question of unattested married men would be dealt with in a later measure. The bill would be read the third time next week. Then the House would go into recess.

Sir Edward Carson said he favoured compulsion, but not the unfair compulsion provided by this bill. It was impossible to conceive anything more unfair, illogical, or unreasonable. If the bill were persisted in, he would divide the House. What right had the Government to single out these men when it did not dare to bring in a genuine bill?

Mr. Stephen Walsh (Labour) was loudly cheered when he demanded the instant introduction of general compulsion. "I believe," he said, "the country would support the Government if it decided upon all-round compulsion."

Mr. H. E. Duke (Unionist) deprecated the bill. It was true it had been introduced during a time of stress. It did not embody the whole military policy of the Government, as the House knew, but in its present form it would meet with an obvious fate.

Mr. W. Pringle (Liberal) declared the bill was a miserable makeshift. It had no friends.

Mr. Asquith, who had not been present during the whole of the debate, was hurriedly recalled. He admitted the bill had not been received encouragingly in any quarter, not owing to its proposals, but to the time and manner of its introduction. He recognised the force of the criticisms, and the Government might re-introduce it later, but the Government did not wish to force a measure which the House was not prepared to accept.

Mr. Ellis J. Griffith (Liberal) hoped the Cabinet crisis would not be re-opened when the bill was withdrawn.

Mr. Asquith replied that he was able to reassure the House on that point.

Mr. J. H. Thomas (Labour) opposed the bill. He would oppose any stronger measure.

Several members appealed to Mr. Asquith to give an indication of the Government's intentions.

Mr. Asquith replied that it was impossible to say on the spur of the moment, but promised that the attention of the Cabinet would be given to the House of Commons' objections, and the Cabinet's decision would be announced next week.

Strong speeches followed. The compulsionists denounced the Government's dilatoriness, and the voluntaryists denounced prospective general compulsion.

Upon Mr. Long's motion, the bill was eventually withdrawn.

IN THE LOBBIES.

There was little or no surprise in the lobbies at the withdrawal of the Compulsory Service Bill, as it had a chilly reception.

It is understood that the War Council will review the situation to-morrow and submit fresh proposals.

MARRIED MEN CALLED UP.

The married men in the Derby groups up to 35 years of age have been called up.

TRADE UNION CONGRESS.

The Parliamentary committee of the Trade Union Congress carried a resolution advising the unions to support the Government's recruiting proposals to raise 200,000 unattested married men.

[Mr. Asquith made the following announcement at the secret session of the House of Commons on Tuesday last: The Government, in order to meet the situation, has determined on the prolongation until the end of the war of the service of time-expired men; also to empower the transfer of Territorials to any unit where they are needed, and to render those exempted liable for military service immediately on the expiry of their exemption certificate, also the enrolment of all youths as they reach their eighteenth year. The Government has decided to make an immediate effort to secure the voluntary enlistment of unattested married men. If, on May 27, 50,000 of these have not been secured, the Government will ask Parliament for compulsory powers. The same course will be taken if the weekly enlistment after the 27th does not reach 15,000 until 200,000 unattested have been obtained. It is proposed to assist married and single men in regard to rent, mortgage, interest, payment of instalments under contract, taxes, rates, insurance premiums, and school fees. The total relief in each case is not to exceed £104 per annum.

Replying to Sir Edward Carson, the Prime Minister stated that the Government's recruiting proposals would not be applied to Ireland.]

SUBMARINES.

TWO VESSELS SUNK.

BRITISH AND GERMAN.

AMSTERDAM, April 28.

The "Maasbode" states that a disguised British patrol boat suddenly shelled and sank a German submarine in the North Sea, which was holding a Dutch vessel.

The Official Press Bureau has issued the following statement: "A German wireless message announces that submarine E22 was sunk in the North Sea. Two of the crew were saved."

GERMAN CLAIM.

BRITISH CRUISER STRUCK.

LONDON, April 28.

A German communique states that a torpedo from a German submarine struck a British cruiser of the Arethusa type in the southern waters of the North Sea on the 25th inst.

ZEPPELINS.

MISSING BRITISH AIRMAN FOUND.

The British airman who was reported missing after chasing a raiding Zeppelin on Monday night has been picked up by a Dutch fishing boat 40 miles from the Dutch coast, after being in the water 30 hours. He chased the Zeppelin too far, and was forced to descend through shortage of petrol.

IRELAND.

MARTIAL LAW.

POSITION IN DUBLIN.

STREET FIGHTING CONTINUES

LONDON, April 27.

In the House of Commons to-night, the Prime Minister (Mr. Asquith) made the following statement:—"To-day's news from Ireland showed that the situation still contains serious features. The rebels still hold some important public buildings in Dublin. Fighting in the streets continues. The troops have been and are being strongly reinforced.

The Government, after careful investigation, is satisfied that the forces despatched are adequate to deal with the situation. The Cabinet decided to-day that the Irish Executive must forthwith declare martial law over all Ireland. (Cheers.) While martial law prevailed military censorship was necessary, but he hoped to allow some latitude in the transmission of news subject to public and military requirements.

The Government's paramount duty was to restore order and stamp out the rebellion with all possible vigour and promptitude. That was being done. The obligation undoubtedly rested on the Government to hold a searching investigation into the cause and the responsibility for these events.

Sir J. B. Lonsdale asked whether Mr. Birrell, Chief Secretary for Ireland, had brought under the notice of the Cabinet the dangerous state of affairs in Ireland, and whether the Executive's failure to take action was due to any decision of the Cabinet.

Mr. Asquith replied: Certainly not.

Sir Edward Carson said: I feel quite satisfied with Mr. Asquith's statement. I shall gladly join with Mr. Redmond in everything which can be done to denounce and put down these rebels now and for evermore. I hope the newspapers will not try to cause political dissension in relation to the Irish question. (Cheers.)

Mr. Redmond, leader of the Irish Nationalists, on behalf of his Nationalist colleagues and an overwhelming majority of the people of Ireland, expressed detestation and horror at these proceedings. He joined with Sir Edward Carson cordially in hoping that the newspapers and public men of Britain would not use the events in Ireland as a political weapon against any party. (Cheers.)

Mr. Asquith refused Sir Henry Dalziel's request for a discussion of the rebellion on Monday. He agreed that it was desirable to make the Allies realise that this deplorable and detestable movement had no sympathy from any responsible Irish political quarter. But Sir Edward Carson and Mr. Redmond had made that clear. The world knew that the movement had no sympathy in any responsible quarter of the British Empire. A debate in the House of Commons while the conflagration was raging could only be mischievous. Sir Edward Carson and Mr. Redmond had pointed out the great anxiety of persons concerning their relatives in Ireland.

Mr. Asquith announced that he expected communication to be re-established to-day. All official news would be published promptly.

Mr. Redmond said he considered a discussion on the subject on Monday would be premature and most injurious. He hoped when the Government had full information it would be given to the House, and the debate could proceed without delay.

SITUATION STILL SERIOUS.

Mr. Asquith announced later in the House of Commons: The situation in Ireland is still serious. The movement appears to be spreading, especially in the west, and street fighting in Dublin continues. Martial law has been proclaimed all through Ireland.

THE CENSORSHIP.

On the motion for the adjournment of the House of Commons, Mr. Herbert Samuel (Home Secretary) justified the censorship of news from Ireland on military grounds. The Government was arranging for English and American correspondents to visit Ireland and to watch events.

Mr. Samuel added that the latest information showed Ireland was quiet over considerable districts.

Sir Edward Carson, on behalf of the Ulster volunteers, placed the force at the Government's disposal for the maintenance of authority in Ulster.

SINN FEIN ACTIVITY.

Mr. Asquith's statement in the Commons has directed public attention to the continued gravity of the situation in Ireland. The newspapers vigorously protest against the policy of secrecy. They point out that the Sinn Feiners are flooding the United States with all sorts of exaggerations alleged to have been received by code. It is certain that details of the Dublin fighting were received in code long before the official announcement was cabled.

Lord Northcliffe's newspapers have commenced a campaign in regard to Mr. Birrell's administration. Mr. Birrell and a party of English and American journalists have now sailed for Dublin.

Lord Middleton's outspoken speech in the House of Lords has been widely quoted, particularly the passages showing that the revolt came like "a bolt from the blue" and the specific accusations of laxity in the Irish administration.

GENERAL MAXWELL.

There is general satisfaction that Major-General Sir John Maxwell, who was lately commanding the Australians in Egypt, has been given plenary powers to deal with the rebels. It is estimated that the active elements of the Sinn Fein are only 3000, though their dupes are far more numerous.

The revolt has had little effect on the Stock Exchange, but business is rather hesitant.

LORD ABERDEEN'S VIEWS.

The Marquis of Aberdeen, ex-Viceroy of Ireland, in the course of an interview, predicted that the Irish revolt would soon be suppressed. The main body responsible for Irish opinion was against it. The Marquis believed that the outbreak would not cause any revulsion of English opinion against Ireland, nor influence the granting of Home Rule. The gallantry of the Irish regiments was an off-set to this rising.

"TO DO MY DUTY."

The "Daily Chronicle" says it is probable that Sir Roger Casement impressed the German Government with an exalted idea of his influence and the followers he could secure if he were placed at their head in Ireland. Suspicion was aroused by the presence of a powerful motor car at a point little frequented by tourists. Coastguards were on the alert, and a small boat, apparently coming from nowhere, was seen making for the shore. Two men were rowing and three others sat in the stern. All were taken prisoner as they stepped ashore. The officer-in-charge of the patrol recognised one of the party, and said: "You are Sir Roger Casement."

Sir Roger Casement replied: "I am. I have come to do my duty."

During his conveyance to England Sir Roger Casement gave his guards the impression of supreme vanity, suggesting that he was the head and front of any rebellion possible, and that without him it must speedily collapse.

It is clear that the motor car which plunged over the bridge at Killorglin was intended to convey Sir Roger Casement to Dublin.

MESSAGES TO MR. REDMOND.

Mr. John Redmond, M.P., has received cablegrams from Canada, Australia, and South Africa condemning the rebellion, and expressing confidence in Mr. Redmond and the Nationalists.

OPINION IN AMERICA.

NEW YORK, April 27.

Mrs. Newman, Sir Roger Casement's sister, has initiated a movement to appeal to Mr. Lansing (Secretary of State) to approach the British Government on Sir Roger Casement's behalf.

The majority of Irishmen describe the "made-in-Germany rebellion" as traitorous to 200,000 Irishmen fighting the Germans.

The consensus of American opinion is that the revolt is rather aimed at Mr. Redmond and the Nationalists than against Britain. There is considerable rejoicing among the American members of the Sinn Fein, and there is little doubt that the agitators have been encouraged by money, though, as the "New York World" says: "Irish revolutionaries in America leave getting shot to less sophisticated Irishmen in Ireland."

MR. LANSING'S DENIAL.

WASHINGTON, April 27.

Mr. Lansing has denied, in view of published reports in the United States, that he gave the British Government any information leading to the capture of Sir Roger Casement or the rising in Dublin.

ARCHBISHOP KELLY'S VIEWS.

When asked if he would offer any comment on the present situation in Ireland, Archbishop Kelly made the following statement for publication:—

"We must regretfully consider the Sinn Feiners—in policy irreconcilables, in methods unwisely impractical—as a standing antagonism to sound national policy.

"The Government, by following hesitating lines of action regarding the Home Rule Bill, furnished an occasion to the propagation of disaffection. The rebellion, if the Dublin disturbance deserves the name, is but an untimely ebullition of rankling, misconceived patriotism. Hired suborners will have procured this deplorable disorder. I think that, at such, the arm of law and order should strike. Unquestionably, the long-continued defiance of intended legislation on the part of Sir Edward Carson opened the way for Sir Roger Casement.

"Personally, I am confident that the Irish in Australia promptly disown every deed of disloyalty to Government in the present war, and they stand behind the national organisation headed by Mr. John Redmond and his colleagues."

COMMENT IN AUSTRALIA.

ADELAIDE, Friday.

The Premier (Mr. C. Vaughan) has sent the following cable message to Mr. John Redmond:—"The Government of South Australia desires to express its sympathy with Irish people in the position in which the Sinn Fein has placed them. The splendid heroism of the Irish troops, and the sacrifices made by the people of Ireland in the present war, call for the profound admiration of all loyal Britishers."

PERTH, Friday.

The committee of the Perth Celtic Club has despatched the following cablegram to Mr. John Redmond, M.P.:—"Irishmen of Western Australia regret the Dublin affair. They have confidence in you. Reply, enlightening us."

GENERAL BIRDWOOD.

VISIT TO HOSPITAL.

LONDON, April 27.

General Sir William Birdwood, accompanied by Sir Thomas Mackenzie (High Commissioner for New Zealand) inspected the Walton Hospital to-day, and was greatly pleased with the arrangements.

WAR NOTES.

THE VERDUN POSITION.

Since the last big German effort there has been a comparative lull on the Verdun front. Certainly this morning's cables speak of intense artillery activity on the line Avocourt-Esnes-Cumieres, west of the Meuse, which sounds far from peaceful, and there have been a couple of feint attacks on the eastern side of the river; but when we speak of a "lull" we mean a cessation of big infantry assaults bent upon smashing the French line. All through the struggle on the Verdun salient the battle has come in waves—tremendous attacks launched with the maximum power the Germans can command in one particular sector, and then, when these have been fought to a standstill, there have come periods of "cleaning-up," of reorganisation of the battered units, and of reinforcement. Thus strength is gradually gathered for a further effort, and directly we see the fighting develop in another great wave of bitter intensity. And so the thing has alternated all along. At the outset of their Verdun offensive, the Germans planned to smash through the first lines of the French defence with the aid of an unprecedented concentration of artillery and then, as quickly as possible, after the infantry assaults, to move the guns forward and batter down the next succeeding line; and so on, the whole affair to be so rapidly carried out as to make the struggle practically one continuous fight, leaving the French no breathing time between the demolition of their first and final lines.

ELIMINATING THE PAUSE.

The Germans themselves had learned much from the previous allied offensives in Artois and Champagne, and they deduced that it was the long pause at the second defensive positions, before the artillery could be brought up to its new locations, that had been the main factor in the failure of the Anglo-French efforts to smash completely through the German lines. The Verdun plan was to eliminate that pause. The advance was to be practically continuous, with rapidly alternating tornadoes of shell and great infantry assaults. But, as other excellent plans have done before, this one miscarried. There were factors in it that had not been truly assessed, and chief among these was the ability of the French, after they had retreated to their main defensive position, to hold on to that position despite the utmost the Germans could do in the way of concentrated artillery fire and subsequent massed infantry attacks. The aspect of the actual ground which the French have now held for so many weeks must by this have been ploughed and torn out of all recognition by the German shells; but General Petain has adopted a form of tactics whereby, during the terrific preparatory German bombardment he holds his line with a minimum of troops, but is able to man it fully in time to meet the oncoming masses of infantry.

"ONE OF THE FINEST THINGS."

In this connection let us here interpolate an extract from an interview with a German airman who was captured by the French in the early days of the great battle. "For two days," he said, "the artillery thundered. Then my squadron received orders to go and report the results obtained. We had to fly very low, on account of the thick black smoke which overhung the ground, but we saw, in spite of this, that the earth had undergone a thorough upheaval. There was no longer any trace of defensive organisation. On my return our captain was enthusiastic. He said to the general: 'We have done it. We can get through. There is nothing left alive.' Undoubtedly reports were everywhere the same, for an infantry attack followed immediately. But the result was general stupefaction. Your soldiers were not pulverised, as we thought, and our men only advanced at the price of heavy losses. By order of the divisional general I departed alone on a reconnaissance. I had decided to stake all. At full speed I went as far as the south of Verdun, and saw perfectly well that your real lines of defence were intact. I saw also interminable convoys of material and immense reserves. I returned as quickly as possible. I was pursued by three of your aviators, from whom I escaped with difficulty. I immediately reported on my mission. The general reflected for a long time, and with a grave air said to me: 'If the French have succeeded in this manoeuvre of withdrawing their troops and making us sweep with our machine guns ground which is clear of men, it is one of the finest things which the history of battles has ever told.' The next day I had less luck when over the area where the battle was raging. I came down. On the road along which I was brought to the rear I was able to verify from close observation what I had seen from above in my machine, and I know very well that my divisional general had not, alas! been mistaken."

THE OTHER KIND OF PAUSE.

That interview refers to the time when the French were gradually giving ground; but when he took up his main position, General Petain adapted the idea of denuding his front lines during bombardments, and to a very large extent has pursued it ever since; and the result has been that, notwithstanding the most vicious searching out of the whole length of the line by the German artillery, he has been able to meet effectively some of the most formidable infantry assaults in history. So the struggle has taken quite a different character to that which the German plan contemplated. There is now no question of a pause to allow of artillery being brought up; the artillery has been in the exact positions it requires for many weeks. Yet the battle is still marked by pauses, every one of which is extremely valuable to the French as were those other pauses in Artois and Champagne to the Germans. But the pauses now are nothing more nor less than the halt of exhaustion. If the Germans could throw forward battalions after battalions, continuously, the French line would sooner or later give way; but there is necessarily a limit to what can be done in this matter of sending infantry forward, and the Germans have so far found to their cost that that limit is reached before the strain on the French line has reached breaking point. Thus, after every effort comes the inevitable period of recuperation and reorganisation. We have no reason to believe that the present lull will not be followed by another sinister wave of battle, as have those which have gone before. The determination of the Germans to win through to Verdun, in spite of their terrific losses, still seems to hold, and in the circumstances we must assume that they are now gathering strength for still further efforts, which may possibly be of even greater weight than the last. In the meantime, the "liveliness" on the British front has again become most noticeable, mainly on the German initiative; but there is reason to believe that this is the outcome of a Teutonic desire to anticipate any forward move which General Haig may be inclined to make with a view to relieving the pressure upon the French in the Verdun sector. If this be so, then the "liveliness" in the north is hardly likely to develop yet into a really formidable German effort to smash through the British line and uncover the coast below Nieuport.

"ZEPPELIN WEATHER."

When the war broke out it was generally assumed that the operations of Zeppelin airships would be strictly confined to favourable weather; but this is an idea that has had to go by the board. The London "Daily Chronicle" published on March 11 a carefully compiled table, showing the state of the weather on the occasions when Zeppelins have visited England, and it disposes of the last vestige of belief that these aircraft are purely fair weather voyageurs. "There have been 21 Zeppelin raids up to date," says the paper. "The Zeppelins have come in virtually every phase of the moon, from new to full. In their successive visits they have had the wind from every quarter of the compass. The wind has ranged from 'light airs' to 'strong breezes.' The thermometer has ranged from frost to sweltering summer heat. Skies have been blue and overcast with clouds. There has been on several occasions mist, rain has been falling still more often; and during the raid of March 5 there was winter weather of an extreme kind; heavy snowfalls and squalls of wind. Bombs were dropped upon a northern town during snow squalls so bitter that the local correspondents spoke of a 'blizzard.' With all these varieties of weather there has, of course, been every sort of variation of the barometer. The utmost one can say," adds the paper, "is, first, that the calmer the weather the likelier a raid is to occur, and, secondly, that raids are less likely to occur in broad moonlight than on dark nights. But the table given shows that, of any weather short of gales and storms, it is impossible to say that it is not Zeppelin weather."

SIR ROGER CASEMENT.

SKETCH OF HIS CAREER.

FURNISHED BY A RELATION

MELBOURNE, Friday.

A relation of Sir Roger Casement, who resides in Melbourne, furnished to-night an interesting account of the ex-consul's career. Sir Roger Casement's father was a loyal Ulsterman, Captain Roger Casement, of the 3rd Light Dragoons, many years of whose service were passed in Afghanistan. A cousin was Admiral John Casement, lately deceased. It appears that from an early age Sir Roger Casement showed signs of a romantic disposition, and on the first opportunity he adopted an adventurous career. Through influence he obtained a position with the Sir H. M. Stanley expedition for the opening up of the Congo, and spent several years in that district. During the whole of that time he was in constant correspondence with his Melbourne relation, and some of his letters are described as commencing to show signs of lack of mental balance, and it was evident, his relation said, that he was suffering severely from the effects of the climate. After the Stanley expedition he became British Consul at Lorenzo Márques, and was subsequently commissioned to investigate the Congo atrocities. He was afterwards transferred to a fever-stricken district in Brazil, and the investigation of the rubber scandals was entrusted to him. His health then broke down completely, compelling his retirement.

This briefly, is the story of Sir Roger Casement's career as told by his relation. "What has now happened," said this gentleman, "neither I nor anyone else who knew him from childhood, as I did, can possibly understand. I have been in regular correspondence with him, and in none of his letters was there the slightest sign of disloyalty. He must have been mad; I am sure he was. All those years spent in bad and treacherous climates must have affected his mind. An Ulsterman and a fervent Protestant, he always had an intense love for Ireland. His country to him came before everything. While this was so, I repeat that never once have I heard from him a sentiment disloyal to the Government under which he served. If, contrary to what I feel sure was the case, Sir Roger Casement was not mad, no excuse can be made for what he has done."

RED CROSS SUPERVISORS.

MELBOURNE, Friday.

Mr. M. R. Marsh, managing director in Australia for Lovell and Christmas, Ltd., London, has been appointed as the third supervisor of Red Cross depots in Egypt and at the front. As already announced, the other gentlemen chosen are Mr. E. G. Elsworthy, of Sydney, and Mr. R. A. D. Sinclair, of Victoria. They will proceed to Egypt at an early date.

MR. HUGHES.

GLASGOW VISIT.

FREEDOM OF THE CITY.

GLASGOW, April 27.

Mr. Hughes travelled to Glasgow by special train. The Lord Provost, Mr. Thomas Dunlop, extended a most cordial welcome. The streets were lined with cheering crowds as Mr. Hughes's motor car proceeded to the Lord Provost's house, where Mr. Hughes was a guest.

St. Andrew's Hall was later crowded. The Lord Provost introduced Mr. Hughes to many prominent figures in Scotland, including the Marquis of Ailsa, Lord Eglinton, Lord Lamington, Lord Inverclyde, Lord Newlands, and the Lord Provosts of Edinburgh, Perth, Dundee, and Aberdeen, magistrates and councillors of Glasgow who wore their gowns and chains of office.

Mr. Fisher (High Commissioner for Australia, and Sir Thomas Mackenzie (High Commissioner for New Zealand) were welcomed by many old friends.

Mr. Hughes received the freedom of the City of Glasgow, enclosed in a gold casket. In responding, he took the opportunity again to emphasise the urgent necessity for deciding upon a policy for the economic salvation of the Empire, and made a striking allusion to the importance of this matter to Glasgow, which he described as the second city in the Empire, and one of the leading centres of industry and ship-building.

Mr Hughes aroused a tumult of applause after his péroration—"Let us go over Great Britain with a harrow of resolute purpose until we have turned up every root and fibre of German influence remaining." The audience rose and waved handkerchiefs, and the National Anthem was sung. "Will Ye No Come Back Again?" was also sung.

Mr. Hughes attended a luncheon at the City Chambers, at which Mr. Fisher also spoke.

The Lord Provost at the luncheon read the Earl of Rosebery's letter, in which it was stated that Mr. Hughes's reception was an evidence proving the realisation of the Empire. This distinguished statesman's speeches had greatly enhanced the cordiality with which he had been received.

The Lord Provost said that Mr. Hughes stood for all that was best in the Empire. He hoped Mr. Hughes would stay until he had cemented and solidified his work.

Mr. Hughes, in replying, said that now we had gathered the forces of the Empire together we had made Germany realise that she had underestimated our strength.

The Lord Provost, in presenting the freedom of the city to Mr. Hughes, said he hoped Australia would not work in vain for support in her strong attitude in trade and commerce after the war.

Mr. Hughes, in replying, said we must treat the post-war trade problem as we would treat the problem of our own business. Neither freetrader nor tariff-reformer could conduct his business on the policy of leaving things alone. We must prepare in advance for the problems of peace and war.

Mr. Hughes afterwards addressed business men at the Royal Exchange, and was the guest of the Lord Provost at dinner.

LABOUR GATHERING.

Remarkable scenes occurred at the Trade Union Congress. A noisy section protested when it was announced that Mr. Hughes had been invited to attend. They declared the Labour party repudiated Mr. Hughes, who was a propagandist for protection.

There was much clamour, some delegates vociferously demanding that Mr. Hughes should not be admitted. The chairman threatened to leave the chair to avoid Scottish unionists falling into disgrace. The congress by a large majority decided not to hear the dissentient delegates, a dozen of whom abruptly left.

Mr. Hughes arrived later, and was cheered. He described Labour's progress in Australia, where he said not a single waterside worker was outside the unions.

Although Mr. Hughes was hotly described as merely a nominal representative of Labour, and no friend of the workers, but a supporter of aggressive militarism, the outburst is not regarded as of any significance.

Mr. Hughes, on entering the congress, was unaware of the disturbance. He said that Labour must prove itself worthy. It was only craven to say that Labour was not concerned in the war.

ANZAC DAY IN MALTA.

MALTA, April 27.

Over 100 Anzacs are buried here in the two cemeteries. Their graves were adorned with flowers and wreaths on Anzac Day. The Governor was present at a memorial service.

NEWFOUNDLAND'S TRIBUTE.

MELBOURNE, Friday.

The Acting Prime Minister (Senator Pearce) yesterday received the following message from the Prime Minister of Newfoundland:—"Newfoundland joins in tributes to the Australian heroes of Gallipoli. (Signed) E. P. Morris, Prime Minister."

GARDEN ISLAND.

A WARNING.

MUST NOT BE DECLARED "BLACK."

MELBOURNE, Friday.

"As Garden Island is used for repairing our warships and troopships, it is a very serious thing for any union to declare the naval dockyard 'black,'" said Mr. Jensen (Minister for the Navy) to-day, in referring to the threat of the Amalgamated Society of Engineers. "If the union does so," added Mr. Jensen, "I shall be compelled to view such action from another, and a very serious, aspect."

RED CROSS.

TRADE FOR THE WOUNDED SOLDIERS.

Lady Helen Munro Ferguson opened a sale of basket work made by various disabled returned soldiers and others, held under the auspices of the New South Wales branch of the Red Cross Society at Messrs. W. A. Little and Co.'s auction-room yesterday. About 80 of the baskets offered for sale were the work of returned men, including the blind soldier, Private Hodgson, who was present with other workers who were well enough to leave the hospital. Interest naturally centred on the work of these men, and by the close of the afternoon practically the whole of this collection had been disposed of at figures up to £3 3s a basket. The rest of the work was made by Red Cross workers, and this was being offered mostly at trade prices. A collection of woodwork and carving was exhibited, but was not for sale. It is the intention of the Red Cross Society eventually to offer this woodwork and carving to the State, to be placed in some museum or elsewhere as a memorial to the work of returned soldiers in this direction. Yesterday a collecting box was placed next to this exhibition, and though the box has not been opened, it is known that donations of up to five guineas were placed in it.

Lady Helen Munro Ferguson was officially welcomed by Mr. J. O. Fairfax, chairman of the New South Wales branch of the Red Cross Society, and later was presented with a bouquet by Pte. Hodgson.

In declaring the sale open, her Excellency referred in eulogistic terms to the work displayed, and remarked that it was a great thing to see the result of the work of the Red Cross Society in teaching some of the returned men the means of earning a livelihood—a livelihood in the manufacture of things which, though small, were exceedingly useful.

Later in the afternoon all the returned soldiers present were entertained by Miss Eadith Walker in the Allora Tea Rooms, Pitt-street.

The present headquarters of the basket-work department are at 245 George-street, but they will shortly be removed to 24 Ash-street.

One hundred and twenty-four members of the crew are missing.

An official message states that a German submarine has been sunk off the east coast. The crew surrendered.

STEEL SHORTAGE.

SERIOUS POSITION.

DEPUTATION TO MINISTER.

MELBOURNE, Friday.

Representatives of those unions whose members are engaged in the iron and steel industry, waited on the Assistant Minister for Defence (Senator Gardiner) to-day, and pointed out that the shortage of materials in the industry was causing much unemployment. They urged that action should be taken by the Federal Ministry to provide supplies.

In introducing the deputation, Mr. Thompson Green, M.L.A. (South Australia), said that the shortage of material was causing grave concern to both employers and employees. Unless something were done in the near future, there would be a general stoppage of the works. Prices had risen from 80 to 100 per cent. since the outbreak of war, and were still rising. Shipping was controlled by the Federal Ministry, and arrangements should be made so that ships coming to Australia to take wheat cargoes should bring out materials needed for manufactures.

Mr. R. O'Halloran, representing the Victorian Boilermakers' Union, said if something were not done to relieve the situation something like 2000 men would be thrown out of employment.

Mr. C. Everest, representing the unions concerned in the remaining States, suggested that assistance should be given by the Federal Ministry to the Broken Hill Proprietary Company to establish an iron and girder plant.

Senator Gardiner said, in replying, that action had already been taken to prohibit the export of materials required in Australia. The suggestion to lay down a plant was, in his opinion, not the way out of the difficulty. It was too lengthy a process. For many years they had had a system of encouraging Australian industries, and that encouragement had been given generously by all Governments, but the encouragement had been taken advantage of to produce material which could be made most profitable, and no sustained effort had been put forward to produce articles in which there was not much profit. The usefulness of the Newcastle plant was being increased daily. He would, however, have the deputation's representations sent on to the Broken Hill Proprietary Company. With regard to shipping space, the Ministry had not stipulated what cargoes should be brought to Australia, and in the circumstances—with space so valuable and so much sought after everywhere—he did not see how the Ministry could have made any such stipulation. Representations would be made to Mr. Hughes, and if, by inducing them or otherwise, the shipping companies could be got to bring raw materials to Australia to keep the men here employed, the Ministry would do all it could to help. The deputation's requests would be brought before the Cabinet.

SOLDIERS' RIOTS.

PARTICIPANTS SENTENCED.

MELBOURNE, Friday.

The sentences imposed by the court-martial on soldiers who took part in the riots at Liverpool and Casula camps on February 14 were announced by the Minister for Defence (Senator Pearce) to-day. The following were found guilty of joining in a mutiny in forces belonging to his Majesty's regular forces, and sentenced:—

Acting Staff Sergeant-major Sydney E. Tanner, instructional staff, to be reduced to the ranks, to suffer penal servitude for the term of five years, and to be discharged with ignominy from his Majesty's service.

Private J. Sutcliffe, A.I.F., to suffer penal servitude for the term of three years, and to be discharged with ignominy from his Majesty's service.

Private F. Short, A.I.F., to undergo detention for 60 days, and to be discharged from his Majesty's service.

Private J. A. Macgregor, A.I.F., to be imprisoned with hard labour for three years, and to be discharged with ignominy from his Majesty's service.

Private P. Bruce, A.I.F., to be imprisoned with hard labour for 180 days, and to be discharged with ignominy from his Majesty's service.

Private R. Walker, A.I.F., to be imprisoned with hard labour for three years, and to be discharged with ignominy from his Majesty's service.

Private H. E. W. Anderson, A.I.F., to be imprisoned with hard labour with three years, and to be discharged with ignominy from his Majesty's service.

The finding and sentences of the Court in the above cases, with the exception of that of Private Bruce, were confirmed, but in the case of S.S.M. Tanner, the confirming authority (the Governor-General-in-Council) remitted two years penal servitude.

The following were found guilty of "being present, did not use their utmost endeavour to suppress a mutiny in forces belonging to his Majesty's regular forces":—Private L. J. Hanson, A.I.F., to be imprisoned with hard labour for 12 months, and to be discharged with ignominy from his Majesty's service.

Private J. C. Kain, A.I.F., to be imprisoned for 12 months, and to be discharged with ignominy from his Majesty's service.

Pte. G. D. Taylor, A.I.F., to be imprisoned with hard labour for 12 months, and to be discharged with ignominy from his Majesty's service.

Pte. A. Smith, A.I.F., to be imprisoned with hard labour for 180 days, and to be discharged with ignominy from his Majesty's service.

Pte. B. Sutherland, A.I.F., and Pte. J. Thomas, A.I.F., to be imprisoned with hard labour for 12 months, and to be discharged with ignominy from his Majesty's service.

Pte. T. Jackson, A.I.F., to be imprisoned for 180 days with hard labour, and to be discharged with ignominy from his Majesty's service.

Four soldiers who were charged with both the offences mentioned above were found not guilty on both charges, and were released.

In the case of Private J. Bruce the finding and sentence of the Court were not confirmed by the confirming authority, and the accused was released.

Two soldiers, Private R. H. Banning and H. Pearce, were found guilty of striking a superior officer, and were sentenced to be imprisoned with hard labour for 90 and 180 days respectively, to which also was added the sentence of discharge with ignominy from his Majesty's service. The finding and sentence in both these cases were confirmed.

RUBBER WORKERS' STRIKE.

MELBOURNE, Friday.

About 200 employees in the motor tyre and moulding department at the Dunlop Rubber Company's works at Montague left work today in consequence of the speeding up policy which they assert the management is endeavouring to enforce. Should the dispute be not settled, union officials declare that about 1500 employees at the works will be involved.

STATE CABINET.

CAUCUS SUPPORTS MINISTERS.

RESIGNATIONS NOT APPROVED.

DELEGATION TO P.L.L.

Yesterday's caucus meeting, which extended from the morning till nightfall, left the position as between the State Cabinet and the Political Labour League Conference in a complete tangle.

When the caucus met at 10 in the morning there was a large attendance, and Mr. Holman took a dramatic course. He handed in to the officials of the party the resignation of himself and all his colleagues, and then invited the caucus to elect another Ministry.

It was moved that the resignation be accepted by the party, and that other Ministers be elected. The division on this motion showed that practically the whole of caucus was behind the Government, only four members voting in favour of other Ministers being chosen, the minority consisting of Messrs. Stuart Robertson, Minahan, M'Girr, and Dooley.

The caucus thus almost unanimously decided that, so far as it was concerned, it would not displace the existing Government. It was decided eventually that a delegation, consisting of five members outside the Ministry, wait during the evening upon the P.L.L. Conference and inform the assembled delegates that the caucus declined to form another Cabinet. It was made clear to the gathering by Mr. Holman that, in the event of the conference persisting in its attitude of censure upon the Government, and in the event of the caucus still declining to elect within a reasonable time another batch of Ministers in substitution of the present Cabinet, he would deem it his duty to advise his Excellency the Governor to send for the leader of the Opposition (Mr. Wade) to form a Ministry.

It is generally understood in State political circles that in such an event Mr. Wade would refuse to form an Administration. Such a refusal on his part might bring about a general election.

The delegates chosen by the caucus to lay the case before the conference were Messrs. M'Gowen (the first State Labour Premier), R. D. Meagher (the Speaker of the Legislative Assembly), W. J. J. Morrish, J. Storey, and Jabez Wright.

THE RESOLUTIONS.

The following two resolutions were carried at yesterday's meeting at Parliament House:—

"(1) The caucus is of opinion that the vote of censure passed by the conference affects the Parliamentary party as a whole, and, therefore, the acceptance of the resignation of the Government by the caucus under the circumstances would be illogical and improper.

"(2) In view of the foregoing and of the announced intention of the Government to force upon the Legislative Council the democratic and industrial measures which have been passed by the Assembly, the caucus invites the conference to express a definite opinion as to whether the resignation of the Government ought or ought not to be accepted."

SPECIAL SESSION PROMISED.

It was decided by the caucus that a short session of Parliament should be called at an early date to enable the Bulk Handling and the North Shore Bridge Bills, and some other measures to be sent up again to the Legislative Council.

Steps are also to be taken, the caucus was informed, to make the long delayed appointments to the Upper House. The exact strength of the batch of appointees was not mentioned, but it is understood to be between 12 and 20. The number, however, is really for his Excellency to determine.

Should the Council, despite the infusion of new blood in the shape of a dozen or so Labour sympathisers, fail to carry the measures sent up, then other steps of a more drastic character are to be taken aiming at the abolition of the Upper House.

CONFERENCE WAVERING.

The view put before the P.L.L. Conference last night that if the censure were persisted in Mr. Holman would resign, and Mr. Wade would be asked to form a Ministry, had a palpable effect upon delegates, and one of the chief industrial spokesmen declared that there was no desire on his part that any Minister should resign. Another delegate wanted to know whether the promise of 20 appointments to the Council was going to twist delegates from their decision, and lead them to take a retrograde step, which was evidently contemplated by some. The whole point was, said Mr. Lamond, whether conference could or could not depose a leader who declined to carry out the Labour platform.

After the caucus delegates had been heard last night, the conference decided to adjourn the debate till Monday to permit time for reflection on the serious position that had arisen—the most serious in its history, as the chairman (Mr. Farrar, M.L.C.) put it. The caucus will meet again on Tuesday.

FLOODS IN TASMANIA.

HUON AND KING RIVERS.

EXTENSIVE DAMAGE.

HOBART, Friday.

The Huon River is still in high flood. Several residents were driven from their homes by the flood waters, and some had to seek shelter in the Congregational Church at Huonville. There is still a considerable quantity of water across the roads, and vehicle and motor traffic is held up. Thousands of acres of land, including orchards, are covered with water. Last night a boat was plying in the main street of Queenstown.

During the 24 hours ended 9 a.m. yesterday, 4.76in of rain fell, and in the previous 24 hours 6.3in. The abnormal downpour caused the highest flood ever known in the King River, which rose two feet above the railway track on the bridge at the Pookana, on the Mount Lyell railway. Traffic between Queenstown and Strahan, consequently, is suspended to-day.

The outward train, which left yesterday for Strahan, with passengers, including soldiers returning to camp after holiday leave, had to return to Queenstown. It was expected that the train would get across the bridge last night. On the North Dundas tramways several washaways have occurred. The railway lines on several routes have also suffered.

BUSH MYSTERY.

MAN SERIOUSLY INJURED.

INVERELL, Friday.

A mysterious occurrence is reported from Ashford. David Brown, who has a selection twelve miles from that centre, was visited during the holidays by his brother-in-law, W. Townsend, of Garah, Moree. The men, who apparently were on friendly terms on Sunday, left with the intention of going for a drive, and shortly afterwards Brown's wife noticed Townsend running towards the river. When accosted he did not reply, but kept on running, and her suspicions being aroused, she went in search of her husband, whom she found lying unconscious, with a gash in his head. The police were communicated with, and Brown was brought into Inverell, where he still lies in the hospital, unconscious.

Townsend in the meantime had disappeared, and though a number of police, with a black-tracker, have been scouring the country, no trace of him has yet been found. The country is mountainous.

SPEECHES BY CAUCUS DELEGATES.

THE CENSURE MOTION.

There was a great hum of voices, a general air of expectancy pervading the I.O.O.F. Hall, where the P.L.L. delegates assembled last night to hear the latest developments in connection with the censure motion passed by that body upon the State Ministry.

A delegation from the Parliamentary Labour Caucus had come to inform delegates that the caucus were standing by the Ministers in the crisis, and declined to elect another Ministry in their place, although the Premier had handed in to caucus the resignations of himself and colleagues, and had invited them to form another Ministry out of the rank and file of the party if they were so disposed.

The chair was occupied by Mr. Farrar, M.L.C. He announced he had been requested to take a motion to have the standing orders suspended to allow the delegation to be heard.

The standing orders were accordingly suspended.

MR. MEAGHER'S ADDRESS.

The first speaker among the caucus delegates was Mr. Meagher, who first read the resolutions that had been arrived at by the gathering of Labour members as reported elsewhere. It was, he said, a large meeting regarding the attitude taken by the Premier upon the motion which was carried condemning the Holman Government in connection with the reform of the Upper House. The Premier had handed in the resignation of himself and his colleagues that morning to the Parliamentary Labour Caucus, and they had had it under consideration. Last year, as president, he laid down the dictum that the conference of the Labour party there was the high court as far as the party was concerned. (Applause.) The position had been fully considered, and by a majority of four or five to one the caucus had decided that they would not accept the resignation of Mr. Holman. (Loud applause.) The delegates came there in no spirit of bluff to speak as men to men.

A delegate: You cannot bluff, no matter what you do.

Mr. Meagher: I say we come here in the purest spirit of candour, anxious to do the best for the movement. He went on to say that the Labour party, by a large majority, were standing by the Government because the vote that had been carried was just as big a censure upon the party. There was no man in the caucus sufficiently low to shelter himself behind the shield of cowardice and say he would allow the Government to take all the censure and none himself. (Applause.)

NO BLACK-LEGGING.

He told them quite candidly that if the conference decided that it had no confidence in Mr. Holman and the Government, the general position was a very simple one. As the Parliamentary Labour party had decided, they were not going to take the places of or blackleg on the men they put in. (Loud applause.) There was only one constitutional position open to the Premier if their decision was unfavourable to him, and that was to abide by it. If they decided they had no further confidence in the Premier and his colleagues, there was only one position open to Mr. Holman, and that was to hand his resignation to his Excellency Sir Gerald Strickland, and to recommend that the leader of the Opposition (Mr. Wade) should be sent for. (Interruption and laughter.)

A voice: Bluff.

Mr. Meagher: Let me say that personally I don't care a snap of my fingers whether you think it is bluff or not. (Interruption.) He added that he had stated in the caucus that there was dilatoriness in bringing forward certain industrial legislation, but because he had, say, an abscess on his neck was no reason why he should cut his head off with a razor. That was the position. There was nobody else to send for.

CENSURE OR CORRECTIVE?

If, continued Mr. Meagher, Mr. Wade had the management of the elections he would be in the position of the rider who got a flying start. He desired to put the aspect clearly before them that Labour was on the box-seat at the present time in power. All they asked was whether they insisted that the Holman Government did not possess their confidence, or whether the motion carried was a corrective—and the Ministry was not above receiving a corrective. Before the motion was carried the Minister for Agriculture (Mr. Grahame) had announced that he intended sending up the Bulk Handling Bill again to the Upper House, and other bills would be sent back. On these matters Mr. Holman had said he intended to call a short session independent of what the conference had done entirely. (Laughter.) Satirical laughter would not mend the situation. (Hear, hear.)

UPPER HOUSE APPOINTMENTS.

Proceeding, Mr. Meagher said that, as a matter of fact, the Upper House could not be amended by a bill passed by the Assembly, and he begged them to understand that there were constitutional difficulties.

A delegate: But you made no attempt.

Mr. Meagher said he could tell them that an attempt would be made to send certain bills back to the Council in a session to be called in an extremely short period of time, and if these bills were sent back the Government's next step would be to ask for sufficient members of a Labour character to help carry the legislation. They could not abolish the Upper House as easily as ordering a pound of chops. Let them make no mistake about that. He could assure them that the caucus had temperately and honestly endeavoured to find a solution and a way out, and that they therefore placed the resolutions of the caucus before them for their favourable consideration. (Applause.)

P.L.L. CONFERENCE SUPREME.

Mr. Morrish, M.L.A., said the censure motion carried by the conference did not apparently reflect in any way whatever upon any person other than the members of the Ministry. The caucus, however, after thorough consideration, had realised that in condemning the Government, the conference had alike condemned the whole Labour party. That being so, the party, as a party, could neither logically nor properly accept the resignation of the Government. "Is it the intention of the conference," he asked, "that the whole party shall stand condemned in the eyes of the whole movement?"

Cries of "Yes" and "No."

"I merely ask you to determine that issue," he said, "as a guide for our future action." The Government had resigned, he said, and the caucus had declined to accept their resignations. If the conference desired the Ministry to remain, then it should say so, and not leave the caucus in doubt about it. The one definite thing about the caucus decision was that they did not desire to replace the present Ministry with other members of the Labour party. (Hear, hear.) "I am prepared," he said, "to acknowledge the supremacy of the conference in this matter. But all I am personally concerned in is that you should say definitely what you wish us to do. Is the Government condemned, with a view to the resignation, or what?"

Mr. Last: Yes, ultimate annihilation.

"I am of opinion," Mr. Morrish went on, "that neither Mr. Holman nor his Government was called upon to resign under these circumstances. (Hear, hear.) But they have taken that course, and because of that, this difficulty confronts us. We are prepared to accept your determination."

MR. STOREY'S ADMISSIONS.

Mr. John Storey, M.L.A., said he had always held that the industrialist section of the movement should take a keener interest in the politics of the day. He had, perhaps, been more than ordinarily militant in his desire to see that legislation which would assist industrialists should be pushed on, and perhaps for that reason he had been an overbearing member of the party. But the position to-day called from the industrialists a definite declaration of what they meant. It was impossible to censure the Government without censuring the whole party. "You make the party," he said, "and the party makes the Ministry." The Ministry has the arrangement of its policy in its hands, and submits it to the caucus for approval, and the caucus decides what is to be done. Now, if the Government has been jellyfish-like, I must take my share of blame for being just as much a jellyfish." For three years, he went on, Labour had been in a very precarious position, and had to depend upon the votes of men who were not Labour men at all to keep in office—notably upon the assistance of Mr. Willis and of Mr. Morton. "After the next elections, when Labour came back with a majority," he said, "we came to you, our masters, and laid before you a definite policy which we quite intended to give effect to. But something happened which nobody could have foreseen. We had the war come upon us——"

There was some satirical laughter at this, whereupon a delegate shouted, "Those chaps ought to go to the war, and they wouldn't laugh then."

There were, continued Mr. Storey, requests from many quarters to suspend all legislation till after the war.

Voices: Not from leagues or unions.

Mr. Storey: "No; but we got requests from you to pass a moratorium for the assistance of those who might be in distress because of the war." From other sources, he went on, there were requests that we should suspend the operation of all awards. They were faced with a number of difficulties which were unprecedented in the history of politics, and if they had not gone fast enough with the programme it was because of these difficulties. "If I didn't realise the enormous responsibility of this situation you have created," he continued, "I would say to you in a moment 'We have done our best, and you can do your damnedest.' Ten years ago I would have said it. But now the responsibility of attending to the interests of the great mass of the people outside is too great, and if we are to go into opposition now again for some years, it is because you fail to realise the same responsibilities. Any number of inducements might be offered to the Government to throw up the sponge. Any number of thousands of pounds might be available to those who are unscrupulous enough to think of it. Hostile people who have fought us for years would glory in the fact that there is such disintegration in our midst. But don't consider us. Do whatever you want to do. The most of us are strong enough to go back among you and work.

Cries of "Oh, oh."

"That's no good," said Mr. Storey. "In 1904 I went back to work for three years, and none of you heard me complain. And I did not sneak out of the movement either. (Hear, hear.) Put the lot of us out if you like, but keep a number strong enough to carry out the legislation you want.

"But you don't expect me, as an old trades-unionist," he concluded, "to blackleg on my pals, do you? Do you want me, because I didn't get into the Ministry, to turn round on my pals and take their jobs, because the conference has got them by the wool?"

MOVEMENT IS EVERYTHING.

Mr. Jabez Wright said he was not entitled to vote on the censure motion, but if he had he would have voted for it. But he would have done that to spur them all on to better work. He was no better than anybody else, and took the blame equally with the others. Now, they had to consider the movement. Individuals were nothing; the movement was everything. He did not come to smoodge for the Ministry, or the party. "Do what you like and take the consequences," he said; "but for goodness sake think. Don't jump mad because you may have a set on some of the Ministry."

"DON'T ASK US TO DO IT."

Mr. M'Gowen (ex-leader and Premier) said the position was more difficult than any he had ever experienced. "You won't ask a man to do what you would not do yourself," he went on. "I am not going to apologise or explain or make any promises. We are responsible for the creation of the Government, and we would be white-livered curs to shelter ourselves behind their resignations and take their jobs. (Hear, hear.) I won't take the position, and no other man among us will take it. And if we did you would lose confidence in us at once. (Hear, hear.) We all hate the crawler. (Hear, hear.) There can't be another Labour Government in this Parliament, and if that is so, then the leader of the Opposition comes in. Do you want me to support him?

A lady delegate: No thanks; no more leg-irons.

Mr. M'Gowen: You won't get us to support him if you do want us to. Will that benefit the movement, for which so many men and women have sacrificed themselves for 25 years? No, I don't believe any of you desire to see the Liberal party reign again in this State.

AN INDUSTRIALIST RELENTS.

Mr. J. Doyle, who has been elected president of the conference by the industrial section, said he did not want to create any disintegration in the party. They did not, by the vote of censure passed, call upon Mr. Holman or any of his Ministers to resign. He wanted the party to go before the electors at the end of the year united. (Hear, hear.) It was for the conference to say whether the delegation was bluffing or not.

Mr. Meagher: I give you my assurance that it is loaded. (Loud laughter.)

Mr. Doyle concluded by moving that the debate be adjourned till Monday.

MR. LAMOND'S VIEW.

Mr. Lamond said he was exceedingly sorry to hear the speech made by Mr. Doyle in support of the motion which he (Mr. Lamond) was in favour of. The delegation had endeavoured to dragoon the conference into taking back the decision it had arrived at the other night. They had to decide whether the conference controlled the political party or not. They had been told that under no circumstances would the present Labour party undertake leadership if the conference wanted the abolition of the Legislative Council to be part of the Government programme. That had been stated to them in the clearest and most definite terms, and, in his opinion, that was all that was involved in all this oratory they had that night.

By a clever tactical move, said Mr. Lamond, they——

A delegate, rising to a point of order, said that Mr. Lamond could not, on a motion for adjournment, discuss this aspect, but the chairman did not uphold the point.

A RETROGRADE STEP.

Mr. Lamond, resuming, said the debate should be adjourned in order that delegates should realise the importance of the retrograde step which evidently some of them contemplated taking. They would have to determine next Monday the issue whether the conference could remove the leader of the party that was in power in Parliament.

A delegate: It cannot be done.

Mr. Lamond said if they accepted what had been said by the delegation it could not be done. If they had a leader who refused to lead them on the question on which they most wanted to be led, and who refused to place before the electors of the country a request for a mandate to carry out their programme, and when they said they did not want him as leader, they were told by Mr. M'Gowen it was blacklegging on the movement if another man took the position. (Interruption.)

The chairman: Mr. Lamond is going a little too wide.

Mr. Lamond said that Mr. Doyle's speech would be one of the most sorrowful in the annals of the Labour movement in New South Wales.

A voice: There is a lot of common sense about it.

Mr. Lamond: They would come to the common sense of it on Monday night, and they would have to decide whether the platform of the party as made by the conference was to go before the electors or whether it need not go before the electors, because the leaders in Parliament refused to do so. That was the issue, and he thought the delegates should have time to consider the position. The point was whether the promise of twenty seats in the Legislative Council was going to twist 100 delegates from the decision they had arrived at. (Laughter.) It was an incident which showed the iniquity of having a nominee second Chamber in a system of free, democratic government.

CAPTAIN TOOMBS'S POSITION.

Captain Toombs, M.L.A., said the position was that the caucus was not sure that Mr. Holman took up the correct position the other night.

The Chairman: You must confine yourself to reasons why this question should or should not be adjourned.

Captain Toombs said the caucus was to meet again on Monday morning to receive the report of the delegations to the conference. The position was a serious one, and the best thing to do was to clean up the mess, and do it as quickly as possible.

Mr. Meagher, in answer to a question, said that, although the caucus had adjourned until Monday morning, it could further defer its meeting to Tuesday to await the decision of the conference deliberations on Monday night.

The motion for the adjournment of the debate till Monday was carried on the voices.

GENERAL BUSINESS.

Second in importance to the debate on the Parliamentary situation in the conference was the declaration of the poll for the election of officers. The "Industrialists," as they are called, returned an overwhelming majority of their candidates as against the Labour Leaguers; they captured the presidential seat for one of their members; they secured another of their members for the vice-president's chair, and did not oppose the second one; their candidate lost the secretaryship by 15 votes; for the inter-State executive they gave the place of honour to Mr. Hughes, the Prime Minister of Australia, and returned one of their own candidates as second man; while for the general executive of 30 members they romped home with 27 men in their interest. The three outsiders are Mr. W. A. Holman, M.L.A. (Premier), Mr. J. C. Watson, and Mr. Arthur Rae.

RULES.

The debate on the report of the rules committee, deferred from the previous evening was continued, the question being the adoption of a new paragraph, to stand as clause H of rule 6:—"This rule shall not be curtailed, nor shall its construction be governed by any other rule."

Mr. D. Guihen moved the adjournment of the debate until the following evening. He hoped then to be able to submit a motion widening the franchise in the selection of candidates.

The motion was agreed to without debate.

ELECTION OF OFFICERS.

The returning officer, Mr. J. J. Graves, announced the result of the ballot taken for the election of officers for the year:—President: John Doyle, 100; E. H. Farrar, M.L.C., 69; H. Lamond, 14. Mr. Doyle was declared elected. Vice-president: W. O'Brien, 73; D. Guihen, 37. Messrs. O'Brien and Guihen were declared elected. Secretary: P. C. Evans, 98; G. Last, 84. Interstate executive: W. M. Hughes, 161; D. Mutch, 80. For the executive of 30 the following members were elected:—D. Mutch, 121; A. C. Willis, 115; A. Blakeley, 114; M. Burke, 112; J. Woods, 111; W. Cahill, 110; J. J. Bailey, 108; C. C. Lazzarini, 107; C. Last, 106; C. Thompson, 105; D. Johnstone, 103; P. Adler, 101; W. H. Lambert, 101; F. Glynn, 100; J. C. Watson, 98; A. Rae, 93; J. M'Donald, 93; J. C. Bodkin, 92; J. Millard, 93; W. M'Kell, 92; M. E. O'Grady, 91; W. Morby, 91; W. M'Pherson, 90; W. Carbine, 88; L. Herman, 88; E. Cross, 87; W. Newberry, 86; E. Buckley, 83; W. A. Holman, 82; W. T. Sturgess, 81.

Wild cheering followed the announcement of the result.

LAND POLICY.

The report of the special committee on the land policy of the conference was considered, and several recommendations were agreed to. Further consideration was deferred.

The conference adjourned until 2 o'clock this afternoon.

INDUSTRIALISTS TO CONFER.

The members of the industrial section of the conference have not yet made up their minds what attitude to adopt in the political situation, but they will hold an informal meeting this morning to talk over matters, and to-morrow morning a further meeting will probably be held, at which the position will, in all probability, be exhaustively discussed. As these members form a majority of the conference, and as they practically swept the polls in the election of officers for the ensuing year, they will have a commanding influence in Monday night's deliberations.

BARRIER MINERS.

AWARD ISSUED.

MELBOURNE, Friday.

In the Arbitration Court to-day Mr. Justice Higgins announced his proposed award in the plaint of the Barrier branch of the Amalgamated Miners' Association and others against the Broken Hill Proprietary Company and others. The plaint was for a 44-hour week and improved conditions of work. His Honor granted the underground miners at Broken Hill a 44-hour week, but as to other workers, both at Broken Hill and Port Pirie, continued the system of 48 hours. He granted an increase in the basic wage at Broken Hill of 1/9 per hour, bringing it to 11/3, and ordered that the minimum wage for contract workers underground should be at the same rate. The basic wage at Port Pirie was fixed at 11/. He refused the claim of the engineers for dirt money and shorter hours, and refused the claim for hot and wet places; but ordered overtime rates of time and a half on ordinary days, and double time on Saturdays and holidays, with the exception that men on continual process work or doing ordinary repairs to machinery should receive time and a half at all times.

The wages for the various workers were fixed at from 11/3 to 14/3 per day, according to the nature of the work.

The Amalgamated Society of Engineers and the Federated Engine-drivers and Firemen's Association respectively undertake to the Court that an ample supply of labour of the kinds supplied by their respective organisations will, during the term of the award, be available.

Mr. Justice Higgins, in the course of his judgment, said it was the practice of the Court to adhere to the Australian standard of 48 hours unless a strong and distinctive reason was put forward for a reduction. Dangers to body and health were distinctly relevant to the question of hours, because the longer time a man was subjected to conditions underground the greater risk he ran. The companies said the substitution of 44 hours for 48 hours would involve a decrease of output by at least one-twelfth, and they urged with much force that a decrease in the output of lead, when lead was so much needed for munitions, would be lamentable. The men assured him that nearly as much would be produced in 44 hours, owing to the greater efficiency, and spring resulting from greater leisure and greater access to pure air which Saturday afternoon would involve. He would embody in his award the undertaking given him by the Barrier branch, that, all things being equal, its members would produce as much ore per man each week, in 44 hours, as they produced under a 48-hour week. The men at the Port Pirie smelters had, without any suggestion or pressure from him voluntarily offered to have the boon of 44 hours postponed until after the war. This was a noble gift to the nation, by men who had not even the advantage of a seventh day's rest. There could be no doubt that an increase was necessary in the minimum rate of wages at Broken Hill, because of the remarkable rise in recent years of the cost of living. Most of the existing industrial unrest was attributable to this cause.

The new rates are to be paid as from May 12. The costs of the men were refused.

KILLED IN ACTION.

LIEUT. HOWES AT KUT-EL-AMARA.

Mr. and Mrs. A. Howes, of Cooeytong, Lang-road, Centennial Park, have just received a letter from Captain and Adjutant Cyril D. Noyes, 2nd Rajputs, written from a hospital ship in the Tigris, telling them of the death of their son, Lieutenant Gilbert Howes.

This young officer was a Sydney boy, educated at Cleveland-street Superior Public School and Newington College, and on the outbreak of war, not being then 20 years of age, he joined the 3rd Battalion under Lieutenant-Colonel Owen, as a sergeant. He got his star in the officers' school in Egypt, and was then taken over by this Indian regiment.

In his letter to the bereaved parents, Captain Noyes writes, on March 10, two days after their son met his death:—"I write to tell you of the death of your son. I was not actually near him when he was killed, but I am told he did not suffer, and that death was almost instantaneous. The regiment was sent in to capture a strong redoubt held by the Turks, six miles east of Kut-el-Amara. We attacked in four lines, and your son was on the left of the third line leading his men on under of murderous fire. When I last saw him he was laughing and cheering on his men, and was then about 1000 yards from the position we were attacking. I never saw him again. I am told he was killed before we got to the position. Every British officer of my regiment was either killed or wounded, so the difficulties of gaining any information of real value are very great, as there is no one who was in it left to search for it. We are all on hospital ships on our way down stream. I cannot tell you how valuable an officer he was to me. His cheerfulness under all conditions (and they have been very trying sometimes), and his keenness on his job were making a very fine officer of him in a very short time. He was very popular with the men, and took a great interest in them.

"You have my deepest sympathy in your loss, and if I can gain further particulars I will forward them to you."

ECONOMIC HISTORY.

Mr. Meredith Atkinson, M.A., director of the University tutorial classes, read a paper last night before the Australian Historical Society, in the Education-buildings, on some notes on the early economic history of Australia. Mr. Atkinson's paper covered the first 30 years of Australian settlement, including the first period of absolute dependence; the second, in which the colony worked towards self-sufficiency; and the third, characterised by an economic development more complete than was possible in the earlier periods. The lecturer showed how the settlers acquired a condition of self-sufficiency, and indicated the character and direction which economic development first pursued.

PEARLING COMMISSION.

PERTH, Friday.

The Pearling Commission continued its sittings at Broome. Herbert Sewell, a pearler, said that dummying was the most serious evil on the field, in that it increased the Japanese power. On financial grounds alone, pearling could not be carried on with white crews at Broome.

TEMPERANCE SUNDAY.

To-morrow the subject of temperance will be dwelt upon in a number of churches, as the New South Wales Alliance has sent out its yearly appeal that the last Sunday in April should be observed as Temperance Sunday. It is expected that the subject will more generally be in evidence than in former years owing to the referendum in connection with the earlier closing of hotels.

RECRUITING.

MEETINGS IN THE CITY.

COUNTRY BOY'S OFFER.

The work of the State recruiting committee continues to be extremely heavy, and yesterday meetings were held in some half dozen suburban and country centres. The meeting in Martin-place on Thursday night was successful. The speakers included Sergts. Beynon, Perry, Walsh, and Galli, and at the conclusion of the meeting 22 recruits handed in their names. Another meeting was held at the same place during luncheon hour yesterday, eight recruits handing in their names.

The committee has received the following letter from an eager lad at Taylor's Arm, via Macksville, Nambucca River:—"Dear Sirs,—Just a few lines to ask you if the military authorities would have me for active service in A.I.F's? I would like to be a machine-gunner in an armoured motor car, but if there are not any armoured motors, work on foot would do. I would like to be a bugler or anything in the A.I.F. My age is 14½ years, 35 inches chest, and 5ft 2in height. I would be very pleased if you would write and let me know. I am, yours faithfully, CHARLIE WHITE."

News has been received in Sydney that Lieut. J. M. Couchman, late of instruction staff, has been appointed captain. In November last he was one of the six sergeant-majors of I.S. chosen to go abroad with Australian Expeditionary Forces, with the rank of lieutenant, and since then his promotion has been rapid.

"THE NOBLEST CALL."

PRESENTATION TO LIEUT. CARMICHAEL.

The officers of the Education Department, numbering some hundred, presented the ex-Minister, Lieutenant A. C. Carmichael, yesterday afternoon, with a pistol and a sword, on the eve of his departure for the front. There was a stirring note in the eloquent references made to Lieutenant Carmichael's patriotic action in volunteering, and in his own account of why he decided to enlist.

First of all, the chairman, Mr. Peter Board, the Director of Education, mentioned that the staff of the department were grateful to their late Minister for his successful efforts to give them better accommodation in the handsome offices that had been built. If he were asked to say what was the outstanding feature of Mr. Carmichael's administration he would say it was the passage of the Amending University Act, which had linked the public school system up with the University. (Loud applause.) Their education system would always bear the imprint he had made upon it. Those who knew the ex-Minister best, and were aware of the dogged purpose which characterised him, were not at all surprised when he answered what was after all the noblest call of all that the country could make on one of its citizens. (Cheers.) He was sure that he had not offered to go to the front for the mere sake of fighting, but it was the duty of all when a Power sought to trample on their liberty and to impose a "kultur" upon them that would blot out their civilisation not only to fight but to kill as well. (Applause.)

Mr. Dawson, on behalf of the inspectors of the department, and Mr. Kilminister, on behalf of the clerical staff, also spoke.

There was a great outburst of cheering when the chairman handed Lieutenant Carmichael, who, as he stepped on to the platform, presented a martial figure in his khaki uniform, the pistol and sword, remarking, amid laughter, that in modern warfare one of them was more useful than ornamental, and the other more ornamental than useful.

Lieutenant Carmichael briefly narrated his administrative association with the department. When he first saw the inadequate offices in which the staff was housed, and learnt from Mr. Board that a new office had been promised for 30 years, he determined that an office should be built worthy of what should be the first department in the State. He had also set out to achieve another thing, and that was to place the education system of the State on a higher and sounder place according as he had been advised by the director. (Cheers.)

He told the story of his enlistment for, as he said, the first time. He recalled that he had been appointed a Royal Commission to inquire into irrigation matters, and his investigations showed him that in that field of rural activity there was unlimited scope for a man of persistency and initiative. He had been offered the post of Irrigation Commissioner; the question had presented itself to him—was there not a greater issue? They were engaged industriously, and sometimes foolishly, in passing industrial laws, and evolving this and that legislative enactment, but this would all be of no avail if some other nations could come here and brush it aside as if it were cobwebs. (Applause.) In that spirit he had decided that this duty lay in going to the front. (Renewed cheering.)

The ex-Minister observed, with a smile, that he would not tell them why he resigned from the Cabinet. That was a mystery, and would remain so to the end. (Cheers and laughter.)

The gathering concluded with cheers for Lieutenant and Mrs. Carmichael.

RESPONSE AT BARRACKS.

FINE TYPE OF MEN.

There was the usual falling off in the recruiting returns yesterday, in spite of the fact that that day last year saw a good response, owing to the closing of the Royal Agricultural Show. However, those who did apply for enrolment were of a good class, and chief amongst them was a big New Zealander. He wore on his right sleeve a little red badge, on which was a crown and the initials G. and R., and underneath a wreath of laurels in gold. The recruit explained that this was the badge of the New Zealand returned soldiers, and was recognised by the Government, though not issued through an association as was the metal badge in New South Wales. He added that he went to the front with the Canterbury Rifles, and after two months in the trenches was invalided home suffering from shell concussion. Now that he felt himself again he had come up to join on, and see a little more of the great adventure. "A fine example to the shirkers and cold-feet brigade here, who have not even offered to go once," remarked the recruiting officer.

Other recruits included an advertiser, an employee from the telegraph department, a teamster and selector from East Dorrigo, a packer, and a registered dental surgeon. Two farmers from Young also came along, a tailor's presser, a labourer, who had last been employed in Melbourne, an engine-driver from Corrimal mine, a farm hand from the Premier's electorate, a groom, a railway employee from Condobolin, a handyman from Leeton, and a farm labourer from Mount Murray.

IN OTHER STATES.

MELBOURNE, Friday.

To-day's recruiting figures were:—Volunteered, 168; accepted, 116.

The recruiting train tour through the western district, which concluded to-night, resulted in 125 volunteering. Members of the party are pleased with the result.

ADELAIDE, Friday.

To-day 57 men volunteered at Adelaide, and 43 were accepted.

BRISBANE, Friday.

In Queensland to-day 54 were accepted.

MEETING IN THE CITY.

The recruiting platform opposite the General Post Office was occupied by several speakers last night, who made an earnest appeal for men to a crowd of varying, but never small, dimensions. Lieut. Budd was chairman.

Mr. F. Foster, from the headquarters of the State recruiting committee, said that there should be only one party in Australia—the party which would carry out the work necessary to win the war. There should be only one policy—the policy that would provide men, munitions, and money; and that would adequately provide for returned soldiers and dependents of the fallen after the war. (Applause.)

Other speakers were Lieut. Doull and Sergt.-Majors Mack and Welsh.

DETENTION CAMP RE-OPENED.

The detention camp at Middle Head, which has been closed for some time, has now been reopened for the accommodation of defaulters from the senior cadet parades.

FEDERAL PARLIAMENT.

A SHORT SESSION.

MELBOURNE, Friday.

It is understood that the business of the Federal Parliament, when it resumes its sittings on May 9, will principally consist of financial measures. Ministers expect that they will be able to get the necessary bills through in about a fortnight, when a further adjournment will take place.

According to present arrangements the Prime Minister (Mr. Hughes) will return to Australia early in July, and as soon as convenient after his arrival Parliament will again be called together.

It is probable that the conscription question will be raised in both Houses shortly after Parliament meets, on May 9—not with a view to taking a vote on the subject, but with the object of placing necessary facts before members and the country.

Kerr was fined £2 for the assault, and £6 15s costs, and £1 and £2 8s costs for using insulting words. He was also ordered to enter into sureties to be of good behaviour for 10 months.

BREAD BAKERS.

MEN STAND FIRM.

The ultimatum issued by the Operative Bakers' Association recently to the Master Bakers' Association that if certain terms as to wages and working conditions were not conceded the men would give a week's notice to leave their employment, expired last evening. It is understood that many of the men handed in their notices when finishing work in the evening. If the bakers adhere to their intention, there will be no bread baked next week.

The men are firm in their resolve to have their demands conceded. Although the Industrial Court on Thursday granted a rule nisi, on the application of the Masters' Association, calling upon the Operative Bakers' Association to show cause why its registration should not be cancelled, the men, at a meeting, decided to confirm the ultimatum, and put up a fight.

UNION STATEMENT.

Mr. Halliday, the secretary of the men's association, said last evening that the cause of the trouble dated back to 1914, when the award under which the men worked expired. The union then formulated new claims, which came before the wages board. There were several adjournments, however, and when the war broke out the board suspended its sittings, to await the Government's decision as to whether all wages boards should be cancelled during the war. The matter was not brought up again until April of last year, when representatives of the men's union and of the Master Bakers' Association met in conference. It was then understood that the Government recommended the chairman of boards should not sanction increases until the financial position improved, and the agreement, which expired in 1914, was renewed for a period of 12 months. The extra cost of living was then being keenly felt by the men, but they did not push their claims for extra wages on that account. During the past 12 months the master bakers' position was better than it had been prior to the war, although the day-baking system had been introduced. This was shown by the fact that more members were in regular employment than before the war. When efforts had been made by the union to have the men's conditions improved, the employers had put every obstacle in their way. His union was prepared to negotiate with the masters on Tuesday last, but the latter refused to discuss the matter, while the ultimatum was pending. The bringing of the matter before the Industrial Court had made the men more determined to see the trouble through.

Mr. Halliday added that he still hoped matters would be adjusted in time to avoid a stoppage of work. When the question of the ultimatum was last before the meeting of the men, the motion that it be withdrawn received strong support, and he was of the opinion that if the meeting had been better attended it would have been carried. He was still hopeful that a conference with the employers would be held, and so prevent the ultimatum being carried into effect by the men.

A mass meeting of the members of the union will be held at the Trades Hall this afternoon, when the question of the ultimatum will be further considered.

EMPLOYERS REVIEW POSITION.

In connection with the trouble in the bread-baking industry the following official statement of the position has been made by Mr. M. Thomson, secretary of the Master Bakers' Association:—

A crisis of more than ordinary gravity is threatened in the bread-baking industry, one that will affect not merely the master bakers, but all breadcarters and breadwinners, and the working bakers themselves. Though at first only the county of Cumberland will be affected, it is only a question of time when the conditions to be brought about will be extended to all parts of the State.

The communication to the master bakers by the secretary of the Employees' Baking Trade Federation is couched in the following mandatory terms:—"I have been instructed," the secretary writes, "by direction of the executive of the above federation, to notify you that on and after the 6th May, 1916, the members of the Sydney branch of the federation shall be employed under the following conditions," etc. (mark the "shall be employed.") Then follow the conditions laid down as to hours of labour, starting time, holidays, etc. From this alone it will be seen that as to the conduct of a bakery business the employees mean to practically take the management wholly out of their employers' hands.

Then there are the exorbitant demands as to the wages specified to be paid in future. It is true the Federation has offered to confer with the executive of the Master Bakers' Association, but by resolutions adopted the proposed conference would be a farce, a foregone conclusion, since the terms laid down by the employees' representatives are the limit from which no concessions are to be made. The master bakers' representatives, too, have no option but to surrender. It is a case of "stand and deliver."

With regard to the increased rates of pay demanded, it may be mentioned that in the existing award, under which, for the past 12 months, baking operations have been carried on, the minimum rates of pay for constant hands have been as follows:—

Foremen in charge of four or more employees, £3 10s per week; foremen in charge of less than four hands, £3 5s per week; ovenmen and men on single jobs, £3 5s per week; other operative bakers, £3 per week. Rates of pay for apprentices, hours of employment, overtime rates, holidays, etc., were also prescribed. The new schedule of rates of wages put forward as a minimum are as follows:—

Foremen in charge of four employees, including doughmaker, £5; foremen in charge of less than four employees, including doughmaker, £4 7s 6d; single hand, £4 5s; ovenmen, £4 2s 6d; doughmakers, £4 5s; assistant doughmaker, £4; board hand, £3 15s.

Here are increases in foremen's weekly wages alone of £1 10s and £1 2s 6d respectively; in that of other hands of from 15s to £1. Now, were these increases to be the only extra charges on the employers they would still be very serious. To a certainty most, if not all, the smaller bakers, would be driven out of the trade. But the increases thus claimed by no means cover all the extra payments the employers will have to make. New conditions are laid down in respect of general holidays, and carters' special holidays, apprentices' overtime, "tucker" hours, etc. Without giving here a detailed analysis of the figures, it may be said that a careful examination of these shows that the accumulated increased payments which employers are to be called upon to make will be approximately as follows:—In respect of the wages of foremen, £2 5s 6d per week advance; doughmakers, £2 15s 6d per week advance; assistant doughmaker, new departure claim, £4 per week; ovenmen, £1 9s 6d advance; board hands, £1 7s advance.

The men are further demanding straight-out eight hours as a working day—48 hours a week. Now, for years past seven and a half hours have been worked for five days of the week, and ten and a half on Fridays and "double days" (days immediately preceding holidays), thus making 48 hours a week. Under the new conditions formulated, they will still have to work ten and a half hours on Fridays and double days, but the men demand overtime for the two and a half hours which make up the 48. As there are three "double days" every fortnight (Fridays and carters' holidays), the increased pay mounts up to a sum considerably in excess of the regular rates. On top of this, fourteen days' holiday a year are demanded on full pay, and as the places of the men absent on holidays have to be supplied the employers are to the extent of that fortnight's wages further penalised.

The men contend that they are fighting for the eight-hour principle. But in reality the eight-hour principle has long been in operation in the baking as in other trades. To be sure, extra hours are worked on certain days to make up for the short Saturday working hours. Thus what is now demanded is something more than 48 hours a week. It is 48 hours plus overtime for those days on which the Saturday shortage is made good. So, also, with those days which precede the holidays. The extra hours worked must be paid for on the overtime scale. Of course if the employers could stand these extra charges and live they might not object. But they cannot do the impossible.

As to arbitration awards, master bakers, like other employers, have always been willing to abide by these, and comply with the conditions to the very letter.

But there is something much more important than anything affecting the relations of employer and employed, and this should operate to prevent a rupture in any branch of industry at the present time. In common with the rest of the Empire and the best part of the civilised world, we Australians are in the midst of the most awful war in history. Surely at such a time all local differences should be set aside, so that all could work unitedly together for the common purpose of bringing to a termination the ghastly struggle now deluging Europe in blood. Surely this is no time to bring about impossible conditions in an industry whose operations come more closely home to every soul in the community than any other.

There are, indeed, special and weighty reasons why the baking industry should at such a juncture suffer no disturbance whatever. Already the master bakers have been made to bear more than a fair share of burdens incidental to the war. What with prices of commodities and bread fixed for them, and wages and conditions prescribed, it is safe to say that not 10 per cent. of the master bakers in the county of Cumberland have, at any rate for the past six months, been making any profit at all. It can thus be understood with what feelings of dismay they await the next turns of the arbitration screw.

Let it not be overlooked that the master baker is in a peculiarly helpless situation under existing laws and industrial regulations. He cannot pass on to the public the extra cost of producing bread. He must carry the whole burden until, bled white as his own flour, he breaks down under the load. He is under a new set of masters; indeed, more than one set. He is confronted by a Commonwealth tribunal which fixes the price of flour and bread; he is hemmed in by a State commission, which also determines the price of both bread and flour; and by his side stand well-organised forces which have an absolute monopoly of labour, and can dictate to him the wages he shall pay, the hours to be worked, the apprentices he may employ, the quantity of flour per man that shall be handled, the holidays granted, with other restrictions, until virtually his rights to his property and business are limited to the barren one of calling them his own, and paying through the nose for the privilege. And who shall say what sort of master is to take his place when he is driven out of business.

It really passes belief that the rank and file of working staffs in bakeries have fully realised the drastic and crushing nature of the demands just formulated on their behalf. It is safe to say that as to the great majority they are in the most friendly relationship with their employers. They can have no wish to bring ruin upon them. From a careful calculation made it has been estimated that 60 out of every 100 master bakers is the number that will have to close down. Yet the closing down of 60 per cent. of the metropolitan and suburban bakeries cannot be viewed without grave concern by the public who are accustomed to have their daily bread supplied them under conditions that have existed from time immemorial. The public may be trusted to judge as between the master baker they know and the one they are to have provided for them.

Beyond all this master bakers are entitled to the full protection of the laws of the land. They are justified in asking that the occupation of their lives and the businesses they have established will not be taken from them, either by direct or indirect means, or by appeals to a judicial tribunal whose decrees may be observed or flouted according as they may square with the behests of a particular appellant to its authority.

There is only one alternative under which it would be possible for the master bakers to comply with the new demands of the men and continue in business. That is such a reduction in the price of flour as would be equivalent to the increased cost of producing bread. But it must be distinctly understood that that alternative is not recommended by the master bakers.

BRISBANE LETTER-CARRIERS.

THREATENED TROUBLE.

STATEMENT BY P.M.G.

Mr. Webster, Postmaster-General, said yesterday: "The letter-carriers of Brisbane ask for a close holiday on Eight-hours Day, and as usual abuse me for not granting same. Before I left Melbourne last week, a representative from Brisbane interviewed me, and as a result I promised to try and secure an early delivery of letters, so as to permit of the letter-carriers joining in the procession at 9.30 a.m. He felt satisfied, if such could be done.

"The Deputy Postmaster-General at Brisbane made arrangements to carry out my wish. Such, however, does not satisfy the men concerned, and they are alleged to have voted for no work on Monday. I have wired, suggesting they accept compromise on this occasion, and saying that, if the industrial organisations of the States can be got to agree to an eight hours day for Australia, I shall be pleased to recommend such be made a general holiday for the postal service. At present there are many dates on which capitals and other towns hold their eight-hour celebrations, and to make such days close holidays would not only seriously dislocate public business, but would penalise all doing postal business with such towns.

"The Arbitration Court refused to order a close holiday for the two organisations which secured Eight-hours Day as a holiday. The Public Service Commissioner is opposed for public reasons, and I, while willing to grant one eight-hour holiday for all Australia, so that none would suffer more than the other by reason of the cessation of postal activities, feel that to grant such holiday on the many dates fixed by eight-hour celebrations cannot be justified. If it is conceded in one case, then all are entitled, even though it be the smallest town, postal facilities would have to cease in such centres. The remedy is to have the celebration held on the one day throughout Australia."

NEW ZEALAND.

WELLINGTON (N.Z.), Friday.

To date £9,500,000 has been paid for meat, cheese, and scheelite purchased in New Zealand on behalf of the Imperial Government.

Half a million acres of land have been provisionally set apart already for returned soldiers.

NO LEAVE WITHOUT PASSES.

The District Commandant, Brigadier-General Ramaciotti, drew attention to the fact that it was noticed that many men arrested by the Garrison Military Police in and about Sydney during the early hours of the evening gave the excuse that men were allowed to leave camp between 5 p.m. and 12 p.m. without passes. The Commandant stated that camp commandants were in future to take necessary measures to prevent men leaving their camps without passes.

STEAMER OVERDUE.

WELLINGTON (N.Z.), Friday.

She is commanded by Captain Applcyard, who is well acquainted with the island routes.

A later message says: A wireless telegram received from Papeete states that the Flora's machinery is disabled.

GILCHRIST CHARGES.

PERTH, Friday.

The commission appointed to inquire into the charges made by Mr. Gilchrist of extravagance and mismanagement in connection with the East-West Railway took evidence to-day.

SOLDIERS' CLUB.

GOVERNOR-GENERAL'S VISIT.

"See that your men are comfortable in their camps—but do it by teaching them to make themselves comfortable. The army that can most readily adapt itself to the conditions it meets, maintain itself best with the means at its disposal, will be the most valuable army."

The Governor-General, Sir Ronald Munro Ferguson, gave this advice to a number of military officers from the local camps whom he met at the Soldiers' Club, in George-street, last night. His Excellency visited the club at the invitation of the committee, and he was met there by Colonel Dudley White, Colonel Burnage, about 30 officers, and the following members of the committee:—Dr. F. Antill Pockley, Dr. Mary Booth, Miss Gladys Marks, Mrs. Brennan, and Messrs. J. O. Fairfax, W. Brooks, and R. M'Millan.

After looking over the club rooms, his Excellency said that these and other clubs certainly met in an admirable manner the needs of soldiers returning from active service, or of soldiers from the training camps. After the war—and there would be much fighting, great losses, and many more returned soldiers before that time—there would be something like a quarter of a million trained soldiers in Australia. These men might be formed into a magnificent national reserve. The organisation of this body, and the maintenance of interest in it, would be greatly aided by soldiers' clubs, not only in Sydney, but in every centre of population. His Excellency said that when he was in Britain he was in charge of a battalion of the national reserve, and he found that the club rooms in the central town there assisted enormously in stimulating the interest of the men in the organisation and in carrying to them the conviction that every man should be trained to fight for his country in her hour of need. His Excellency concluded by giving some advice to the officers, and praising the efforts of those who had so successfully established the club.

MERCANTILE STATUS.

CONFIDENTIAL INQUIRIES.

THEIR LEGALITY AFFIRMED.

Everyone in business in Sydney remembers the well-known case of Macintosh v Dun. The plaintiff was the old-established firm of John Macintosh and Sons, of this city, and the defendant the world-wide mercantile agency company of R. G. Dun and Co., whose headquarters are in New York, and who have a branch in Sydney. Duns, in the ordinary course of business, sent out a statement to their paying clients which was calculated to injure the credit of the Macintoshes. An action followed, and after varying fortunes the case was carried to the Privy Council. That august body found in favour of Macintosh. Legislation was afterwards placed on the statute book in this State giving these mercantile agencies the protection which the law did not then allow.

Now a somewhat similar, though not identical, case has come up for decision before the House of Lords. The Lord Chancellor in this case refused to be bound by the decision of the Privy Council in the case of Macintosh v Dun, which he distinguished in some way that is not very clear from the newspaper reports of the case. The House of Lords found in favour of the mercantile agency.

The facts of the case were these:—The London Association for the Protection of Trade was an unincorporate body regulated by certain rules. Its objects, as defined in the prospectus, were as follows:—

(1) The making of private inquiries as to the means, respectability, and trustworthiness of individuals and firms.

(2) The collection of debts.

(3) The detection and exposure of swindlers.

(4) The issue of gazettes, containing authentic particulars of bills of sale, county court judgments, bankruptcies, and other preferential securities; also lists of creditors in bankruptcies.

(5) To afford gratuitous legal advice to members on all matters connected with their trading operations.

(6) To aid in amending the laws affecting trade and commerce, and to suggest proper remedies for what may appear injurious to traders generally.

(7) To forward a monthly report to members, containing information of frauds and attempts at swindling which may be proceeding at the time.

(8) To keep a register of the names of known swindlers, and also of persons whose addresses are required by members of the association.

According to the rules, members were enrolled after their names had been approved by a committee of management. The only branch of the association's business to which it was necessary to refer was that associated with the inquiry department. That department was open to all members, whether they were town, country, or foreign members, and whether they had subscribed on the footing of obtaining all the full benefits of the society, or only subscribed to the gazette. In each case single inquiries were made by the association for 1s 6d apiece, or a book of 10 prepared inquiry checks was furnished for 10s 6d.

The operations of the society were widespread, and in their prospectus they announced that by the affiliation with the Association of Trade Protection Societies of the United Kingdom the members had at their service an organisation extending throughout the whole of the kingdom and to all parts of the world. It was a condition of membership that all information supplied was supplied in strict confidence, and for the exclusive use of the member who sought it, and he was bound not to divulge it to any person on any pretext whatever. That condition was imposed by the application for membership, and by the rules it was provided that any member who divulged any such information should be deemed ineligible to remain a member, and should forfeit his subscription.

The society did not distribute any profit, nor did it trade with the object of making a profit, but, in fact, it had a considerable surplus on the year's accounts, and its property consisted of assets to the value of £11,060.

A Mr Shand Kydd, who traded in Highgate-road, Kentish Town, was a member of the association. He was anxious to obtain information about the credit of Greenlands and Co. (Limited), house furnishers and drapers, of Hereford. He applied on March 20, 1910, to the association, asking if Greenlands and Co. were safe for £20 to £30, and also asking for their length of credit and general information. That application was made on a form which the association issued, and that again contained the statement that the information was given in strict confidence, and was not to be divulged. The association had at Hereford an agent, Wilmshurst. He carried on business as an accountant and auditor and fire-loss assessor there. He furnished information to the association for a payment of 6d for the inquiry, but although he had been bankrupt before, it was stated by the secretary of the association in evidence, and was not challenged in cross examination, that the association had never had any reason to doubt the good faith of his answers.

In answer to the request of the secretary, he supplied a statement which was slightly altered by the secretary, and by him published to Mr. Shand Kydd. It was that publication that was the subject of the proceedings. The grave and essential feature of the libel was that it stated that there were debentures charged on the assets of the company to the amount of £36,100, but that for the credit asked they might be taken as a fair trade risk. That statement was inaccurate in a very material respect. The sum of £36,100 was not in fact charged upon the assets of the company, but two sums of £18,100 and £18,000, the former secured by specific mortgage, and the other by mortgage debentures were charged on the real and leasehold property which the company owned. The whole of the stock-in-trade of the company, their book debts, their goodwill, and all their floating assets were entirely free from any mortgage whatever, and constituted a large and valuable property.

The evidence, which was uncontradicted, established that the company was in an exceptionally strong financial position, and had carried on a large and very successful business for some time past. The obvious innuendo therefore of the libel, and the actual statement of fact that it made, were both inaccurate, and the only question that arose was whether the circumstances in which it was published constituted a privileged occasion, and thus threw upon the plaintiff the burden of proving that the publication was maliciously made.

In the opinion of the Lord Chancellor it did. He was clear, he said, that a trader was entitled to make inquiries about the commercial credit of a person with whom he proposed to trade. He need not make those inquiries himself. He might constitute an agent to make them on his behalf. He need not inquire of any person of whom he had personal knowledge, or with whom he had had trade relations. If the inquiry were honestly and prudently made, it was impossible to fix exact limits without which it must be confined. The extended character of trade, the modern combination of many businesses of a different nature under one control, the innumerable and far-reaching branches by which modern enterprise was extended, were all considerations which must be borne in mind in considering how far and by what means inquiry as to a new customer could be properly made. That, of course, was not the only consideration; there was at the same time the essential need of safeguarding commercial credit against the most dangerous and insidious of all enemies—the dissemination of prejudicial rumour, the author of which could not be easily identified, nor its medium readily disclosed.

The present case was an illustration of both sides of the question. Mr. Shand Kydd was in London, and desired to enter into trade relations with the company in Hereford. It would, he thought, have been a perfectly reasonable occasion for inquiries honestly made in Hereford as to the standing of this concern, and those inquiries might have been made on Mr. Shand Kydd's behalf by a proper agent, and in such circumstances, whatever consideration might attach to the communication to such agent, his answer to his principal would clearly have been made on a privileged occasion.

He could not help thinking that in these circumstances the fact that Mr. Shand Kydd made the inquiry through the means afforded by his membership of a large group of traders, who had associated themselves together to provide an agent through whom such inquiries were to be made, could not of itself take away the privilege that would have existed if the association had never intervened.

COLONIAL SUGAR.

The report of the above company is for the half-year ended March 31, but the profit shown is for the full year, and amounts to £361,250. It will be remembered that when the October balance-sheet was issued no profit and loss account was disclosed, as it was impossible then to bring to a point the involved accounts for transactions with the Commonwealth Government. Out of the profits now disclosed a dividend at the rate of 6¼ per cent., absorbing £195,625, was paid in October. To the remainder £155,625 there has to be added £35,473 brought forward from March 31, 1915, after £200,000 had been transferred to the reserve fund. There was thus available £191,099, from which the board propose to pay a dividend at the rate of 6¼ per cent., absorbing £195,625, and leaving £85,474 to be carried forward. The report states that it has been necessary to make an approximate estimate of the company's interest in the dealings with the sugar purchased by the Commonwealth, for the accounts relating to these purchases cannot be closed until July. A renewal of the existing agreements to cover the handling of the Queensland sugar crop of 1916, taken over by that State, is now being discussed. Although good rains have fallen in some of the districts supplying cane, there has not been a normal wet season, and the crop will probably be below the average, though in excess of that of 1914. The balance-sheet compares with that of September 30 as follows:—

The meeting of shareholders was held yesterday, when the report and balance-sheet were adopted. A report of the proceedings appears elsewhere.

COLONIAL SUGAR (FIJI AND NEW ZEALAND).

The report of the above company covers the year ended March 31. A profit of £228,830 is shown. A dividend paid on September 30 absorbed £97,500, leaving £231,330 available. From this amount the directors propose to appropriate £100,000 to be transferred to the dividend reserve, and £205,000 to dividend at the rate of 6 per cent. on both classes of shares, leaving £26,330 to be carried forward. The report states that the sum of £100,000 has been placed to dividend reserve fund, as provided in clause 112 of the articles of association, and has been invested in the New Zealand War loan and British Exchequer Bonds. Since the drought broke in Fiji in December last, the rainfall has been ample, and the crops of cane are expected to exceed in weight those of 1914 and 1915. It is feared that the supply of Indian labourers will be interrupted this year through the difficulty of obtaining steamers, and, as to the future, there is some uncertainty because the Government of India has expressed the wish that the system of indenture hitherto in force shall be discontinued, though admitting the necessity for some substitute. In order to ensure constant employment for the immigrants a contract arrangement is necessary, and so far no definite scheme has been put forward; meantime, therefore, proposals for further capital expenditure in Fiji cannot be entertained, as agricultural work in that colony can only be done by coloured labour.

A statement of chief items in profit and loss account and in balance-sheet may be made thus:—

HENRY BULL, LTD.

LONDON, April 28.

Henry Bull, Ltd., has declared an interim dividend of 5 per cent.

COMMERCIAL.

THE MARKETS.

A fair business was done in wire netting yesterday, and in barbed wire, considering the prices asked. Nails were also going out in fair quantities. Stocks of raw material are fair, but the American makers of those raw materials are asking very greatly increased rates. There was a keen inquiry for galvanised wire. New Zealand buyers were adding to the demand.

Cream of tartar was decidedly strong. The manufacturers were on the market. Considerable business was done with Melbourne. The French make was strongly sought after. The parity of yesterday's c.i.f. and e. quotation was about a penny a pound above the local price. The earliest shipment was June-July.

Good business was done in whitelead. Melbourne was asking for Champion's. Nothing was obtainable in parcels under £65, and some business was done at £63 10s. Distributing lots were worth 64/ per cwt. A few parcels of American Pioneer brand were secured at £60, and others at £61. Turpentine had a little business at 4/7. Linseed oil was rather better, five hundred drums sold, and at the close of the day some houses were asking for parcels 5/3 and 5/5. Rosin had business at £22/10/ for G grade. Two hundred casks changed hands. New York quoted £24 c.i.f. and e.

There was no change in the prices quoted for jute goods. Branbags were worth 4/3 net to rails, and cornsacks 10/. Spot stocks of woolpacks realised 4/1 net, and April-May-June shipments 4/1½ net.

MONDAY'S HOMEBUSH OFFERINGS.

The number of sheep and of cattle listed for sale at the Homebush yards on Monday next is as follows:—

Sheep (including lambs)	6000

The amount of wool manifested to arrive at Darling Harbour and suburban stations yesterday was 300 bales.

At Darling Harbour yesterday 4652 tons of wheat and 223 tons of flour were manifested to arrive.

SILVER.

LARGE PURCHASES.

Bar silver was quoted to-day at 33d per ounce standard, an advance of 15-16d.

The sharp rise is due to the scarcity of the metal, and large purchases for coinage. Owing to the non-arrival of anything from America for a week stocks in London have been reduced to under half a million sterling, of which speculators hold a large portion.

SUGAR.

The sugar market is without change.

BRADFORD TOPS.

The Bradford tops market is cheerful, and there is most inquiry for all sorts. Prices are:—Sixty-fours, 45d (1d up); super sixties, 44d (1d up); common sixties, 43d (1d up); fifty-sixes, 37½d (½d up); fifties, 31½d (unchanged); forty-sixes, 28d (unchanged); forties, 26d (unchanged).

Cheese is very firm, New Zealand selling at 108/ per cwt. The Government is leaving little for the trade.

CEREALS.

Flour is firm. Australian landed is quoted at 47/ per sack of 280lb.

Oats are firm. Laplata has none offering.

Peas and beans are firm and without change.

The Star of England Tasmanian shipment arrived at Liverpool in fair condition. The side and colour are variable. Four thousand cases were marketed. New Yorks fetching 12/ to 14/9; Cleopatras, 12/ to 13/3; Sturmers, 9/ to 10/3; others, 7/6 to 10/6. There was a fair demand. Prices were affected by a simultaneous sale of 11,000 cases of Oregon apples.

PRODUCE.

DAIRY.

A STEADY MARKET.

There was a steady demand for dairy produce yesterday, and prices were again well maintained.

Cheese was scarce. The shipment which arrived from the South Coast on Thursday had been cleared up. Agents are now awaiting the arrival of further consignments. The proclaimed price for prime leaf is 9½d.

Stocks of honey were small, and for choice western up to 6d was obtainable. Dungog honey sold at from /5 to /5½.

Bacon is still short, but fairly large quantities of meat are now arriving from Queensland.

FORAGE AND GRAIN.

There was a good demand for potatoes, and some holders demanded an advance of 10/ a ton on Monday's opening rates.

Onions were also firmer. The best Victorian Brown Spanish bulbs brought to £5 a ton. In Melbourne the demand for onions is slow, and the position weak. Interstate sales are limited, while local buyers are almost restricting purchases to really prime samples. Prime Brown Spanish are quoted at from £2/10/ to £2/15/, f.o.b.

Quotations were:—

RAILWAY MARKET.

POTATOES FIRMER.

A large yarding of miscellaneous fodder was forwarded at the Alexandria goods station yesterday. The bulk of offerings comprised wheaten and oaten chaff, which was principally of medium quality, and very few prime lots were available at auction. Dealers, although present in good numbers, had not come on business, and the auctioneers early recognising this feature, realised the futility of offering a large yarding. Offerings were, therefore, smaller than usual.

In isolated cases wheaten chaff realised 4/6 and 4/8 per cwt, but otherwise 3/4 to 4/4 was paid. Oaten chaff was weaker at 3/3 to 4/2 per cwt. Lucerne chaff was worth 5/2 to 6/2, and hay offerings, which included chiefly medium hay, made from 3/ to 6/1 per cwt. Oaten hay was easier owing to a weak demand which prevailed.

Potato sales drew a good many buyers, but here again a state of inactivity in competition prevailed. Nevertheless, in sympathy with the recent rise in Sussex-street, values were firmer for potatoes at 8/9 per cwt for Redskins and Brownells. Onions and pumpkins were steady, but slightly weaker.

The yarding in position for sale comprised 74 trucks of fodder, 6 of grain, and 2 of potatoes and onions. The manifest of trucks outstanding included 106 of hay, straw, and chaff, 2 of grain, and 1 of potatoes.

The following business was transacted:—

PIG SALES.

The pens at the City Yards yesterday were stocked with the usual short week-end yarding of 170 pigs. Offerings were of a generally good quality, and consisted of equal proportions of baconers and porkers. Buyers were in full attendance, and competed freely for all classes, which moved out on a satisfactory basis.

Competition was particularly keen for porkers, which realised late high rates. The inquiry for baconers and backfatters was steady, and late rates were well maintained. A strong demand existed also for stores, of which the supply was very small, and good prices were paid.

The following were the ruling prices:—

Best backfatters to £8/10/, good £6 to £7/10/, medium £4 to £5, light from £3/15/; best porkers to £3/5/, good £2 to £2/15/, medium £2/15/ to £4, light from £2/12/; best porkers to £2/12/, good £2/10/ to £3, medium £2 to £2/10/, light from £1/15/.

STOCK TRUCKINGS.

The following trucks have been ordered for the forthcoming stock sales at Homebush:—

MINING.

A QUIET MARKET.

SPECULATION LESS BRISK.

VALUES EASIER.

A glance at the list of sales recorded below will show a remarkable contrast with the record put up on Thursday. Yesterday's proceedings were on a much less active scale. Moreover, the trend of values was on the easy side.

The briskness of Thursday, it was explained, was due to the predominance of buyers over sellers. Hence, also the general firmness of values maintained throughout. Moreover, the trouble in Ireland was apparently regarded as a mere incident of very little importance, and would soon pass away.

The position of affairs was quite different yesterday. There was a noticeable undercurrent of selling. No particular stock could be singled out for mention. All sections of the market were involved. The sellers now predominated, and what added to the feeling of disquietude was the fact that many of the orders to sell were contained in rush wires from the other States. This was clear evidence that the Exchanges of Melbourne and Adelaide were in a like state of unrest.

The result was the volume of business transacted in the morning was considerably less than one-half that recorded on the previous morning, whilst the prices realised were in nearly every case, on the easy side. True, there was no evidence of a pronounced collapse. Scrip-holders did not assist the easing movement by unloading wads of scrip on to the market. The sag, therefore, was a gentle one; but it was there all the same, and may possibly continue so until the situation in Ireland becomes less gloomy. One fact stands out prominently, and that is that the big change in the position of affairs has nothing to do whatever with the prospects of the mines—silver-lead-zinc, tin, copper, or gold.

If the position of affairs was not too cheering in the morning, there was no improvement during the afternoon. Indeed, in a few instances the value of stocks eased a little further. This was more noticeable in the case of Black Range West, the Edna May group of gold stocks, B.H. Junction (con.), and Ratrut Basin (tin). In fact, the day closed with a listless feeling all round.

MINING NOTES.

Operations last week at the White Crystal tin mine show that fair grade ore was stoped at the 100ft level from the main shaft, that the intermediate level was extended 5ft in poor ore; that at the 150ft level a 2ft lode of fair-grade ore was stoped; that the north drive from Murphy's No. 1 shaft was extended 3ft in good ore; that the drive south from Murphy's No. 2 shaft is in good ore, and that the open cut supplied the usual quantity of ore of fair value.

The statutory meeting of the Amalgamated Oil Boring Company, Limited, was held on Thursday afternoon in the board-room, Vickery's-chambers, Mr. G. B. Holt in the chair. The six amalgamated companies at Murrabinna, Kingston, South Australia, were all represented by shareholders present. It was stated that a contract had been let to the firm of Messrs. Horwood and Co., of Adelaide, to put a bore down to a depth of 1500ft at a cost, including casing and all incidentals, for 25s per foot. A provision was made whereby the bore, if necessary, might be continued to 3000ft, at a proportionately increased cost. The chairman, who has recently returned from the Kingston oilfield, speaking of the Hundred of Murrabinna, spoke of the certainty of oil being struck at a reasonable depth. In fact, he said, the results already obtained in the Kingston, and nearby Robe bores, were highly satisfactory, so much so that Dr Basedow, M.A., M.D., B.Sc., F.G.S., declared it would be a scientific mystery if oil were not struck. In conclusion, the chairman stated, the company had not been burdened with one penny of brokerage, or flotation expenses, and that until oil was struck the directors would receive no fees. Messrs. G. B. Holt, D. K. Inglis, C. P. Tom, F. J. Wallis, Frank Cameron, and William Taylor were re-elected as directors, and the meeting terminated.

MOUNT BISCHOFF TIN MINE.

LAUNCESTON, Friday.

Thirty-five tons of concentrates were produced at the Mount Bischoff mine during the four weeks ended April 21, but owing to the Easter holidays the milling and concentrating plant did not work full time. From the different mine faces the usual quantities of fair-grade detrital matter are being delivered to the plant. The North Valley Flats continue to open up to expectation, and a considerable quantity of alluvial material is being won there.

CORELLA COPPER COMPANY.

The subjoined official statement has been issued from the Melbourne office of the above company:—

Rosebud Mine.—Owing to having encountered an extensive vugh in the sulphide stopes above the intermediate level (130 feet), and the necessity of making the workings secure and opening out other faces, it has been found necessary to temporarily discontinue smelting operations until the sulphide stopes are again in order.

The indications are that the occurrence of this vugh will affect the manager's last estimate of the ore reserve above the 200ft level, but the manager reports that the developments on the 200ft level are decidedly promising. The latest reports show:—

South drive, 200ft level: Section sample at 75ft, width sampled over 48in, value 7 per cent. Quartz showing more copper and iron pyrites. Section sample at 78ft, width sampled 60in, value 9½ per cent. Face at 79ft, width sampled 6in, value 9 per cent. West wall only exposed. Section sample at 81ft, width sampled 66in, value 6.3 per cent. Quartz with iron pyrites and chalcopyrite.

CARPATHIA TIN MINE.

The mine manager reports for last week as follows:—No. 1 shaft, 104½ft level: West crosscut extended to 7ft, with no alteration worthy of note. Intermediate level: Rising to 22ft on high milling ore all over the face. Winze: Sinking to 75ft on high milling ore over the whole winze and remaining. Looking remarkably well. 205ft level: North rise to 58ft on milling ore all over and remaining. No. 4 shaft: Still winning high-grade milling ore in stoping off this shaft. Ore in transit: Since last report 86.4 tons of high-grade milling ore have been despatched to the station.

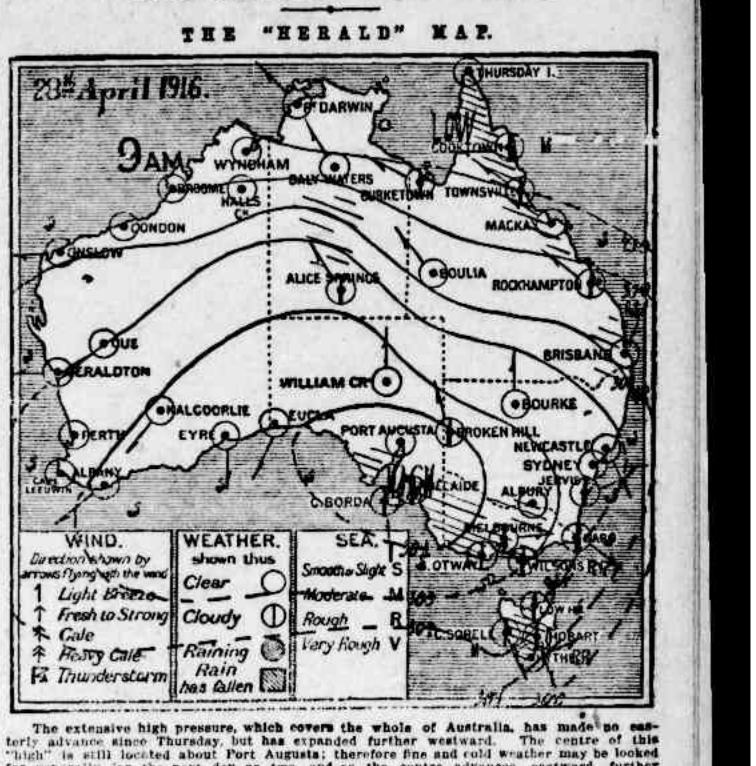
AUSTRALIAN WEATHER.

THE "HERALD" MAP.



The extensive high pressure, which covers the whole of Australia, has made no easterly advance since Thursday, but has expanded further westward. The centre of this "high" is still located about Port Augusta; therefore fine and cold weather may be looked for generally for the next day or two, and as the centre advances eastward further frosts and more fogs should be experienced.

The Antarctic disturbance which was over Tasmania on Thursday is at present off the Bluff, New Zealand; while the one which was in evidence to the south of the Leeuwin on the previous day has been thrust farther southward by the expansion of the high pressure. The monsoonal depression is in the same position as on the preceding day.

Ocean Forecast.—Squally south-westerlies on parts of Queensland coast; moderate to fresh westerlies around Tasmania; smooth to slight elsewhere; but no reports from NW Australia or Cape York Peninsula.

AUSTRALIAN JOCKEY CLUB.

AUTUMN MEETING.

FINAL DAY.

ANTICIPATIONS.

A continuation of the delightful weather that favoured the three preceding days of the A.J.C. Autumn Meeting may be anticipated this afternoon, when the reunion will be brought to a close, and there is every prospect that the high-class sport witnessed during the earlier stages of the campaign will be repeated. The track is in splendid condition, despite the wear and tear to which it has been subjected, and the lawns and reserves are bright and beautiful with springlike verdure. The customary arrangements have been made in the catering and other departments for the requirements of a large gathering. So far the reunion has been highly successful, and, as the profits are devoted to patriotic purposes, a substantial sum should be available. The transit service includes special trams from Circular Quay and the Railway Square loop to the racecourse gates; while motor cars, cabs, and 'buses will also ply between the city and the racecourse.

The sport commences at 1 p.m. with the Rous Handicap, a race restricted to three-year-olds, and an interesting contest is promised, in which the leading parts should be played by Common Law, Ornato, Lavanda, Alcornet, and Karanaud King; and the places may be occupied by Common Law, Karanaud King, and Alcornet.

A large field is indicated for the Place Handicap, and the brunt of the battle may fall to Amata, Green Cap, Kandos, The Christian Brother, and Foil; and the judge may declare for Amata, The Christian Brother, and Foil.

El Progresso, Flash Jack, Lempriere, and Briarberry should have the settlement of the Second Steeplechase among them; and the situations may go to El Progresso, Briarberry, and Flash Jack.

The A.J.C. Plate should be captured by Ulva's Isle, who may be escorted past the post by Giru.

The Second Nursery Handicap promises a very large field, and the race seems very open. The prospects of Dame Acre, Indicator, Heatherbrae, Alice Kenilworth, and Bernalda seem the brightest: and the numbers may be hoisted for Alice Kenilworth, Dame Acre, and Heatherbrae.

The meeting winds up with the Final Handicap, and again a large field seems assured. An interesting battle may be fought out among Machine Boy, Secret Service, Caracre, The Lintie, and Foil; and Caracre, Machine Boy, and Foil may pass the post in order.

Deceased's body was found hanging from two broom-handles in the yard at 4 Thorby-avenue, Leichhardt, where he lately resided, on April 24. A verdict of suicide was recorded.

After conducting an inquiry into the death of Mary Weir Frost, aged 51 years, married, who was found dead, hanging from a door, at her late residence, on April 21, the City Coroner, Mr. H. S. Hawkins, returned a verdict of suicide.

DEATH FROM POISON.

An inquiry into the death of Henry Badger Stephenson, aged 55 years, a butcher, was conducted at the City Coroner's Court by the City Coroner, Mr. H. S. Hawkins. Deceased's body was found near the Rifle Range, South Randwick, on April 5, and a post-mortem revealed that he died from taking poison. A verdict of suicide was returned.

RAILWAY EMPLOYEE KILLED.

An accident occurred near Redfern Railway Station yesterday, as a result of which Stephen Dolphin, 39 years of age, lately living in Alfred-street, St. Peters, was so badly injured that he died shortly afterwards. Dolphin, a railway gasworker, was near one of the entrances to the Redfern tunnel about 9 o'clock in the morning, when he was overtaken by a suburban train, knocked down, and run over. The Civil Ambulance conveyed him to the Sydney Hospital, where he died about 1 o'clock in the afternoon.

DEAD MAN IDENTIFIED.

The body of the man who was found in a cave on the Woronora River, near Sutherland, has been identified as that of Ethelbert Septimus Filmer, aged 53 years, an electrician, lately living at Newcastle.

Yesterday morning John Burke, 60, employed on the Nimitybelle-Bombala railway extension, was found dead on the Native Dog-road, 11 miles from Nimitybelle. It is supposed that deceased, who was last seen driving in a cart, fell from the cart, sustaining injuries which caused his death.

The District Coroner (Mr. Kirby) held an inquest to-day concerning the death of Mrs. Thos. Evans, a widow, 30 years of age, residing at Campbell-street, Woonona. The verdict returned was that death occurred from the effects of poison, self administered.

TORPEDOED.

ADRIFT IN A SMALL BOAT.

Among the passengers aboard the Persia when she was torpedoed were three Y.M.C.A. secretaries bound for Egypt, one of whom was lost. The following letter was written by Mr. Arthur Johnson, one of the secretaries who was rescued:—

"We left at 10 o'clock on Tuesday evening—four hours late, owing to the very heavy mail. Everything went well till Thursday at lunch-time. All the passengers had gone down for lunch, and at ten past 1 the tremendous report of the torpedo striking the ship right in the middle made everyone rush to the cabins for their life-belts. I could see that very little time was to be lost, so I went right up to the top deck and started to lower one of the boats. This proved to be rather a difficult job. We had a very narrow escape of our boat being completely smashed up, as the ship was going down. We got the boat away from the danger point, and then started to scout round to pick up people out of the water. Our boat was supposed to hold 36, but we managed to get 49 in, and I am thankful to say that I was able to help to get five ladies out of the water into the boat. We saw several ships pass on Thursday afternoon, then night came on. What an awful experience! We just got a mouthful of water to drink, and we drifted about all night, fearing all the time that the boat would be swamped. Fortunately, on Friday morning the sea was a little calmer. We sighted another steamer early, but, alas! it did not come our way. By 6 o'clock everybody had made up their minds to another night at sea in the small boat. I was on the look-out, most of the people trying to sleep while standing—it was almost impossible for any to sit down. I thought I could see a faint light right in the distance. I did not say anything for a time until I was sure. I was sure the lights were those of another ship, so I told them in the other three boats, and we started to burn some red torches. We risked all we had with the hope of attracting their attention. After the first three or four red lights the ship disappeared for at least 15 minutes, and when they showed themselves again I could see that they had changed the course of the ship, and they headed right for us. We got the small boats right alongside of the ship, and found it was one of the new torpedo and submarine destroyers. The captain said he thought we were submarines, and was ready to send us to the bottom. It was only after we had lit about 20 red lights that he made up his mind that we needed help. Those English sailor boys gave up everything they had. I got a drink of tea out of a pudding dish. Tinned salmon and bread was the meal, but it was more than welcome. There were no beds for us, but the boys gave up their hammocks, and others had to lie on the small deck. They then made right off for Alexandria."

WAR COMMITTEE.

MELBOURNE, Friday.

A long meeting of the Federal Parliamentary War Committee was held yesterday. The Acting Prime Minister (Senator Pearce) presided.

It was resolved to ask the Treasurer to make available a further sum of £5000, to be divided pro rata amongst the recruiting committees. A statement was received from the Treasurer showing an amended rate of pensions approved.

The Queensland War Council wrote urging that steps be taken to prevent the name Anzac being commercialised, or becoming other than a national one, and the Victorian War Council wrote in support of the Queensland Council's view. The matter was referred to the Prime Minister's Department, with a request for action, either by the Federal or State Governments.

Mr. A. G. Carruthers, of Condobolin, resubmitted certain estates for purchase for returned soldiers, and stated that certain vendors offered a total of £42,000 for the erection of dwellings, if their estates were purchased. The matter was referred to the New South Wales War Council.

YEARLING SALES.

PRICES IMPROVE.

CHARLEMAGNE COLT FETCHES 850 GUINEAS.

Messrs. William Inglis and Son concluded the annual yearling sales at Payten's Newmarket stables yesterday. Mr. Arthur Inglis wielded the hammer, and during the day he disposed of 198 yearlings. These, with 201 sold on Tuesday, made a total of 399 out of a catalogue containing 454 lots. Yesterday's sale was a very great improvement upon the opening day, inasmuch as the 198 sold aggregated 27,696 guineas as against 18,898 guineas for Tuesday's output. The grand total—46,695 guineas—falls short of that reached by Messrs. Inglis last year, when they disposed of 418 lots for 46,949 guineas. The best price recorded yesterday was 850 guineas, paid by Mr. Hunter White, of Havilah, for the pick of the Oakleigh draft, a very fine-looking colt by Charlemagne II. (imp.) from Ether, by Grafton. The lots sold are as under:—

OVERSEA FREIGHTS.

ADELAIDE, Friday.

In his presidential address at the annual meeting of the Adelaide Chamber of Commerce, Mr. F. W. Vasey said that oversea freights all over the world were at present extremely high, and were likely to remain so for some time after the war was over. The comparatively low rates of freights offering homewards from Australia were responsible, to a considerable extent, for the scarcity of tonnage arriving at Australian ports, and the consequent shortage of material, both for manufacturing purposes and for public works, which was becoming seriously apparent. It was hoped that the committee of practical men that had now been appointed in England to control the transport service might effect an improvement in that respect, although he did not hope for any alleviation of the present position for some time. So far, no addition had been made to the ordinary rates of freight and passage money in the Australian interstate trade, in spite of the fact that running expenses had increased enormously.

UNIVERSAL SERVICE.

At a meeting of the executive committee of the Universal Service League, held at the league rooms, University-chambers, on Thursday, a long discussion as to the advisability of resuming the public advocacy of the immediate adoption of compulsory service took place. It was unanimously resolved to postpone such action for the present. It was recognised, however, that events might at any moment require this decision to be revised, and the officers are to call a further meeting as soon as the circumstances make this desirable.

INCITING TO RESIST.

GOULBURN, Friday.

While a constable was taking a man to the police station last night, it is alleged that Reginald Percy Murphy called out to the crowd of two or three hundred soldiers to attack the constable, and rescue the prisoner. The crowd followed the constable to the street in which the lockup is situated, and he had several times to draw his revolver and threaten to shoot some of the soldiers. This morning Murphy was charged at the police court with inciting persons to resist, the full penalty of £5 or one month's imprisonment was imposed.

AMUSEMENTS.

THE TERCENTENARY MATINEE.

The Shakespeare tercentenary matinee, to be held under the auspices of the Shakespeare Society, at the New Adelphi Theatre on Wednesday next, will present a rich feast of poetic drama. Allan Wilkie, with Miss Hunter-Watts and company, will contribute the Letter Scene from "Twelfth Night," the Balcony Scene from "Romeo and Juliet," and the Play Scene from "Hamlet." Walter Bentley will appear in the Jealousy Scene from "Othello," with Walter Hunt as Iago, and Miss Hunter-Watts as Desdemona. The Forest Scene from "As You Like It" will bring forward Lawrence Campbell as Jacques, William Holman as Adam, H. R. Roberts as Orlando, and Neville Mayman as the Duke. Among the individual performers will be Henri Verbrugghen, George Darrell, Henry Weir, and Colville Dunn. A poetic scena, with tableaux, entitled, "The Pen and Sword," specially written by Dulcie Deamer, will conclude a programme of three hours and a half. The proceeds are to be given by Mr. George Marlow to the Anzac Day Fund. The plan is at Nicholson's.

HER MAJESTY'S THEATRE.

There will be a special school holiday matinee of "Mother Goose" at 1.45 to-day, and again in the evening the new pantomime will spread its beautiful scenery, dazzling marches, and dainty ballets before a crowded audience.

PALACE THEATRE.

"Peg o' My Heart," with Sara Allgood to charm successive audiences with her musical voice and Irish brogue in the witty, girlish prattle of that clever little heroine, will be performed at the Palace Theatre next Thursday (matinee), in aid of the Anzac Fund (for which the whole of the J. and N. Tait Company have generously given their services), as well as this afternoon.

CRITERION THEATRE.

"On Trial," the new drama at the Criterion Theatre, is founded on a murder, and much of the interest now exciting playgoers arises from the frequent transfer of the action from the law court to the actual scene of events leading up to the murder. Miss Madge Fabian successfully heads the new combination.

LITTLE THEATRE—"THE CRITIC."

The last three nights of Houghton's clever problem play, "Hindle Wakes" are now notified at the Little Theatre, where on Wednesday next Mr. Frederick Ward will produce Richard Brinsley Sheridan's famous three-act farce, "The Critic." It is so long since "The Critic" was last staged in Australia that it must prove a novelty to the present generation of playgoers, who, however, hardly need reminding that it most amusingly burlesques a supposed tragedy in course of rehearsal. Mr. Ian Maclaren, Mr. Ward, Miss Elly Malyon, and other favourite artists of the combination will appear in Sheridan's farce, which dates back to 1779. The plan is at Paling's.

"THE MERCHANT OF VENICE."

The third production of the Shakespeare season at the new Adelphi Theatre will be made to-night, when "The Merchant of Venice" will be played. Allan Wilkie will appear as Shylock, and Frediswyde Hunter-Watts as Portia, with Edward Landor as the Duke, John Cosgrove as Antonio, Walter Hunt as Bassanio, Robert Faulkner as Gratiano, Fred. Kehoe as the Prince of Morocco, Colville Dunn as Lorenzo, Walter Champney as Launcelot Gobbo, Miss Elwyn Harvey as Jessica, Miss Valentine Sidney as Nerissa, and P. V. Scully as Tubal. The plan is at Nicholson's.

TIVOLI THEATRE.

This afternoon and evening the new Easter attractions at the Tivoli will include Marie King Scott, "that country girl," Menetti and Sidelli, new style knockabouts, Cardo and Noll, operatic soprano and tenor, the Three Kundles in a sensational tight-wire act, Jack Bornhold and Company in a dramatic novelty, Gardner and Revere, specialists in modern whimsy, Ula, the miniature Genee, Violet Trevenyon, Ben Linn, and other artists.

THE DANDIES' GARDEN THEATRE.

Mr. Edward Branscombe announces the last eight nights of his Green Dandies Company at the Garden Theatre, Bayswater-road, after a season of over 30 weeks, and so that the closing performance shall befit the occasion two additional comedians, Messrs. Harry Webster and H. N. Gregory, from the Orange Dandies, will make their debut on Monday night. During the next week the programme will be varied each evening, and will be augmented by special request items.

MISS TEMPE PIGOTT.

Miss Tempe Pigott, who has played cleverly many character parts at the leading playhouses during the past few years, and is now doing good work at the Little Theatre as the mother of the rebellious Fanny in "Hindle Wakes," is leaving for America on May 10. Accordingly, a number of artists associated with her, both under the Buckler-Paget and Hugh Ward managements, and outside friends will make her a farewell presentation after next Thursday's matinee at the Little Theatre.

THE BIRTH OF A NATION.

The furnace of affliction through which the peoples of the North and South passed before they were finally welded into the United States of America is marvellously suggested in D. W. Griffiths' famous film at the Theatre Royal. The thrilling landscape views of terrible battle scenes, with shells bursting over the troops as they charge, the peaceful glimpses of stately homes in Carolina, the love-story of "the little colonel," and the historic detail of the assassination of President Lincoln at Ford's Theatre are all vividly shown with explanatory letterpress. Mr. Slapoffski conducts a large and artistic orchestra in beautiful music.

WIRTH'S HIPPODROME.

During Easter Wirth's Hippodrome was packed to the doors at each performance, the splendid new building thus proving a veritable "circus de luxe," and in every way a popular place for amusement-seekers. Capt. Holling's performing seals are by far the cleverest seals that have been seen in Australia; and the Riogoku family of Japanese acrobats are brilliant in their acrobatic and risley work. Miss May Martin Wirth excels in the dainty finish of her equestrian feats in the novelty scena of the Royal Wirth Family, "A Circus Modern." A matinee is announced for to-day.

HOSPITAL BENEFIT RECITAL.

To-night in St. James's Hall the students of the School of Elocution (assisted by their principals, Mr. and Mrs. Douglas Ancelon) will give a costume dramatic recital for the benefit of Sydney Hospital. Scenes will be played from "Romeo and Juliet," "Antony and Cleopatra," and "Leah the Forsaken." Ogilvie's "The Australian," and a dramatic episode, "The Shooting of a German," will be included. Torzillo's Orchestra will play.

MR. WILLIAM HOLMAN'S LECTURE.

On Monday evening next at the Conservatorium Mr. William Holman will repeat by special request his lecture on elocution, which will again include illustrative recitals, both grave and gay, including such songs without music as "The Message," "The Sailor's Grave," the prologue to "I Pagliacci," and "The Vicar of Bray," as well as excerpts from "Hamlet" and other plays.

MASSED BAND PERFORMANCE.

On Tuesday evening next a new bandstand will be opened in Kensington Reserve, and to celebrate the occasion a massed band performance by the Police and State Military Bands will be given. Advantage will be taken of this to make a collection on behalf of the local organisation of the Hospital Saturday Fund.

CHESTERVILLE SCHOOL CONCERT.

On Saturday evening next the Chesterville School of Music will give a students' recital and concert at St. James's Hall, when an attractive programme will be submitted, and souvenir portraits of Lieut. F. W. J. L. Pople will be presented. The plan is at 227 Cleveland-street.

MISS STELLA KINGSBURY'S RECITAL.

Miss Stella V. Kingsbury's pupils will give their annual elocutionary recital on Wednesday, May 10, when Miss Vida Sternlake, Miss Sophia Francis, and Mr. Cyril Monk will be the assisting artists. The plan is at Paling's.

MR. C. MURRAY-GIBBES' CONCERT.

Mr. C. Murray-Gibbes will give a popular concert at St. James's Hall on Thursday, May 11, assisted by Ella Goodman, Fk. Whitlow, Chas. Philip, Vern Barnett, Harry Stone, and Sid Macdonald, when he will sing ballads by Tosti, Lohr, and Adams, and his own "A Red Rosebud."

MISS ALLAN'S RECITAL.

Miss Robina Allan gave an invitation entertainment at St. James's Hall on Thursday, when she recited her own touching lyrics, "Peace" and "Her Gift," and was warmly applauded. A number of young people brightly contributed songs and dances. Mr. Sid Macdonald was the leading artist on the musical side, and Misses Mary Murphy and Elsie Gordon were also successful. The programme included Clarence Lee's sketch, "Gertie's Glad Eye," by Misses Gladys Freidman, Essie Patterson, Sydney Stammer, and Mr. Harry Martell. Miss Ada Duggan was the accompanist. Mrs. Sheehan's pupils also assisted.

"HOW AUSTRALIANS FIGHT."

Dr. Nash, M.L.C., who has not long returned from the seat of war, is announced to deliver an address in the Unitarian Church, Liverpool-street, on Tuesday evening, the subject being, "How Australians Fight." His remarks will be supplemented by a number of specially prepared lantern views.

THE JEWISH "KING LEAR."

At the Repertory Theatre on Saturday next Strusin's Operetta and Dramatic Company will give a special benefit performance of Jacob Gordyne's Yiddish version of "King Lear" in aid of the relief fund of the Jews in the Russian war zone. This is described as an interesting modernised version of the original. The plan will open at Anderson's, 194 Pitt-street, on Monday.

THE MAX SELINSKY CONCERTS.

Mr. Max Selinsky will be introduced by Messrs. J. and N. Tait at St. James's Hall on Saturday evening, May 13, and a matinee will also be given by the same artist at the Palace Theatre on May 16. Mr. Selinsky has just arrived in Australia after a successful concert tour throughout the United States and Canada, and holds the best credentials from the Imperial Opera House in Petrograd. Attractive programmes are being prepared for these concerts, the plans for which will be opened at Nicholson's on Monday, May 8.

£150 SINGING SCHOLARSHIP.

The directors of "The Theatre Magazine" have offered a singing scholarship for the New South Wales Conservatorium of Music. The amount allotted is £150, being at the rate of £50 a year for three years. Applications must be received from students not later than May 5. The scholarship is directed at the discovery of a voice suitable for stage purposes, either in grand opera, comic opera, light opera, or musical comedy. In addition to the voice, appearance and personality will be considered. Mr. Verbrugghen will be the final adjudicator.

FIFTH BRIGADE F.A. CONCERT.

A concert has been organised by Lady Maitland for May 17 at the Conservatorium in aid of the 5th Brigade Field Artillery and A.M.C. Miss Gertrude Palmer has arranged the programme, to which she will contribute, with Misses Mylor Burg, Kirkcaldie, Messrs. Stael, T. H. Kelly, Grieve, B. C., Frank Hutchens, Horace Keats, Dr. Crouch, and the Royal Sydney Apollo Club. Mrs. T. H. Kelly will recite Katherine's final speech from "The Taming of the Shrew." Mrs. Geo. Lane Mullins and Miss Annie Cook are hon. treasurer and hon. secretary respectively. Plan will open at Paling's May 8.

WEST'S PICTURES.

This afternoon and evening, at West's Glaciarium, there will be screened a special "Elaine" programme, being the "Exploits of Elaine" stories. In addition a Chaplin comedy and the Australian Gazette are listed. The Olympia will screen the fourth of the "Triangle" series—the comedy "Dizzy Heights and Daring Hearts," and the feature drama "Between Men," presenting William S. Hart and House Peters in the leads. The programme consists of the latest Australian Gazette and a cartoon, "Charlie Throws a Bull," in addition to these star films.

STAR PROGRAMMES AT WADDINGTON'S.

A stirring drama of the Dardanelles, "Murphy of Anzac," is drawing crowded houses at the Majestic and Globe theatres. This film is supported at these two theatres by a powerful Fox photo-play, "Should a Mother Tell?" At the King's Cross Kathlyn Williams is starring in a soul-stirring drama of domestic life, "Sweet Elysium." At the Grand, Alice Dovey in a military drama, "The Commanding Officer." On Monday, at the King's Cross, Globe, and Majestic Theatres little Mary Pickford will be seen in one of her finest films.

THE STRAND THEATRE.

To-day, at the Strand Theatre (next to Her Majesty's Theatre), J. C. Williamson, Limited, are presenting, by arrangement with Waddington's, Limited, Edmund Breese and Claire Whitney in a William Fox screen adaptation of Alfred Sutro's famous play "The Walls of Jericho." This powerful and enthralling story contains 212 scenes.

THE PICTURE BLOCK THEATRES.

At the Crystal Palace Theatre to-day the management are screening Billie Burke in Thos. H. Ince's Scotch comedy-drama, "Peggy." At the Lyric Theatre the programme includes the Triangle plays "Between Men" and a Mack Sennett comedy, "In His Father's Footsteps." The Empress Theatre has as its feature "Her Great Hour of Triumph," a four-reel Equitable film.

THE WHITE CITY.

The ballot on the semi-final of the beauty competition took place in the ballroom of the White City before a crowded audience on Wednesday night, with the result that candidates Nos. 1, 6, 7, 11, 12, 13, and 16 are eligible to compete in the final contest, which takes place to-night at 9 o'clock. The "Queen of Beauty" when elected will be crowned, and her maids-of-honour presented to her at the banquet. This afternoon the baby show will take place, when 220 babies will compete in four separate classes for prizes worth £25.

LATE MR. SALTWELL.

Mr. Danield Saltwell died at his residence, Victoria-avenue, Penshurst, on Tuesday last, at the age of 60 years. Deceased retired from business some years ago. He was formerly well known in commercial circles. The funeral, which took place on Wednesday at the Woronora Cemetery, was largely attended by city business men. Deceased leaves a widow and five children.

STATE TRAWLING.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE HERALD.

Sir,—In your issue of the 22nd inst. there appears a letter re the above industry, signed by "An Old Fisherman," in which he makes certain criticisms and misstatements, one of which is to the effect that deep-sea trawling will never pay, as the principal catches are confined to leather-jackets and sand flathead, which are both "bad keeping as well as bad selling fish." He also makes comments about the Thetis, which vessel was fitted out to exploit the coast of New South Wales some years ago, and I must refute certain misleading remarks which he makes about the work done by the Federal trawler Endeavour, as I was one of her original crew, and held a position in her for a period of 16 months, during which period she carried out extensive and important investigations on the coasts of New South Wales, Victoria, South Australia, and Tasmania, under the command of Captain Cartwright, and the supervision of the late Mr. Dannevig.

Commenting on the above matters, it is undoubtedly a fact, according to a recent statement made by the Auditor-General, that so far the State trawling and fishing industry has proved a financial failure, which failure possibly may be due to mismanagement in more directions than one; but I am convinced that if the industry, whether State or private, were carried out on proper commercial lines it would not only prove a great financial success, but also be a benefit to the general public in all parts of the State.

As far as the Thetis was concerned—and I think that Mr. Frank Farnell will bear me out in my statement—she was only "parish rigged," and in consequence of her not being a very suitable type of craft her investigations were carried out under difficulties. But in spite of all this she proved beyond a doubt that deep-sea trawling was a possibility on this coast.

"An Old Fisherman" makes the remark that the Endeavour was always finding "new grounds and suitable bottoms," but never got enough fish to keep a chip-potato shop going. Now, I can state positively from records that are in my possession, and which can be verified by other people in Sydney at the present time, that on many occasions the Endeavour's trawl, which was seldom down for more than an hour at a time, has brought up as much as two tons of edible and marketable fish in one haul, which, besides "leather-jackets and sand flathead," comprised many other varieties, such as perch, John-dory, whiting, flounder, skate, boarfish, cod, ling, and many other varieties too numerous to mention. The best hauls as far as variety is concerned were made on the South Coast, between Shoalhaven and Gabo Island. Scallops, which are without a rival as far as shellfish go, and which are very much appreciated in Tasmania, were brought up in the trawl in tons in certain parts of Bass' Straits, and this fact would justify anyone in fitting out suitable vessels for dredging the same.

Anyone who has read and carefully considered the late Mr. Dannevig's report on the work of the Endeavour, must realise that the trawling industry, to be a success financially, must be carried out on an extensive scale, and on similar lines to those on which it is carried out in Great Britain, and there is proof, as he states, that 100 trawlers could be successfully employed in this State alone. A fact also which does not seem to be realised to the extent that it should be, is the value of the offal and unedible fish as far as the production of oil and fertilisers is concerned.

That splendid trawling grounds exist off our coast is a well-known fact, and the fish are there in enormous quantities, and long ago a scheme was promulgated by me for the catching and distributing of fish and the treatment of offal in this State on strictly commercial lines, which, I am confident, would prove successful in spite of the many adverse criticisms of people who are totally ignorant of the possibilities of this industry.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE HERALD.

Sir,—On reading Mr. Black's reply to an old fisherman's letter which appeared in Saturday's "Herald," on the quality of the fish caught by the State trawlers, Mr. Black states that the bulk of the fish are excellent and greatly appreciated by those who regularly purchase them. If Mr. Black thinks that stingrays, fiddlers, swordfish, leather-jackets, and sand flathead are excellent, I think he is a very poor judge, and it is a good thing that he is not a fisherman catching them; because if he waited for his returns he would wait a very long time, and as far as the regular customers are concerned, I do not think the State shops can boast of many of them. I think it is about time Mr. Black knew that one ounce of practice is worth a ton of theory, and after about nine months of practice at a loss of about £8000, it is about time to put the trawlers to more profitable use. I would suggest that Mr. Black start a State wood and coal depot; it would give a lot of employment to wood-cutters, coal-lumpers, and carters. He could then turn the leather-jacket destroyers into colliers, or, as an old fisherman suggests, turn them into metal carriers, then motorists and carters would not be crying out about the bad state of our country roads.

ADVANCE AUSTRALIA FAIR.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE HERALD.

Sir,—In reply to the letter of Mr. Robert Young re the Australian National Anthem, while all he has said in eulogy of it may be very kind, I have a letter from the author telling me how he composed it between 30 and 40 years ago. It was while he was one day at a patriotic celebration at the Exhibition Building at Prince Alfred Park listening to patriotic music of all the different nations throughout the world, and he heard not one mortal note struck by the band for Australia, who has now sent nearly 300,000 sons to the front. While Mr. P. D. McCormack was going home one night on the top of a 'bus the beautifully inspired words came to his mind and he not only composed the words but also the music. While patriotic music keeps coming and going, "Advance, Australia Fair" will live for all time. The Catholic schools were the first to sing the anthem about 25 years ago, and the late Mr. Hutchinson, bandmaster to the permanent artillery force, used to make it a practice to teach the blind institution the anthem. Also every Friday afternoon going and coming from Victoria Barracks he used to take St. Mary's Boys' Band personally and always made them play "Advance, Australia Fair" the very first piece of music. Let me say a good word for Lieutenant Bentley, who never concludes his performance without playing the Australian Anthem. It is recognised as the one and only anthem, and I hope before long the Federal Government will gazette it as the Australian Anthem.

GERMAN SPIES.

GUN-RUNNING IN CHINA.

SHELLS SEIZED.

According to advices received by the E. and A. liner Empire, which arrived from Kobe, via ports, yesterday, German spies have been particularly active of late at Shanghai, and, aided by Chinese, have been dealing extensively in gun-running, and procuring ammunition.

What was known as the Nielsen case attracted wide attention in Shanghai and Hongkong when the Empire was at the latter port. Nielsen was a supposed German spy, and a chauffeur employed by him testified before the French Mixed Court at Shanghai that he had taken to a house at 44 French Bicawei-road cases supposed to have contained 600 shells. Two hundred of these shells were found in ponds in Nielsen's gardens.

On March 25, after the discovery of the shells in Nielsen's garden, the Shanghai police seized a further eight cases of artillery shells just as they were about to be loaded on to a boat in the Soochow Creek. A Chinese sailor in full uniform was on the boat, and a constable asked him what he was doing. He replied:—"Waiting for some guns for the arsenal." At the same time a loaded cart approached drawn by a pony, and accompanied by five Chinese. Two foreigners were following the cart at a distance, and one of these turned back and made off. The other foreigner admitted to the constable that the cases in the cart contained ammunition for the arsenal. The foreigner, the Chinese, and the cart were taken to the police station.

While on the way to the police station a motor car, containing a Chinaman in naval uniform and a foreigner drove up. The foreigner presented a card bearing the name "Fritz Sommer, Vice-Consul at Tientsin." He also produced a pass for the ammunition issued by the Chinese naval authorities, which the police could not recognise, as such permits had no force in the settlement.

The two foreigners were allowed to go, but the five Chinese and the ammunition were detained. The cases were found to contain altogether 398 shells. They were of three patterns, but all of the same size. There were also 55,000 rounds of .32 automatic pistol ammunition, and 34,000 rounds for Mauser pistols. Half of the latter contained dum-dum bullets. The five Chinese were placed on their trial for being in unlawful possession of certain explosive articles within the limits of the international settlement without the order, sanction, or authority of the Consular body.

Some sensational disclosures regarding Nielsen were made at the French Mixed Court, Shanghai, on March 27, by a Miss Weinstock, alias Schwartz, who appeared on a charge of being in possession of a false passport. She stated that she had known Nielsen for six months, and had seen him every day.

Although she at first denied that she knew Nielsen was a German, she now admitted that she knew he was, and that all their conversations had been in his language. Nielsen on many occasions had lunch with the accused in her house, but he did not say much about his business. Noticing that he was always armed—he had in his possession two pistols, one large and the other small, and a dagger—the accused asked him why. He replied that he was a German. She pointed out that other Germans she knew were not armed, and Nielsen replied that his was a special case. He had important business to transact, but said he would not tell her what it was or why he was armed until the war was over.

Nielsen was in the habit of spending large sums of money. He had two motor cars and a motor boat. One evening he told accused that he was compelled to spend the night in his motor boat, having important work to do. The following day she asked him if he had completed the work he went out to do, and he replied that he had, and that he was very tired. In reply to a question as to what he had done, Nielsen said he had had to load something on board some ships in the river, and that, being too busy to do it during the day, he had been compelled to do it at night.

Nielsen, she said, was always very busy, and very mysterious in his manner. Sometimes he would tell her that he had to go in a hurry as he had to meet some people at the German Consulate; at other times it was because he had to do some work with Chinese secret agents. He was always very mysterious. During the hearing of the arms case at the International Mixed Court accused asked Nielsen if it were true that he was sending arms and ammunition to India. Nielsen told her not to believe everything that was reported, but from that time began to look anxious and perturbed.

On the day that the shells were discovered in his garden Nielsen was with the accused at 77 Rue du Consulat. While he was there someone by the name of Muller telephoned to him. As the result of the communication which he then received Nielsen became very excited, and left the place in haste, saying that he ought to go at once to the German Consulate.

Nielsen had also advised accused not to travel by the steamer Empress of Russia, as he had an idea that the ship would meet with disaster. He had a presentiment that many ships would be blown up. On one occasion he had said that he would be delighted if he could blow up the British Consulate.

On March 31, at the French Mixed Court, Shanghai, M. de la Prade, the French Assessor, delivered judgment against Liu King-piao, Nielsen's chauffeur, who was charged with complicity in the storing of arms and ammunition, and Miss Emma Weinstock, charged with being in possession of a false French passport.

After an exhaustive review of the evidence, M. de la Prade found that the declarations of the witnesses called were precise, and proved the existence of an organisation whose aim was to carry disorder and destruction, notably into Siberia, at strategic points, such as railway bridges, into India and on merchant ships. Concluding, the magistrate said:—The facts of the case are of such exceptional gravity as to warrant severity on the part of the Court in dealing with Nielsen's accomplices, but, inasmuch as the persons responsible for the conception, preparation, and direction of the criminal acts in question are not before the Court, the Court has some grounds for showing clemency towards the accomplices, who have already been arrested by the police.

Liu King-piao was sentenced to six months in gaol, and Weinstock to three months in gaol, and to a fine of 2000 dollars. It was also ordered that both be put under surveillance after serving their respective sentences.

BURNSIDE HOMES.

The cottage erected and presented by the Highland Society of New South Wales to the Burnside Orphanage Homes, and which will be opened by Lady Helen Munro Ferguson this afternoon, is modelled in conformity with the general plan, but comprises all the improvements which experience has shown as necessary. It makes the fifth home erected at the orphanage, and is primarily designed for the orphaned children of Australian soldiers. When furnished, the building will cost £3500, the whole of which, excepting about £300, is in hand, and has been contributed by Scotsmen and the Highland Society.

TAXING AMUSEMENTS.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE HERALD.

Sir,—One only voices the opinion of the sane when he says that at such a time as this it is intolerable that there should be found those who indulge in amusement for amusement's sake. It is unnecessary to add that for the worker recreation is an essential, and so far as amusements serve such an end they are healthful. There are, however, those "who must be amused." I wish to put a suggestion. Why not tax such? It would be easy. I should think. Take, for example, picture shows. That they are in general not only useless but pernicious seems to be admitted (vide "The Individual Delinquent," Healy's, 225 and 226). Every person who resorts to such could be taxed. Tax at the rate of 3d per head; make the management responsible, and to account daily, say, to the local council clerk, in the country towns, and the deputies in larger centres. This could safely, inexpensively, and accurately be done, using turnstiles at the entrance for checking the numbers. The same applies to horse races, but put, say, 1/ per head in their case; and in the case of theatres 3d, country shows, say, 1d.

A COMPLAINT OF RUDENESS.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE HERALD.

Sir,—I was desirous of booking three berths in the Brisbane Mail Limited for Wednesday next, May 3. I rang up from Manly this morning, and was informed that the berths would be reserved for us, arranging to come in and pay for them in the afternoon. I went to Challis House, where I was treated with extreme rudeness, being simply told they knew nothing about it, and no effort was made to help me in any way. The incivility was most uncalled for. I would like to know, Sir, if this is the usual treatment given to strangers in Sydney. I can assure you such is not the case in Melbourne.

LANGER OWEN.

THE WEATHER.

Storm influence is gradually withdrawing from the south-east of Australia, and winds and seas in Bass Straits have moderated considerably, but, as a cause of rainfall, the disturbance is still effective, and produced light falls fairly generally in Southern Victoria and South-western Tasmania. Further north, however, in the Murray Valley, and practically throughout New South Wales, dry conditions prevail, and 5 points at Euston and 1 at Gabo Island were the only falls of rain reported.

Except for fresh westerly winds at places along the coast, remarkably calm weather is being experienced in New South Wales, and this circumstance, combined with the free radiation made possible by cloudless skies, favoured the occurence of low temperatures in many parts of the State. Early yesterday morning the mercury receded to 4 degrees below freezing point at Murrurundi and Jerry's Plains, in the Hunter and Manning Division, and frosts were numerous in the highlands; fogs occurred at several places in Riverina.

There is yet no sign of the development of any storm over New South Wales, and fine weather is expected generally; more frosts are likely inland.

In Sydney the spell of ideal weather continued throughout yesterday. The minimum thermometer registration (49.7 degrees occurred at 6.30 a.m.; temperature rose to 65.7 degrees at 1 p.m., and the relative humidity was then 52 per cent.

FLOWER SHOW.

The fourth annual autumn show of the Liverpool Horticultural Societies was held in the local town hall on Thursday. Mr. W. Pockett, of Canterbury, Victoria, showed a fine display of 15 chrysanthemum blooms for next season's market, and a non-competitive exhibit from the Liverpool State Hospital, in choice flowers, was greatly admired, and given an award of merit. In section A (chrysanthemums), Mr. G. Witcher (Liverpool) secured 12 first prizes, Messrs. G. Cooper and J. Robinson being second. C. Mapstone was first in the pot-grown variety, and J. Jones, jun., won the six single chrysanthemum prize. G. Witcher was awarded first for the champion chrysanthemum in the show, and won the special champion prize for a similar exhibit. J. Robinson won with a William Turner bloom for the largest bloom in the show. In cut flowers J. Jones, jun., H. Campbell, L. H. Kemster, Mrs. G. H. Whitfield, secured the majority of the prizes, and C. Mapstone won for several exhibits of dahlias, including the champion. A. Surties won for a fern exhibit.

SPORTING REQUISITES WANTED.

There are at the present time a number of Queenslanders belonging to the 5th Field Artillery Brigade stationed at the Addison-road camp, Marrickville, and the men are badly in need of boxing gloves and other sporting requisites. Being, in the majority of cases, without friends in Sydney, their adjutant appeals to the public to send anything in the nature of sporting requisites along to him, addressed to the Adjutant, 9th F.A. Brigade, Addison-road, when he will acknowledge receipt of same.

PATRIOTIC FUNDS.

A department of the Red Cross Society in Sydney that is likely to be of considerable importance in the future is that connected with the supply of spinning wheels. This branch was started last September, and has headquarters at 255A George-street. The Worsfold machine has been handed over to the Red Cross Society for its sole use during the war. The society is now at liberty to have the wheels made where it pleases. Already a dozen have been purchased, and these are being sold at £3/10/. It is estimated that by the use of these wheels the Red Cross knitters will be able to obtain all the wool they require at half the price they now pay in the shops. Instructions are to be sent to the country, and the first of these leaves on Tuesday for the Northern Rivers, with a number of spinning wheels. Mrs. Blaxland is in charge of the department, and there are about 50 pupils being taught in the city, under the direction of Misses Chisholm and J. Chisholm, of Goulburn. An unlimited supply of carded wool is now assured to carry on the work.

Lieutenant L. B. Jackson, writing to his wife at Mosman, says:—"We got a lot of Christmas cases from the Red Cross Association in Cairo. The girls in Australia are certainly making sacrifices for us. I am sure they are repaid for all by the way our fellows appreciate the gifts. It is quite a sight to see the expressions on some of the fellows' faces when they open their parcels."

Lady Helen Munro Ferguson has consented to address a meeting of the representatives of the Voluntary Aid Detachment on Tuesday at the Little Theatre, Castlereagh-street. The theatre and orchestra are being lent to the Red Cross Society by Mr. Frederick Ward. Commandants are requested to send in the number of aids attending the meeting to 4 Bridge-street. The members of the general committee are invited to be present at this meeting.

MELBOURNE, Friday.

An exhibition of antique craft work at Federal Government House, in aid of the Red Cross funds, was opened to-day by the Governor.

THE SECRET OF SUCCESS IN LIFE is to be ready when opportunity comes.
The opportunity for young women is here now.

Never since girls were first employed in business has there been such a demand for competent Typists as at present. During 22 years' experience Mr. Stott has never had such difficulty in providing sufficient operators to fill the large number of positions offered his students.

Let us train your daughter so that she may command a good salary. Do not send her to business without a proper training to swell the ranks of the unskilled.

When ready the Underwood Typewriter Free Employment Department will find her a position.

Day Classes reserved for young ladies.

THERE IS ALWAYS ROOM FOR IMPROVEMENT,

but there is not always the WILL to improve. There are hundreds of men and women who are thoroughly discontented with their present positions, and who wish most earnestly for improvement. But there is a tremendous gulf between "wishing" and "willing," which they do not seem able to bridge.

WHY NOT WILL TO IMPROVE?

Make up your mind that you will use your best endeavours to improve your position. Don't be discouraged by difficulties that are more apparent than real. One thing you lack before any great advance can be made—that is TRAINING.

Just consider what a difference training will make in your life—it will enable you to lift the obstacles out of your path—it will give you power to utilise all your dormant faculties—it will give you a store of knowledge, and the ability to apply that knowledge to your advantage. Not only will training mean a better position and a larger income, but it will give you a wider outlook and a keener vision, and life will be brighter and happier. Now, don't you think training is worth while?

ECONOMY IN TEA.

By economy in tea we do not mean buying a cheaper tea than you have been hitherto using. We mean buying a tea which goes farther, is more satisfactory, more pure than any you can buy at the same price elsewhere, and that is our YELLOW LABEL TEA at 1s 8d.

This YELLOW LABEL TEA has been specially blended by us in reply to a demand for a good full-flavoured family tea, and we can confidently recommend it to all housekeepers.

WE ARE THE LARGEST GROWERS AND SELLERS OF TEA IN THE WORLD.

WE HAVE BEEN GIVEN MORE PRIZES AND DIPLOMAS THAN ALL THE TRADE PUT TOGETHER.

The drinking water in every country where Lipton's Tea is sold has been specially analysed, so that we know what to blend for each different country.

Try a lb. of our YELLOW LABEL 1s 8d TEA, using a little less than you have been in the habit of doing with an inferior tea, and we feel confident we shall not only obtain but retain you as a permanent customer.

THE FACT AND TRUTH ON ELECTROLYSIS

FOR THE REMOVAL OF SUPERFLUOUS HAIRS.

THERE IS ONLY ONE WAY,

and, as many Ladies may have a wrong impression of the above, I will endeavour to give them a correct one.

THE TERM ELECTROLYSIS means the application of an electric current to remove or destroy by electro-chemical means any growth or tissue with which it is brought in contact, and the process takes place by forming a chemical action under the skin. It is conveyed to the parts by an electrode and needle holder. When the needle is injected into the follicle of the

it decomposes, and after a few seconds the hair is removed with the root attached. It cannot grow again when removed by an expert, but if people work with a reduced current there will not be sufficient power to destroy the follicle, and the skin only will be affected.

It is similar to trying to kill the nerve of a tooth without sufficient dressing being used; only the top of the nerve is affected, and you will receive complications.

SO BE WARNED, and make quite sure about a cure before you have superfluous hairs removed.

FOR SIXTEEN YEARS

I have practised on thousands of Women WITHOUT FAILURE, and have also spent time and money in investigating all kinds of batteries and electric means, including freezing, etc., and know that Electrolysis can only be successfully practised one way, and that way is simplicity itself. It removes the hair for ever, and leaves NO SCAR when the work is done by an experienced operator and proper care taken.

IF FAILURE CAN BE PROVED

by any of my patients treated, or about to be treated,

ONE HUNDRED POUNDS

MOLES OF ALL KINDS,

which are now looked upon as a blemish, and not an enhance to beauty, can be removed in one treatment.

FACE MASSAGE.

The natural way to prevent wrinkles is to help nature. This I do by proper manipulation and massage, and claim to give you a healthy clear complexion, thereby removing all blemishes.

LADIES ONLY TREATED.

NETTOYER CREAM FOR FRECKLES

NETTOYER FACE CREAM

prevents wrinkles and clears the skin. It is a different cream to above. Only 4/6. Posted 5/.
